French Fears Of Nazi Push Into Holland Are Growing

Telephone Lines Between Berlin, Low Countries Cut For Several Hours

Paris, Oct. 27.—While the French cabinet here today was ratifying the Anglo-Franco-Turkish pact in record time, out on the Western Front French patriots spent an exceptionally busy day today seeking information concerning the enemy plans in view of the possibility of a major German military offensive in the near future.

It is now known that along their Western frontier stretching from the North Sea to Switzerland, Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, the German commander in chief, has massed 1,500,000 men.

Mass on Dutch Border

Information available here indicates that the Germans have concentrated 32 divisions in the region around Pirmasens in the Palatinate in front of the Maginot Line. Another 18 divisions are known to be near the Dutch frontier. Furthermore, it is reported that four German army corps, each comprising three divisions, are opposite Switzerland between Basel and Lake Constance.

A German invasion of Holland is considered a possibility by French military authority because possession of this low country would serve an excellent base both for air and submarine attacks against England.

At the same time, word came from Amsterdam that the Nazis are concentrating troops along the North Sea coast from Emden past Bremen to the mouth of the Elbe River, adding to the apprehension that Germany might be planning a direct attack upon the British Isles. This view, however, was not shared by British members of the Allied high command, who discounted the possibility of a direct assault on England.

Communications Cut

Telephonic communication between Germany on the one hand and Holland and Belgium on the other was cut off today for a time and only restored towards evening. The suspicion is rife that the Germans suspended telephonic service in order to cloak their troop movements along the frontier.

[Reminding his countrymen of the horrors of the invasion of Belgium in 1914, Belgium's Foreign Minister Spaak in a radio address tonight urged Belgians to exercise greater restraint in public comment on the European war, the International News Service reported.

[Belgians must support the government's neutrality at the expense of their own convenience, he said.

[Spaak was prompted to speak by the rising tide of criticism in the German press that the Belgian press and public are "unneutral."]

Patrols Active

["Germany will have to consider whether the Belgian attitude can be regarded as neutral." The reason for this warning, the radio declared, is the appearance in the Belgian press of "anti-German propaganda, which, of course, is paid for with French and British money."—Editor's note.]

Dies Notifies Roosevelt He Will Carry On

President Deplores Publication of Peace League List as 'Sordid'

Replying directly to criticism by President Roosevelt, Chairman Dies of the House committee investigating un-American activities yesterday avowed his intention to expose Communists whom he "knows" to be filling key Government positions.

The President had characterized as a "sordid procedure" publication by the committee of the names of 563 Government officials and employes accused of being on the "membership and mailing list" of the American League for Peace and Democracy.

The committee has branded the league as a Communist "front" organization.

"Nothing Will Deter Me"

Addressing the Federation of Women's Clubs in New York, Dies said:

"I know the Federal Government has Communists in key positions, and nothing will deter me from exposing them to the people."

Other developments were:

Renewed debate broke out in the House over the propriety of the committee's action when Representative Hoffman, Michigan Republican, announced he had introduced a bill to prohibit payment of Government funds to employes belonging to Communist or Communist-affiliated organizations.

Dr. Harry F. Ward, of New York, national chairman of the league, declared in Philadelphia that if Dies "will waive his Congressional immunity we'll slap a libel suit on him."

President Declines Comment

The President's remark was made at his press conference. He said he had not read enough of the details of this "sordid procedure" (meaning publication of the names) to comment on it.

Asked whether he would like to specify just what he regarded as

Pope Assails Totalitarian Regimes

Copyright by New York Times.

Castel Gandolfo, Oct. 27.—A powerful attack on totalitarianism and the evils which he considers it has brought on the world, was made by Pope Pius XII in his first encyclical issued here today. In this document, His Holiness raised the banner of totalitarian Christianity against totalitarian paganism which idolizes purely human values and against atheism which denies the existence of God.

Presenting a vision of contemporary life as devastating as any of the Old Testament prophets could have made, the pontiff proclaimed his determination to step forward boldly into "the immense vortex of errors and anti-Christian movements" and to fight the enemies of the church, which defends the rights of the individual and the family against state autonomy. In his own words, he spoke today as "one of those who make up the church militant."

Racism, the violation of treaties, recourse to arms, the forcible transfer of populations, the destruction of Poland—these and many principles dear to Fascism were condemned. Against these were placed the ideals of Christianity whereby the individual is the end and the state the means, in which Christian solidarity opposes "the individual and collective egoisms," and "the rights peculiar to the family" are respected, in which the individual conscience is "sacred and inviolable" and nations live in "the unity of a supra-national society."

Racism Denounced

Never once were words like "socialism, fascism, nazism, racism" used. But the movements and doctrines which they represent were attacked in unmistakable terms.

It is Germany which stands condemned above any country or any movement in this encyclical—the Germany of Hitler and National Socialism. For Italy there are affectionate words to soften the blow against totalitarianism. In Germany the state has invaded all fields of morals, the pontiff implied, whereas in Italy it has only invaded those of racism and education.

The Pope stressed at the begining that this was not "a full statement of a doctrinal stand to be taken in the face of the errors of today." But it is simply "some fundamental observations." Therefore the faithful in Germany are not asked to turn against their rulers, though the state which they obey is so bitterly condemned. In Vatican quarters this is considered as an explicit indication that Pius intends to convoke an ecumenical council in Rome when the war is over to compile a syllabus containing a complete definition of all the "errors of our times."

Democrats and liberals throughout the world will surely rejoice at this message not because their political theories are supported but because their enemies are attacked. Indeed, much of the language used has striking similarities to that employed by British Prime Minister Chamberlain, French Premier Daladier and President Roosevelt in condemning those activities of Hitlerism which have led to the present war.

Envoy Protests Failure to Give Assistance; Ship Ordered to Sail

By William V. Nessly.
Post Staff Writer.

The United States Ambassador to the Soviet Union, Laurence A. Steinhardt, "vigorously" expressed to the Soviet government "indignation" at the withholding of information from him regarding status of the American steamer City of Flint, captured by a German warship and held for several days in the harbor of Murmansk, Russia.

He "formally demanded" that the ship and its cargo be turned over to the American crew and be permitted to depart, he reported to the State Department last night.

In reply, he was told by Vice Commissar of Foreign Affairs Potemkin that the ship had been ordered to depart under the same conditions as those of her entry into Murmansk harbor, with both the German prize crew and the American crew aboard and with the cargo intact.

The Russian decision is "final," and based on Moscow's construction of international law, Steinhardt was told.

Berlin Says Ship Sailed

Steinhardt's report indicated that the City of Flint might still have been at Murmansk at the time he filed his report, though dispatches on Thursday night said the ship already had left Russian territory, with the status of the American crew and cargo a mystery.

The Ambassador said he again was endeavoring to complete a telephone connection with Capt. Joseph Gainard, of the City of Flint, at midnight, Moscow time, which would have been 4 p. m. yesterday here.

[At the same time an Associated Press dispatch from Berlin said reports there were that the captured American ship was making "a precarious voyage down the North Sea toward Hamburg in possession of a German crew."

[Another dispatch from Oslo, Norway, said there were unconfirmed reports at Bergen that the German crew would land the City of Flint's American crew there.—Editor's note.]

Failed to Reach Captain

Earlier yesterday Steinhardt reported to the department that twice up to 3 p. m. yesterday (7 a. m. here) he had succeeded in getting through to Murmansk by telephone but that he had failed to establish contact with Capt. Gainard, despite assurances that arrangements had been made in advance for the connection at an agreed time.

This created considerable skepticism here regarding the impression in Moscow that the Flint was still at Murmansk while the Ambassador was being assured its captain would

Vice President Garner (left) and Senator Tydings, of Maryland, express their joy over the Senate's vote yesterday to repeal the embargo against sale of arms to warring nations

Nazis Say Senate Vote 'May Hurry Us'

Members of House Begin to Arrive for Publicity Sunbath

By James D. Secrest.

House members who have been in hibernation for the last month while the Senate talked about the neutrality bill, began drifting back to the Capitol yesterday in anticipation of their brief appearance in the sunlight of publicity next week.

Most of the men, who have been back home patching up their political fences or just resting, are expected to arrive just a few minutes before the Speaker calls the House to order Monday. The handful of faithfuls and those who lived too far away to return home will be there as a matter of habit.

Yesterday saw the last free-for-all speaking foray as 12 members talked for the Record and home consumption before a small and bored audience. The sort of thing has been going on for weeks to while away the time.

The handling of the neutrality bill in the House will be entirely different from the procedure in the Senate. It will be much shorter and, probably, louder and funnier.

Under Senate rules, the senators may talk so long as they wish, and often do, unless they agree unanimously to limit themselves. The House members have no such privilege; they talk only so long as the majority leadership as represented in the Rules Committee lets them.

As against four weeks of debate

Berlin, However, Says Repeal of Embargo Was Not a Surprise

By the United Press.

Berlin (Saturday), Oct. 28.—Sources close to the Wilhelmstrasse, commenting early today on the United States Senate's passage of the neutrality bill said, "This might cause us to hurry up."

Official quarters said there probably would be no comment until the bill also passed the House of Representatives.

Quarters close to the Wilhelmstrasse stated, however, they were not surprised at the Senate's approval, which had been a factor with which Germany has had to reckon since the neutrality debate opened.

London, Oct. 28.—The foreign office declined to comment on the Senate vote on the arms embargo, but the morning papers made up for official discretion by spreading the news in large type across their front pages.

"The United States to sell arms to the Allies," declared the Express, adding "Big Roosevelt Victory means 300 planes may leave next week."

"U. S. votes arms for Allies," announced the Daily Sketch, explaining, three pages later, that the bill must still pass the House.

"Allied victory in United States" boasted the Daily Mirror.

The London Times and the Daily Telegraph were more subdued, but from reading the widely circulated national papers, one could only gather that the Senate's action was a victory for the Allies.

The sketch explained that the cash and carry clause worked to the advantage of Great Britain and France, who control the seas, and then said: "Thus the aggressors

House Expected to Consider Measure on Tuesday; Connally Offers Preamble, Withdraws It After Personal Exchanges

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The Senate last night by a vote of 63 to 30 approved the Administration's neutrality bill, repealing the arms embargo and setting up a comprehensive "cash and carry" system barring credit to belligerents and rigorously restricting American ship movements to warring countries.

Passage came at 8:45 p. m. after four weeks of almost continuous debate. Preserved almost unchanged from concerted opposition attacks, the measure was dispatched to the House, which is expected to consider it Tuesday. House leaders reiterated their claims of a narrow but "safe" majority for the bill.

A few moments before final action, the Senate voted 60 to 33 to repeal the arms embargo by rejecting an isolationist amendment to continue the existing arms ban.

Nerves strained by weeks of debate snapped in bitter personal exchanges as the Senate drove into night session. Immediately on passage, the "high plane" debate rule under which the Senate had conducted neutrality proceedings was completely swept into discard. A heated row broke around an eleventh-hour effort by Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, to attach a preamble to the already-approved measure.

Connally's Preamble Blocked

Connally, barred from offering the preamble until the measure was passed, offered a policy declaration stating it as the desire of this country to preserve its neutrality, but asserting its intention to waive no rights under international law.

Calling it a "stump speech" and a "misconstruction" of the act, Senators Clark, of Missouri, and Wheeler, of Montana, led an attack on the preamble, and Connally lashed back with a vehement denunciation of what he termed opposition "hooey" and "flub dub." The Texan finally withdrew the proposal, after Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, sought to amend it to "serve notice on the world" that the United States intends to keep out of all wars except those "for its own safety and defense."

At 9:40 p. m. the Senate adjourned until Tuesday, leaving the House to take up the debate that has raged since October 2.

In the final Senate count, 54 Democrats joined with 8 Republicans and 1 Independent in support of the measure, while 12 Democrats, 15 Republicans, 2 Farmer-Laborites and 1 Progressive voted "no."

Votes Are Switched

Several Senators who had voted against embargo repeal on the previous vote, swung to support of the bill on the final count. These included Senators Gillette, of Iowa, and Johnson, of Colorado (Democrats), and Reed (Republican), of Kansas. Senator White (Republican), of Maine, previously counted by leaders as a vote for the bill, voted for the embargo and against the completed measure.

Successfully repulsed by leadership forces were organized efforts to write a war referendum proviso into the bill, to substitute a tight arms embargo and a completely new bill for the Pittman measure, and to add Senators and Representatives to the Munitions Control Board.

Only minor amendments, acceptable to the Administration, were added to the measure by voice votes.

Personal Exchanges

Frequent tart personal exchanges marked the day and once Chairman Pittman, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, clashed so sharply with Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, an isolationist leader, that the chair took them from their feet. The Senate then voted to permit them to proceed in order.

Tentative House plans call for sending the Senate bill into the House Tuesday under a rule that would send it to conference with the Senate. The antirepeal bloc would be given an opportunity for a vote on instructing the House conferees to stand by the embargo. Leaders

1 Dead, 8 Hurt In Explosion on Federal Yacht

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 27 (AP).—One person was killed and eight injured today by an explosion which wrecked the interior of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey yacht Mikawe alongside a dock.

Clem Bennett, engineer, was killed. He was knocked overboard and his body recovered several hours later.

The explosion occurred as the vessel was loading gasoline from an oil truck on the dock. Lieut. Max Ricketts, commanding officer, was hurled under the dock. He suffered head injuries.

Fight of Crew Mars Voyage of 437 U. S. Refugees

New York, Oct. 27. (AP).—The St. John, last of five ships chartered by the United States Lines to return war-stranded Americans from Europe, arrived today with 437 passengers.

Capt. Frank Crosby said the trip was marred by fighting among the crew and he was forced to put several in irons while the ship was tied up in Bordeaux.

The captain said he had never seen so many men "patched up after fights," but that he would not file charges against crew members.

Here Are Salient Features Of the Neutrality Bill

By the Associated Press

Here are the salient features of the Administration neutrality bill:

Operation—Directs the President to put the act in effect when he, or Congress, finds that a state of war exists and the President determines that operation of the law is necessary to preserve the peace and security of the United States.

Arms sales—Repeals the present embargo and permits arms sales to belligerents for cash. Forbids American ships to carry arms to any belligerent port in any part of the world.

Shipping—Bars American vessels from transporting supplies or passengers to belligerent ports, with the following exceptions: Ports in the Atlantic south of the thirty-fifth meridian; New Brunswick and Nova Scotia on the Bay of Fundy; the Pacific and Indian oceans; the China, Tasman and Arabian seas, and the Bay of Bengal; permits inland transportation by rail, air or water to Canada.

Title transfer—Forbids export of any materials to a belligerent state until shipper has filed a sworn statement with port collectors that title has been transferred to some foreign government, corporation, agency or national. However, shipments to individuals or private companies at ports included within the exempted areas in the shipping section can be made on a normal trade basis, without previous

Wife of Erick Remarque Faces Deportation

New York, Oct. 27.—Mrs. Erick Maria Remarque, wife of the author of "All Quiet on the Western Front," faced deportation tonight at Ellis Island, following a hearing before a special board of inquiry, which ordered her excluded today. The Madras regime was the first to act of eight provincial governments dominated by the Congress (Nationalist) Party, whose working committee recently called on all eight to quit.

12,000 Crowd Marine Barracks For Annual Navy Day Show

Nearly 12,000 persons crowded into the little parade-ground of the Marine Barracks yesterday and saw a colorful show put on by sailors and marines in honor of Navy Day.

With fear of spies and saboteurs closing the Navy Yard to visitors, the "Devil-dogs" transferred the Navy's annual "at home" to their barracks at Eighth and I streets southeast and the 11,913 who were counted through the barracks gates pronounced the show a great success.

Highlight of the program was a sham battle in which Marines attacked a barricaded hut. Machine guns and cannon clattered and roared in a stirring simulation of war, ending in destruction of the fort by hand grenades.

Patriotic music by the Navy School Band kept the crowd beating time most of the day, but the most stirring was a presentation of "the Spirit of '76" by a drum and bugle corps.

Coastguardsmen from Lewes, Del., gave a breeches-buoy drill, showing how passengers are rescued from a sinking ship. A review by Rear Admiral George Pettengill concluded the ceremonies. Col. W. H. Ruperters was in charge of the activities.

Landon Urges More Study of Job Problem

Idleness in America Likened to 'Ruthless Force' of Dictators

By the Associated Press

Mount Vernon, Iowa, Oct. 27 (AP). Alfred M. Landon, 1936 Republican Presidential candidate, today declared unemployment in the United States has left almost as many persons homeless and hungry "as has the ruthless force of Hitler and Stalin."

At the inauguration of Dr. J. B. Magee as president of Cornell College here, Landon pointed out that Americans have watched the shifting and regrouping of European populations "with something akin to horror."

"But what of the great shifting of populaton in this country?" he asked. "A shift from steady jobs to makeshift existence in unemployment?

Demoralizing Dread

"Has not the ruthless force of economic displacement left almost as many people homeless and hungry as has the ruthless force of Hitler and Stalin? The dread of unemployment may be as demoralizing as the dread of war.

"The weakness in our system, in that part of us are living in plump comfort and part of us almost as outcasts, must not be overlooked."

Criticizing American preoccupation over the war at the expense of domestic issues, the speaker linked the hope of maintaining American democracy with the solution of economic problems.

"Until unemployment in its present magnitude is cured and the coincident breakdown of faith and the progressive growth of skepticism are cured," he said, "our country is in mortal illness."

Urges Study of Causes

Too much emphasis has been given to the problem of caring for the jobless, he added, "and not enough to the causes and cure of unemployment."

Assailing "experimental expedients such as pump priming," Landon declared national safety and individual security "rest upon engagement of the greatest number of men in private enterprises of their own."

"The waste, extravagance and political manipulation of the temporary works projects are demoralizing and deteriorating, to say the least," he continued. He scorned the suggestion, "frequently made from Washington," that a large body of unemployed is inevitable.

That idea does not take into account "American ingenuity and resourcefulness," he said.

Individual rights such as freedom of speech and worship are the first casualties of conflict, he asserted, "and we must keep out of war at every cost save that of the security of the Nation itself."

"We cannot fool ourselves with the idea that if democracy is slipping away from us at home we can recapture it on battlefields abroad."

Landon said "the right kind of leadership" will not attempt to divert our attention "from unsolved problems that contain within themselves forces destructive of our kind of civilization."

A Pair of Wide-Open Eyes See Washington

Capitol Hill was taken by Eddie Cantor for a few hours yesterday as the goggle-eyed comedian of screen and radio dropped in on Senators. Left to right—Senator Meade, Jesse Jones, Federal Loan administrator, and Cantor, who is appearing in person at the Capitol Theater, and Speaker Bankhead. Eddie put on an impromptu show for dozens of stenographers in the White House lobby later in the day when, after emerging from a call on the President, saw the crowd of girls waiting for autographs. Before they could reach him, however, Cantor stretched out on a large table in the lobby, half opened his shirt and asked if they wanted to see his operation

A.F.L. Opposes Unjustified Pay Increases

But Demands Share of Rising National Income; Attacks Price Boosts

By the Associated Press

The American Federation of Labor told its members yesterday that labor must "receive its full share of the increasing national income if recovery is to be maintained," but warned against seeking unjustified wage increases.

"Rising production means decreasing unit labor costs, enabling industry to pay higher wages," the federation said in its monthly survey of business.

"It is essential that labor receive its full share of the increasing national income if recovery is to be maintained. Wage increases must, however, be based on decreased labor costs per unit of production, for labor wants permanent gains. No general rule can be laid down for the amount of wage increase which will give labor its just share. This must be determined by examining the operating records of each company."

President Opposes Price Rise

The federation statement followed closely President Roosevelt's comment at a press conference that he thought everyone wanted a stabilized prosperity without increased prices.

The President expressed his belief when he was asked for comment at a press conference on statements by various industrialists that they preferred a steady recovery rather than a war boom. That was sort of vague, he said, offering his own thought.

The A. F. L. in its statement also urged union members to report to the federation any undue price increases in the goods they bought except in cases where prices are below production costs. There can be no excuse for large increases, the A. F. L. said, declaring that the "unavoidable sequel" of price inflation is economic collapse.

National Income Up

The "increasing national income" referred to in the A. F. L. survey was confirmed yesterday by the Commerce Department, which said Americans received $2,000,000,000 more in wages, dividends and other forms of income in the first three quarters of this year than in the similar 1938 period. The population's earnings for September were estimated at $6,012,000,000.

Prices figured in last month's gain, experts said, attributing it to increased farm income resulting from higher farm prices, higher dividends and higher industrial pay rolls.

Neutrality Fight Shifts to House

in the Senate, the House members will be lucky if they get four days. It's true that they have had as much time as they wanted for the last month to talk about neutrality, but it was to almost empty galleries and chamber.

Guards Get Ready

Next week, however, the attraction which has drawn several hundred persons to the Capitol daily will shift to the House. Capitol guards and doorkeepers were preparing for the rush of spectators yesterday although they have about 50 per cent more seating capacity than the Senate.

Admission, as in the Senate gallery, will be by card only, but the flow of visitors up to now has indicated the ease of obtaining cards if not seats. Capitol police and an occasional furtive G-man keep an eye on the crowds and now and then examine a suspicious-looking bag, frequently only to find a few sandwiches.

Easier to Hear

The House debate, from the point of view of a persistent gallery visitor, will offer little of the color or the drama of the opening and closing hours of the Senate debate. The House has no attractions that can rival the Senate's silver-tongued orators, but it has an amplification system which will carry the words of the members more distinctly to the galleries.

Many members who talked glibly of sticking to their posts through the duration of the war appear to have lost their enthusiasm now, and are looking forward to eating Thanksgiving dinner at home, whether it be on the third or the fourth Thursday of November.

Ray to Blow Up Enemy Arms Turned Over to War Department

Beam Will Explode Ammunition or Gasoline 2 Miles Away, Inventor Says; Only Trouble Is, It Needs Control

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Oct. 27.—Secret details of a "detonator" ray, declared by its sponsor to be capable of exploding gasoline and ammunition two miles away, were submitted to War Department representatives today for test and development.

The sponsor is Otto H. Mohr, Oakland, Calif., inventor and former illuminating engineer for the Interior Department.

Mohr declined to give publicly any technical details except to say the process dealt "in part" with gamma and beta rays and that, as yet, he had found no way of controlling the direction of the beam.

Rays Described

Lieut. Col. Roland W. Pinger, Army ordnance officer to whom Mohr submitted the matter, will report to the War Department.

Beta rays are streams of electrons, substantially the same as the electricity that flows through lighting and power circuits, but the term usually is applied to one of the three rays given off by radioactive substances. They cannot travel far through the air.

The gamma ray is something like the X-ray but of shorter wavelength. It is the most penetrating of the three radio active emanations. In ordinary use its range, also, is limited.

Mohr came upon the phenomenon accidentally while experimenting with one of his many inventions designed to harness the power of the sun. Its first effect, he said, was to explode a number of rifles cartridges stored nearby. He tried it on a small quantity of gasoline several hundred feet away, and the gasoline also exploded.

Television Torpedo

Chicago, Oct. 27 (AP).—Specifications for a flying torpedo operated remotely by television and "so explosive it could destroy even a large battleship," have been submitted to the War Department by the American Television Institute, U. A. Sanabria, chief of staff, disclosed today.

Sanabria, who with Dr. Lee De Forest, pioneer radio engineer, operates the institute chiefly as a training school, said the television torpedo interested Army officers at a West Point demonstration last May.

In design the flying torpedo is a small, streamlined, radio-controlled airplane, the guiding transmitter being installed in a larger plane.

"In our television torpedo," Sanabria said, "we mount an iconoscope or similar television tube, equipped with a large focusing lens which constitutes the nose piece of the plane. Now we can transmit an image through the iconoscope in the nose of the flying torpedo to the screen in the cabin of the master plane several miles in the rear."

Rep. Dies Answers Roosevelt Remark

"sordid," the President declined, explaining that he thought the thing referred to was obvious.

Dies said, in the New York speech, that he would not enter into a controversy with the President. He would not say, he added, that he regarded his "wisdom and judgment" as superior to that of the Chief Executive.

"Public Ought to Know"

"But I say to you, Mr. Franklin D. Roosevelt," he declared, "you may regard publishing the names of members of a Communist front organization as a 'sordid procedure,' but in my way of thinking if Government employes belong to organizations dominated by foreign powers they ought to be exposed, and the American public ought to know their names."

He declared the committee had evidence to convict the league in court for failure to register as an agent of a foreign government.

Bill Aimed at League

Hoffman told the House that, although his bill was drafted to cover membership in all organizations advocating overthrow of the Government by force, it was aimed directly at the league.

He criticized Representative Coffee, Washington Democrat, who launched the attack on the committee in the House two days ago on the ground that it was 'smearing characters."

Coffee, he said, twice voted two years ago in favor of publishing salary lists of persons receiving more than $15,000 a year, and also upheld the legality of sitdown strikes.

"Moral Suasion"

Representative Mason, Illinois Republican, a committee member, said the list was published at his insistence. Publication, he declared, was the culmination of a campaign of "moral suasion" designed to secure the resignation from the league of "innocent" Government employes, and to force out of the Government service those Government employes who are "not innocent."

"Regardless of what the President may say," he declared, "publication of the list was necessary to bring about the purge (in the Government) that ought to take place."

Representative Dempsey, New Mexico Democrat, committee member whose protests against publishing the lists were overruled, said that when the list was obtained it did not show the Government affiliation of the listed persons. The committee, he declared, "took it upon itself" to list positions and salaries.

"That's assassinating character," he added.

Reich to Teach Russia Secret Arms Processes

Berlin, Oct. 27.—Another installment of Germany's payment for Russia's "friendship" in the war probably will take the form of making available to the Soviet industrial processes, including those on armament, developed by German technicians in the last decade, it was indicated today following reception by Fuehrer Hitler of the Russian commercial delegation.

Neutral observers considered it highly significant that the Soviet delegation was led by Ivan T. Tevosyan, Soviet commissar for shipbuilding.

The commissar is a steel expert, a technician and an engineer. He is accompanied by Gen. Savchenkot, an expert on steel for armor plates for both naval and military uses.

U. S. Insists Latin Nations Settle Debts

$690,000,000 Bonds Now Held in This Country in Default

By Felix Cotten.

The United States Government has taken the position that Latin-American governments must attempt to settle defaulted dollar debts before plans will be drawn for large-scale new credits, it was learned yesterday.

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt said he was disappointed with the progress made by the Foreign Bondholders' Protective Council, Inc., in its efforts to make arrangements with Latin-American governments for resumption of service on defaulted debts.

The Commerce Department estimates that, at the close of 1938, $991,000,000 of South and Central American dollar bonds were held in this country, of which $690,000,000, or 70 per cent, were in complete or partial default.

Agencies Agreed

The attitude of the Administration, it was learned, is that settlement of defaulted obligations and any new program of credits to stimulate trade must go hand in hand. Federal agencies interested in the problem, which include the State and Treasury departments and the Federal Loan Agency, are said to be unanimous on this.

The war upset plans for settlement of the defaulted debts of Brazil and Columbia, which are of major importance. At the end of 1938, American investors held $298,300,000 of Brazilian dollar bonds, according to Commerce Department estimates, and this entire amount was in default. Columbia was in complete default on an estimated $128,300,000 of bonds held in this country.

Government officials are taking part in negotiations for settlement of the defaulted debts, it was revealed. This is in line with the general plan to promote trade between this country and Latin America. Unless the war should result in a boom in Latin-American trade in raw materials, however, little hope is held out for immediate adjustment of the major default cases.

Oil Seizures in Picture

So far as Mexico and Bolivia are concerned, another factor enters the picture. This is the seizure of American oil properties. There is said to be no chance that aid will be extended these governments until a satisfactory settlement of these oil seizures is made.

Administration officials are said to feel that no program of new credits could be presented to Congress with any prospect of adoption unless definite arrangements were made for clearing away the old debts.

The official attitude is that if complete resumption of service is impracticable, the debtors should be willing to discuss such terms of settlement as they can meet.

Trade Dislocated

The war has revived discussion of the question of credits to these countries. Their trade has been dislocated to some extent by the war, since they have been shut off from major European supply sources of manufactured goods and have lost important markets for their own products. They are obliged to look mainly to the United States for goods previously obtained in Europe.

There has been considerable repurchasing by Latin-American countries of bonds held by American investors at sacrifice prices, caused by default. This has caused the complaint that the issuing countries might have used dollars with which they bought up the bonds to pay interest on them.

Nazi DealReported For Soy Beans

Berlin, Oct. 27 (U.P.).—German spokesmen said tonight they were informed from Dairen, South Manchuria, that Russia has agreed to transport 1,000,000 tons of soy beans from Manchukuo to the German frontier over the Soviet railways.

If correct, the report means Germany has solved an important part of her food problem, which admittedly is acute because of the Allied blockade. Germany long has been a major consumer of Manchukuo beans. Payment is made under barter arrangements provided in the Manchu-German trade treaty.

240,000 Exiles Given Homes, Says Emerson

160,000 Others in Temporary Haven Adjacent to Germany

Approximately 240,000 political refugees from Germany have found permanent homes in foreign lands, and an additional 160,000 have been given temporary asylum in countries adjacent to Germany, Sir Herbert Emerson, director of the intergovernmental committee for refugees, said yesterday.

Although the British government last July suspended Jewish immigration into Palestine, more Jewish refugees from Germany have found homes there than in any other country, he revealed.

Refugees from Germany, Jewish and non-Jewish, have been scattered throughout the earth, he declared.

70,000 Go to Palestine

The figures mentioned by him cover the period from 1933 to the present. About 70,000 Jewish refugees have gone to Palestine, he said.

Due to the appeal which Palestine makes to the Jewish race, and the success of settlement projects already established there, Sir Herbert said, "Palestine has presented less difficulty on the economic side than any other country."

He emphasized, however, that he was not speaking about the "political side." Due to troubles with the Arabs, and demands made by this element, the British government has threatened to impose a permanent ban on Jewish immigration into Palestine.

It has been estimated, Sir Herbert declared, "that 215,000 Jews from Germany, Poland, Rumania, Hungary and other countries have found homes in Palestine since 1933.

70,000 Admitted to U. S.

Next to Palestine, he said, the United States has taken the largest number of refugees from Germany. Since 1933, he estimated, 70,000 German immigrants have been admitted to this country, and of this number refugees constituted the major portion.

Under United States immigration laws, he recalled, the quota for Germany is nearly 28,000 persons annually. Since the first conference on the refugee problem in Evian, France, a year and a half ago, full effect has been given to the quota, and a large part of the refugees have been admitted during this period.

South American countries, Sir Herbert declared, have admitted about 50,000 refugees, and the British dominions and colonies 12,000 in the last two years. Between 50,000 and 60,000 have found permanent homes in adjacent European countries, he said, and of this number about 20,000 have permanently settled in England. He pointed out that Australia is to admit 15,000 refugees over a period of three years.

Roosevelt Sees Sir Herbert

He told of the tribunals set up in England to divide into classes the 30,000 German refugees given temporary haven there. Only a small percentage, he said, are being interned. The others are allowed to work, but these will be divided into two groups. One will consist of those granted full freedom, and the other will be subject to certain restrictions. Similar procedure, he said, is being followed in France.

President Roosevelt gave a tea at the White House yesterday afternoon to Sir Herbert, Lord Winterton, committee chairman, and other officers of the Intergovernmental Committee. The group has concluded its work here.

Mme. Evanti Sings At Church Here

Mme. Lillian Evanti, coloratura soprano, whose South American tour ended recently due to the war, appeared last night on the homecoming and harvest-gathering program of the Nineteenth Street Baptist Church, incident to the celebration of its hundredth anniversary.

Well received also was R. Todd Duncan, barytone, of Howard University School of Music, who starred as Porgy in the late George Gershwin's opera, "Porgy and Bess."

An address of welcome was made by Gaston Malachi. B. M. Corbiere furnished a violin solo. Other music was played by the Washington Concert Orchestra. Speakers included the Rev. Walter H. Brooks, pastor of the church, and the Rev. David C. Lynch.

Two Citizens Sue To Oust Gov. Long

New Orleans, Oct. 27 (AP).—Two citizens sued late today to oust Gov. Earl K. Long, four months in office, and his attorney general, Lessley P. Gardiner, appointed Monday.

Robert O'Neal and Julia Field brought mandamus proceedings in Baton Rouge District Court to compel District Attorney Dewey Sanchez to accept an ouster suit against the Governor—which he refused to do at noontime.

District Judge Charles A. Holcombe ordered Sanchez to show cause November 13 why he should not accept the ouster suit against Long and Gardiner.

District Broker's ProbationRevoked

The Department of Justice and the Securities and Exchange Commission reported yesterday that Federal Judge Charles [illegible] Des Moines, Iowa, directed that William MacNinc, of Washington, serve a sentence of five years' imprisonment in Leavenworth Penitentiary.

The court stated that false statements made by Maurice in his broker-dealer registration under the securities exchange act of 1934 was sufficient reason to revoke the probation upon which he was placed in April, 1938, after a plea of guilty to a mail fraud charge in Des Moines.

Woodring Tells Army to Help Allay War Fear

'Amateur Strategists' Talk of Inevitability False, He Says on Radio

By John G. Norris.

Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring last night condemned those who "pronounce the inevitability of our entrance into this second World War" and called upon every member of America's military establishment to help convince the Nation of the contrary.

"We must not stand idly by while amateur strategists pronounce war's inevitability," he declared. "As a nation we are not prepared for the formation of expeditions to wage offensive war, we do not wish to prepare to wage offensive war, we see no inevitable war, offensive or defensive."

The War Secretary spoke at the annual dinner of the National Guard Association in Baltimore. In his address, made public here, he charged that those who create such war-inevitability psychology "arouse suspicion among our more gullible citizens toward the efforts of the Federal Government to assure complete neutrality."

Calls War Talk "False"

"Those who preach the inevitably of war," he said, "are prone to interpret every purely precautionary and defensive measure taken by the Government as likely—if not as deliberately intended—to lead the American people into war.

"They paint the wholly false picture of American business and industry, in a blind greed for profit, intentionally attempting to involve the United States in the present European conflict."

Declaring that every item in the current Army expansion program has but one object in view, the preservation of peace, Woodring added "there is no man in public life today who is more determined than your Secretary of War that your sons and my sons shall not march forth to war."

He urged that the concentration of troops in the South for corps maneuvers this winter be extended "into a continuous revolving program covering the next two or three years."

"We must," Woodring said, "from time to time concentrate our defensive units to practice the plays of the team. Otherwise, we expend our efforts and our moneys on the forging of strong links for an unlinked chain—and, unlinked, have no chain at all."

337 Reserve Officers Called

The program for rearmament is costly, he said, but added:

"Not a doubt is there in my mind that the American people—be the financial cost what it may—will render whole-hearted support to their Government in its efforts to maintain neutrality and assure complete security.

"Every man and every dollar necessary for the defense of America, but not one man, not one dollar, to fight the wars of other nations."

The War Department, meanwhile, revealed that the President has authorized the Army to call 337 additional Reserve officers to extended active duty, under provisions of the Thomason act. This will bring the number of lieutenants serving with combat units to 1,000, the limit under the act.

At the same time, President Roosevelt stated he did not expect to consider an expanded national defense budget until February. He told a press conference that so far he has only considered the regular War and Navy budgets and has not reached the question of new construction or new personnel.

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Oct. 27.—High Army officials opened fire on United States' war preparedness today, one asserting "we are not even ready for defense," and another declaring the Army has a lack of "seasoned fighters."

Lieut. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, commander of the First Army, told the National Guard Association that "recent maneuvers revealed our forces to be lacking in almost every essential except energy, aggressiveness and intelligence."

"We are not ready for a war," he said. "We are not even ready for defense."

New Maneuvers Cited

Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff of the United States Army, said this winter's concentration of 75,000 Regular Army troops in the South would be a "practical war college."

Comparing the Army to a football team that has never played a game, he said "with the exception of a few soldiers who participated in the World War we have few seasoned fighters in our Army. Because of a lack of funds we have been forced to throw passes in a chicken coop."

The maneuvers this winter, he said, "will be the first time that the Army has gone through all of the steps and operations essential to modern warfare."

National Guard officers will be given a chance to train with the regular units during the concentration, Gen. Marshall said.

Effort to Kidnap Ruth Judd Told

Phoenix, Ariz., Oct. 27 (AP).—Dr. Louis J. Saxe, superintendent of the Arizona State Hospital for the Insane, today charged that a former attache "attempted to kidnap" Winnie Ruth Judd, trunk murderess, last July.

The mad slayer fled from the woman's ward of the hospital Tuesday night and remained at large today. Dr. Saxe hinted the kidnap attempt might have been a political move to embarrass him.

Y. C. White, secretary to the Governor, said he believes the one-time "Tiger Woman" had asistance both inside and outside the institution.

Halloween Queen and 4,000 Witches to Parade As Police Get Set to Pounce on Pranksters

Largest Curbside Crowd Expected Since British Royal Visit; All Leaves Of Peace Officers for Tuesday Are Canceled

The 1939 streamlining here of the old Druid custom of lighting bonfires for protection against ghosts is apt to bring the largest number of people to the curbsides since the British Queen passed by under her parasol.

The Greater National Capital Committee of the Board of Trade, sponsor of the Halloween parade Tuesday night, expects 200,000 persons to watch the march of 4,000 ghosts, witches, Halloween Queen, 21 inated figures, 15 bands, six marshals, commercial floats and the great drift of frolickers who always tailoff from parades.

Meanwhile, county sheriffs hereabouts are organizing against depredation. Montogmery County peace officers said that innocent fun is all right. However, all police leaves for Halloween night were canceled and both adult and juvenile frolickers will be prosecuted if they overdo things. From Fairfax and Arlington Counties, Va., came similar warnings.

Greenbelt and Glen Echo are using psychology, banding children in groups to enforce the peace—or nipping the prank in the prankster. The schoolboy patrol at Greenbelt heads the vigilantes, but the police force there will be increased, too. A children's Halloween government will function at Glen Echo.

The Agriculture Department says that the supply of pumpkins is large this year, as always.

The Washington police have not as yet issued their manifesto, but traditional punitive measures will be taken against removers of furniture from front porches, removers of gates, window soapers, tire deflaters, doorbell ringers, those who turn in false fire alarms, who throw rocks at houses, who disturb the peace in general.

Tuesday night the Tau Phi Sorority at Glen Echo will give a break to men who bring lightweight girls to the dance in the Fire Hall. Stags will pay $1.00 to dance, but gents bringing ladies will pay nothing themselves except 1 cent a pound for each pound the girl weighs.

The same night the Chevy Chase Citizens Association will corral 4,000 children of the prank age into the Woodrow Wilson and E. V. Brown School auditoriums and entertain them with movies. Beginning at 7 p. m., the free show will continue to 11. The cost is $200, which the community regards as a saving.

Nine hundred members of the Central Branch, Boys Club of Washington, will engage in pie eating contests, peanut races, skits and singing at the club Tuesday night.

Tommy's Girl To Patch It Up, Father Thinks

"That Other Woman," Not Elinor's Cooking, Is Blamed for Rift

It wasn't the cooking, but "that other woman," that broke up Elinor Troy's $10,000 romance with Tommy Manville after a five-day night-club whirl with the happy-go-lucky asbestos heir in New York, it appeared yesterday.

So said her father, Eric Edmonston, antique dealer, of 11 N street northwest; but he doesn't think the rift will last. "Elinor's all right," he said. "I kind of look for it to blow over pretty soon."

If Tommy Manville wants a wife that can cook, said Edmonston, "he should have married Elinor's mother. She's the best cook I know of. She can really do things. But a man with all that money doesn't want his wife to be a servant." As for the "publicity" the dark-eyed show girl objected to in Tommy's courtship, the Edmonston's are used to that.

"I married her mother in front of 6,000 people at a food show in 1915," said Edmonston. "But I can't blame Elinor in a way—that other girl looks kind of funny to me," he added, referring to Yvonne Arden, radio singer who turned up in the midst of the romance.

"A young girl getting ready to be married doesn't have any privacy if there's another woman around," he objected.

But spats like this between his dancing daughter and the much-married millionaire are nothing new, said Edmonston. "They always patch it up again," he said.

Bolivia Banishes General Running For President

La Paz, Bolivia, Oct. 27 (AP).—Gen. Bernardino Bilbao Rioja, presidential candidate in the forthcoming general election, was expelled from Bolivia today on charges he attempted to foment a revolution.

A state of siege (modified form of martial law) was decreed this morning.

A communique issued by Col. Antenor Ichazo, chief of the army general staff, said that in view of "plotting," it had been necessary to clean up the army, and that Gen. Bilbao Rioja "had been removed from the territory of the republic."

Mrs. Caldwell To Head Project

Appointment of Katharine Caldwell as supervisor of the District writers' section of the Community Project was announced yesterday by Paul Edwards, administrator of the local WPA.

Born in Spokane, Wash., Mrs. Caldwell first entered the service of the Federal Government during the World War, serving on the staff of the Committee of Public Information under George Creel. She is better known by her pen name, Katharine Hilliker.

The writers' project is a part of the combined new $1,000,000 Community Project.

Truck Driver Held In Traffic Death

Philmore W. Frederick, 27-year-old truck driver, of Arlington, Va., was held for Police Court yesterday by a coroner's jury investigating the traffic death Wednesday of John Chase, colored, 60, of 902 Fourth street southwest.

The jury decided that Frederick was negligent when his ice truck ran over Chase in an alley alongside 1009 E street northwest.

Carolinian Heads Venereal Work

Eddie Cantor to Broadcast In Post-WJSV Safety Drive

Comedian Will Talk Tonight at 11 o'Clock; Interior Department Employe Wins First Award for Courteous Motorist

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Eddie Cantor, who probably has done more to promote traffic safety than anyone in the show business, will appear tonight on The Washington Post-WJSV safety award program. He will be heard at 11 p. m.

His Nation-wide appeal last year for the protection of youngsters on our streets and highways brought Cantor more "fan" mail than any radio broadcast he had ever done. He spoke from Hollywood to a banquet meeting of the National Safety Council held here at the Mayower Hotel.

"Never More Sincere"

"Mothers and fathers all over the country wrote me about that talk," Cantor said yesterday. "I was never more sincere in my life than in that appeal to stop the needless sacrifice of young lives."

Eddie originated one of the country's most popular safety slogans: "Children should be seen and not hurt." Safety officials from coast to coast have adopted many other Cantor sayings in their battle against careless driving.

The first Post-WJSV award for careful and courteous driving will be made tonight. The winner is Oscar L. Barker, of 621 E street southeast, an employe of the Interior Department.

Barker will receive the special safety tag issued by the Department of Vehicles and Traffic. It reads "Safety award, 1940, District of Columbia." He was nominated for the honor by Sergt. J. O. Hite, of the police traffic division.

Saves Woman, Child

Hite said he followed Barker for several blocks along Massachusetts avenue. At one point, Barker stopped his car, leaned from the window and warned motorists that a woman with a baby carriage was trapped in the center of an intersection. His warning, said Hite, probably saved the woman and child from serious injury.

Barker's traffic record was clean and Hite's nomination was approved by Inspector William E. Holmes, traffic supervisor.

Although he will make five personal appearances at the Capitol Theater today, Cantor agreed to join The Post and WJSV in the search for careful District drivers.

"It's a grand idea," said Cantor, "and I'll even cancel a scheduled call to my new grandson in Hollywood to take part."

Model Aircraft Tourney Today

The twelfth model aircraft tournament, sponsored by the District of Columbia Model Aircraft League, will be held at Baileys Crossroads today, beginning at 10 a. m. There will be five hours of flying competition.

These three events are scheduled: Hand-launched stick models, commercial fuselage ROG and gliders. The winners of each class will be determined by the best average of three flights. Cooperating in the tournament are the Junior Chapter, National Aeronautic Association and the District of Columbia Recreation Department.

Lithuanians March Into Vilna Territory

Army Due in Capital Today, Carrying Food To Relieve Shortage

Copyright by New York Times.

Kovno, Oct. 17.—Lithuanian troops under Gen. Vitkauskas began to march into Vilna territory at 9 o'clock this morning and by nightfall had reached their day's goals without incident. Throughout the territory the troops were warmly welcomed by the population which raised Lithuanian flags and lined the streets.

The city of Vilna was decorated in preparation for entrance tomorrow of the Lithuanian troops. Concurrently with the army, Lithuanian relief organizations are sending men with equipment and food to take care of the population which is suffering from a severe food shortage.

The lord mayor of Kovno, Antonas Merkys, has been named governmental commissioner of the entire Vilna territory.

It has been decided that all inhabitants in the territory who were settled there on July 12, 1920, date of the signing of the Russo-Lithuanian peace, will receive Lithuanian citizenship. One hundred thousand others will be regarded for the time being as foreigners.

The Lithuanian government today concluded year-long deliberations on the question of the flax monopoly. It decided to take into state control all flax trade. The industry formerly was chiefly in private, to a large extent Jewish, hands with one-third under control of an agricultural cooperative.

are penalized, and that is what the policy of President Roosevelt has been aiming at. By this amendment, he is able to give material help to the Allies as a means of avoiding giving them military help. And, indeed, such aid as this is worth far more than regiments of soldiers. Great Britain and France propose to spend no less than £90,000,000 (about $360,000,000) on aircraft in the United States, and even now scores of planes are waiting to be shipped across the Atlantic.

The vote of 63 to 30 was unexpected here in official and semi-official quarters. There was no attempt in these quarters to start celebrating before the House of Representatives votes, but the majority of 33 in the Senate has bucked up officials who have not had much good news here recently.

It is in the naval and air headquarters, however, that one finds most jubilation over the possibility of getting United States planes before long. The impression is growing here that the Allies must get supremacy of the air in order to maintain supremacy of the sea and the feeling is that only United States' help will enable Great Britain and France to make up the time and production lost during the last few years.

By next spring or summer, it is felt Great Britain's arsenal will definitely be able to produce hurricanes, spitfires and long-range bombers in sufficient quantity to keep up with German factories, or even to surpass German production, but assurance of United States' aid would, it is argued, be a vital factor in Great Britain's ability to fight off mass air attacks during the winter.

Government circles have been extremely reticent in discussing what plans, when and if the House passes the Roosevelt bill. The feeling here is that any official comment on United States legislation would prejudice the chances of the bill being passed and merely give the Roosevelt opposition ammunition in the coming House debate.

One thing is certain, however, Great Britain is training pilots for this war by the thousand. It is officially stated that already instructors are capable of turning out more trained pilots than at the end of the last war, and in 1919 around 3,000 were being trained every month.

At the same time Great Britain's plane production is increasing all the time and when the new Nuffield factories get into operation, it is believed, Great Britain and France with help from the United States, will be able to attain parity if not supremacy in the air.

Paris, Oct. 27.—French satisfaction at the progress towards the repeal of the arms embargo by the United States has been greatly increased by the Senate vote.

It was felt here that that vote is of as great importance as what was voted because it was seen as expressing the approval of the American people of the action of the Allies taking up arms for the defense of the principle of national and individual liberty, after all their efforts to secure a settlement of German-Polish differences had been rejected and Poland had been invaded.

It has shown that the people of the United States are not neutral in their thoughts and that their judgment more than inclines against the Nazi rulers of Germany and their method of rule.

What the material effect of the passage of the bill will be, if and when the House of Representatives approves it, is not considered appropriate to describe in detail.

This, however, may be said, that in allied armaments there exist certain deficiencies which it is hoped and believed will be rapidly filled. Both here and in England progress has been remarkable and output has increased in a measure which is beyond belief.

With each week, skill and speed improve, but it is recognized that more and especially heavier arms will be needed to crumble that vast West Wall if human lives are to be saved in an effort to break through.

Coming after President Roosevelt's statement of yesterday; the measured words of the King of the Belgians, and the strong attitude of the Pope's encyclical, the Senate's vote has been welcomed as proving how universal is world opinion on the side of the cause for which France is fighting.

featured the local observance of Navy Day. Representatives of 42 patriotic societies placed wreaths on the John Paul Jones monument and heard a series of speakers praise the Revolutionary War hero's influence on the morale of Navy men through the years.

Members of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, the ladies' auxiliary of the order, the Sons of Eire, and the Navy League participated in ceremonies at the statue to Commodore John Barry in Franklin Square.

Acting Secretary Edison, speaking over a Nation-wide radio hookup, declared that the purpose of Navy Day was to familiarize the American people with the mission of their sea forces.

"There has been nothing bellicose in the celebration," he said, "no taunts to other powers, and no boasting of the might of the United States. Rather has the tone been that of a Navy to preserve the peace—a Navy so strong and so efficient that no foreign power would deliberately and premeditatedly attack the United States. We shall bend every effort to keep out of the conflict. We shall concentrate our efforts on the preservation of American neutrality."

Navy Seeking War Lessons

Speaking of the war overseas, Edison declared that the Navy is watching events closely for lessons on naval policy, but added that "nothing has happened abroad to change our minds as to the policy that we have pursued, namely a homogeneous surface fleet, with battleships as its backbone, supported and defended by a strong sea air arm."

Commander Robert B. Carney, in the principal address at the John Paul Jones monument, said the American Navy was designed for defense, but that "if war were thrust upon us, that Navy would seek to end the conflict through the medium of swift and decisive blows delivered wherever we could find our adversary." Rear Admiral William R. Furlong and Maj. George F. Unmacht, U. S. A., also spoke at the ceremonies.

Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, speaking over another national radio hook-up, declared that the average American citizen was the country's real "first line of defense." He cautioned that America will be safe only as long as each citizen realizes that "peace, like freedom," can be maintained only by eternal vigilance, and is willing to fight for it if necessary.

A pioneer in naval aviation, Rear Admiral John H. Towers, now chief of the bureau of naval aeronautics, speaking at Atlanta, warned against over great reliance on air power.

"Any nation which stakes its all upon winning a war against a first-class nation by air power is doomed to disaster," he stated. "Give aviation its full due, but please do not think of disposing of the battleship or the foot soldier. They have settled all major wars heretofore and in my opinion, will continue to do so for many years to come."

Rear Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, former commander of the U. S. Asiatic Fleet, in a speech at Chicago, declared the Navy should always keep its mind open for new ideas. He recalled instances of the high command combating introduction of new weapons and urged frequent contacts with civilians to get "fresh air into an organization that is apt to grow stale and conservative."

Roosevelt Sends Wreath

Navy Day is celebrated annually on October 27, the birthday of Theodore Roosevelt, often referred to as the "father" of the modern Navy. President Franklin D. Roosevelt yesterday sent a wreath to be placed on the grave of the elder Roosevelt at Oyster Bay, N. Y. It was the eighty-first anniversary of his birth.

Fears of Holland Invasion Growing

information explains the French communique issued this evening, stating "increased activity of the contact elements, as well as of the opposing artillery forces."

The activity of the reconnaissance elements also featured the previous night on the Western Front. The patrols are sent out to find out what the enemy is doing, and to capture prisoners. Their work is rendered all the more difficult in that at present no man's land between the French and German front lines extends in many places for as much as 500 meters, and in some places as much as 1, and even 2, kilometers. Such big areas between the rival lines were not known in the World War.

It is now admitted by the French that on the whole the German advance posts are stationed on the frontier and in some places have penetrated into French territory 200 to 300 meters. A number of clashes have taken place between German and French patrols, but otherwise the front continues calm.

Rhine Rises 2 Feet

Bad weather still remains and in the last 24 hours the Rhine has risen nearly 2 feet. If the Germans had any idea of duplicating the feat of the Spanish Republicans in crossing the Ebro and making a surprise attack, it is felt by the French that the sight of the swollen river before them will discourage them from undertaking any such operation.

Despite the unfavorable conditions the French air force carried out five reconnaissance operations today. They flew over the areas back of the German lines, spotting German troop movements. All of the French machines returned safely.

The French cabinet this morning authorized President LeBrun to ratify immediately the tripartite treaty between England, France and Turkey.

Modified Arms Pact Believed Offered Finns

Inner Cabinet Studies Latest Soviet Proposals

Copyright by New York Times.

Helsinki, Oct. 27.—The latest Soviet proposals were examined today by the Finnish inner cabinet.

Members of this cabinet are Prime Minister Cajander, Foreign Minister Erkko, Finance Minister Tanner, who is a member of the delegation to Moscow, and M. Juho Niukkanen, defense minister. A full cabinet will consider the proposals tomorrow.

It was rumored that the Soviet government proposed to Finland a modified form of military pact. This was considered here compatable with Finland's attitude of strict neutrality which automatically excludes the possibility of Finland ever permitting aggression against Russia through Finnish territory.

The Soviets, it was claimed, affirmed their intention to respect the "neutrality solidarity" of the Nordic bloc and assured Finland that none of their proposals was aimed at impairing Finnish independence.

According to reports from Viipuri, a town near the Soviet frontier, many people who evacuated their homes recently have now returned. Except in Helsinki, most of the elementary schools have reopened and railways are again functioning with only a slight curtailment of services.

Chief Provisions Of Neutrality Bill

Combat areas—Empowers the President to establish danger zones around either belligerent or neutral ports, including the areas exempted in the shipping sections, into which American ships could not go. He could modify or change these zones at will.

Financial transactions — Prohibits the purchase, sale or exchange in this country of bonds, securities or obligations of belligerents; forbids United States citizens to make loans or extend credit to any belligerent state, or its agency; forbids solicitation of funds for belligerents, except for medical aid, food and clothing to relieve suffering.

American ports—Authorizes the President to restrict the use of American ports by belligerents' submarines or armed merchant vessels. (He also could require the owners of any vessels to post bond against carrying fuel, arms, men, supplies or information to any belligerent warship and could intern any ship which violated this provision.)

Travel—Forbids Americans to travel on belligerent ships, with minor exceptions.

Merchant vessels—Makes it unlawful for an American merchant vessel to be armed, except with small arms.

American Republics—The law would not apply to American Republics unless they were co-operating with non-American states in a war, as Canada is.

Munitions board—Continues the board and empowers it to control the manufacture and export of arms through licenses.

Penalties—Violation of the shipping and title transfer sections would be punishable by a maximum fine of $50,000 and five years imprisonment, violations of other sections by $10,000 fine and two years imprisonment.

Finland Optimistic

Helsinki, Oct. 27 (INS).—The Finnish cabinet tonight was preparing new proposals for submission to Moscow, representing Finland's last endeavor to meet Russian demands. It was officially stressed that these proposals will be the Finns' final word in the negotiations.

There was, however, a noticeable easing of tension in Helsinki, and there was still official optimism that Finland and the Soviet will attain an understanding which will in no way compromise Finland's independence or integrity.

U. S. Indignant Over Flint, Moscow Told

be put on the phone from that point.

The Ambassador's report did little to soften resentment among officials here against the Soviet's course while this Government was vainly exerting every effort to learn something of the welfare of the Flint's crew and the status of the ship.

Hull Shows Irritation

Secretary of State Hull, at his press conference yesterday, plainly showed irritation over the Russian balking of all such efforts. The American Embassy at Moscow repeatedly had failed in efforts to get permission to send a representative by train or plane to Murmansk or to phone or wire the American captain over the Government-controlled lines.

Steinhardt reported that Vice Commissar Potemkin had "passed over the subject lightly by pointing out that the crew being on board the ship in the roadstead, in conjunction with the average delays in long-distance telephone communication, had probably brought about this 'unfortunate result.'"

[A New York Times dispatch from Moscow said Ambassador Steinhardt had been told Thursday he would be notified when he could be received at the foreign office, and expecting such notification at any minute, remained at his desk all night until 5 a. m. He then went home for two hours, returning to the embassy early yesterday morning. He remained at his desk again all day, awaiting the notification, which finally arrived shortly before the interview took place at 5:30 p. m.—Editor's note.]

Steinhardt expressed resentment that information had been withheld from him while communiques were being issued regarding the Flint through the Tass news agency. To the defense that Tass was an official agency of the Soviet, he told Potemkin that was no excuse for keeping the Ambassador uninformed, particularly in view of his repeated requests for information on behalf of the American Government.

Feared "Unneutral Act"

Regarding the Soviet decision as to disposition of the ship, Potemkin told the Ambassador the Soviet did not consider it had the right to turn the vessel and her cargo over to the American crew "unless the German prize crew refused to take her out," Steinhardt said, "as in the opinion of his government to do so would be an unneutral act."

Ambassador Steinhardt reported the Soviet attitude, as given by the Vice Commissar, as follows:

"The City of Flint had come into the port of Murmansk in charge of a German prize crew without any previous knowledge on the part of the Soviet Government and through no act on its part. The reason ascribed by the prize crew for the entry was damaged machinery making the ship unseaworthy.

No Comment Here

"When the Soviet authorities at Murmansk judged that the vessel was again fit to put to sea, and being desirous of preserving its neutrality, the Soviet government ordered the vessel to leave the port of Murmansk immediately under the same conditions as those of her entry, namely, with both the German and American crews on board and her cargo intact.

"He added that the order would be enforced immediately and that the Soviet government felt that its decision was not only in accordance with the well-recognized principles of international law and consummate with the obligations of a neutral but it was also the correct position to take as between the conflicting claims of the United States and Germany for possession of the vessel and her cargo and that by this he meant "to send her out in the same status as she had entered one of the ports."

The State Department made public the Ambassador's report without comment. There was no indication of what further steps might be under consideration by this Government.

AMBASSADOR STEINHARDT
Reports on Flint's Capture

Vessels Ordered to Sail With Captors and U. S. Crew Both Aboard

Sailing for Hamburg

By Melvin K. Whiteleather,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, Oct. 27.—The American freighter City of Flint which Germany claims as a war prize was reported tonight to be making a precarious voyage down the North Sea toward Hamburg in possession of a German crew.

Official advices received here said the vessel departed from the Russian port of Murmansk—where she was taken by a German prize crew put aboard by the pocket battleship Deutschland — promptly after she was released by Soviet authorities.

The possibility that more adventure lay in store for the City of Flint was conceded in naval circles here. The Germans, presumably guarding the ship with submarines and other naval vessels, recognized the dangers of trying to slip through the British blockade, but were counting on bad weather and poor visibility as well as their defense to get the City of Flint into a German port.

Official advices said the small freighter was somewhere along the Norwegian coast tonight heading into the British blockade area. She was released by the Russians last night and the Germans were said to have lost no time in lifting anchor for Hamburg.

Aiming for Skagerrak

If she reaches that port a prize court is to decide whether her cargo will be confiscated under the contraband law or returned to its American owners. (Reports reaching Stockholm Thursday said the cargo had been unloaded at Murmansk.)

The prize crew was expected to steer the City of Flint close to the Norwegian coast to the Skagerrak, then down between Copenhagen and Malmo to the Kiel Canal and thence to Hamburg rather than to court trouble with the British by sailing directly through the North Sea to Hamburg.

Just how the vessel is being convoyed was not disclosed, but it was assumed that submarines and other warships were keeping watch. After the Deutschland's dramatic capture of the vessel and her subsequent wanderings, the Nazis do not want to lose the prize.

Officials said they believed the American crew of 41 still was aboard the City of Flint although they lacked definite word of this.

Adolf Hitler has been in Berlin while the City of Flint drama has been unfolding. Today he personally awarded iron crosses to 14 army officers, 11 generals, 1 colonel and 2 lieutenants, for heroism in the Polish campaign.

Grand Jury Tells Kansas City Much Is Still to Be Done

Kansas City, Oct. 27 (AP).—A challenge to Kansas City to carry on the fight against its "octopus-like" machine was sounded today by Federal Judge Albert L. Reeves and the grand jury which sent Tom Pendergast to prison.

Giving the 21 grand jurors their "honorable discharge" from duties begun last January, Judge Reeves declared "a reign of terror that then prevailed has given way" but "the task is not yet finished."

The jurors declared "much information" remained which Federal officials might investigate.

As the jury made its final report two Pendergast lieutenants were arraigned on income tax evasion charges. They were Matthew S. Murray, former State WPA director, and Otto P. Higgins, resigned director of police.

Sea Raids Laid To 2 German Battleships

Adm. Scheer Believed Roaming Pacific, Deutschland in Atlantic

By Frank R. Kelley.

Copyright, 1939, by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, Oct. 27.—Naval authorities today said that according to information in their possession two German pocket battleships, the Deutschland and Admiral Scheer, had slipped through the British blockade of the North Sea, and were responsible for the recent sinking of merchant vessels in the North and South Atlantic.

The British Navy is taking "all necessary measures" to hunt both raiders and either capture or destroy them, and is on the lookout for Nazi supply ships which sailed recently from ports in Mexico and South America, presumably en route to refuel the Deutschland and Admiral Scheer at a secret rendezvous at sea.

[The Deutschland and Admiral Scheer are believed to have escaped from the North Sea October 8 when a portion of the German fleet was sighted and chased by British warships, the United Press reported.

[The admiralty radio flashed orders to all British warships to search for the raiders.

Eighty Prisoners Landed

[Eighty German seamen were landed at a Scottish port today and it was disclosed that the bodies of more than 50 Germans were taken from a shattered Nazi submarine which lies on Goodwin Sands off the Kentish coast, according to the New York Times foreign service.

[The captured German sailors were brought ashore by an armed British merchant cruiser and the landing stage was closely guarded by the military and police. It was stated by admiralty officials that the German seamen were members of the crews of the German ships Phoebus, 8,863 tons; Gloria, 5,864 tons; Bianca, 1,375 tons; Poseidon, 5,864 tons, and the Biscaya of 6,369 tons, whose capture was announced yesterday by Prime Minister Chamberlain in the House of Commons.

[The prisoners were taken to an internment camp. Their ships presumably will be added to Great Britain's merchant fleet.—Editor's note.]

After citing the dates on which both pocket battleships were reported in action, naval men said available information tended to confirm the belief that two raiders are or have been at large, although the possibility could not be ruled out that one had been able to roam between the South Atlantic and the coast of Newfoundland.

The Deutschland is believed to have sunk the British freighter Stonegate on October 5, between 400 and 500 miles east of Florida. On October 9, the Deutschland is reported to have halted the United States Maritime Commission's freighter City of Flint, put aboard a prize crew and also the crew of the Stonegate.

The Deutschland is next believed to have stopped a Norwegian vessel in the North Atlantic on October 12. On October 14, in the same area, another Norwegian freighter, the Hansen, was sunk, and according to reports, the Deutschland was then cruising off the Grand Banks. Later the same day, it was said, the raider halted a third Norwegian ship and transferred the Hansen's crew.

It was recalled that the British steamer Clement had been sunk by a raider off the coast of Pernambuco on September 30. It was believed possible that if the Deutschland and not the Admiral Scheer had sunk the Clement, the battleship could have steamed rapidly northward to the position where the Stonegate was sent to the bottom on October 5.

On the supposition that the Admiral Sheer carried out the attacks in the North Atlantic, naval men said it was possible that she had fled those waters and found her way around South Africa into the Indian Ocean, and around South America into the Pacific.

Could Escape in Fog

The possibility that either or both the Deutschland and the Admiral Scheer have slipped back to a German naval base is not ruled out because of the protection afforded by darkness or fog for a quick run down the coast of Norway inside the 3-mile limit, without detection by units of the British fleet patrolling northern waters from bases in Scotland.

The chance of a pocket battleship slipping through the English Channel is regarded as extremely slight because of extensive mine fields and the vigilance of naval patrol vessels off Dover and Calais.

In support of the belief that the Admiral Scheer was in the Pacific, naval men at London said the German merchant ship Borkum, which left Montevideo, Uruguay, on October 9, took the route near South America which the Admiral Scheer would follow if bound out of the South Atlantic. The theory is that the Borkum had on board supplies for the Admiral Scheer.

Two other German freighters afterwards departed from ports on the other side of the South American continent—the Dresden from Valparaiso, Chile, and the Havelland from Punta Arenas, Costa Rica.

In 1914 and 1915, at the time of the World War, it was recalled, German agents instituted a regular system of sailings of supply ships from South American ports.

The naval men believe also that the Deutschland is proceeding southward to take up the position left by the Admiral Scheer. It was pointed out further that on October 20 the German tanker Emmy Friedrich sailed from Tampico, Mexico, with a cargo of fuel oil and that on October 25 the German steamship Togo slipped out of Boma at the mouth of the Congo. These sailings of ships are taken to be sign posts of the raiders movements.

British Imports Drop Third, Exports Nearly Cut in Half

By Raymond Daniell

Copyright by New York Times.

London, Oct. 27.—The first month of war fell heavily upon this "nation of small shopkeepers." The value of imports to the United Kingdom shrank by a third and there was a 42 per cent drop in exports, as compared with the corresponding period last year, according to the September Trade and Investigation Report of the Board of Trade today.

Usually the report is issued much earlier in the month and gives information about the sources from which the United Kingdom draws food and raw materials. These were completely lacking, lest information valuable to the enemy might creep into the dull statistical tables which tell a story more important than the most dramatic story yet to come from the Western Front.

Sharpest in Grain, Meat

Tables of imports show the sharpest drop in grain and meat, with the increases showing chiefly ores, scrap iron, cotton and silk. The latter are for the war machine.

William S. Morrison, food minister, hastened to assure the British that while rationing was soon to be instituted there was no cause for concern, as it was intended to insure equitable distribution and it was not indicated by shortages.

Stores of tea were sufficient thus far to obviate the necessity for the pooling of supplies to make one standardized blend as was being done in the cases of some other commodities.

All the margarine that is being produced, Morrison said, is of a standard quality and is artificially supplied with a vitamin content to make it more nourishing than butter. Only 5 per cent of the butter consumed here is produced domestically, and as a large part of the imports come normally from Baltic and Scandinavian countries, there naturally has been some shortage.

Large South American Orders

Morrison said there had been delays in the arrival of meat ships and revealed that when the war broke out there was only a "working" reserve on hand as the government had concentrated on other foods, which more easily stored.

The government now, he said, is placing larger orders in South America.

For a while, Morrison said, there was no bacon coming into the United Kingdom but the flow from Canada and Denmark has been resumed. Supplies of sugar, he said, were adequate. The government's food control measures, Morrison said, had reduced competition and speculation, which, unchecked, would have raised prices more than 9 per cent.

For three weeks in September, the Mediterranean was closed to shipping. Trade with the Netherlands, Belgium and the Scandinavian countries was drastically curtailed.

Colder Weather Forecast for D. C.

Return of colder weather to Washington is expected this afternoon, the Weather Bureau said yesterday.

Showers were forecast for this morning, followed by clearing and colder weather later. Peak temperature yesterday was 77 at 4:30 p. m., and the low was 59 at 4 a. m.

Meanwhile, southeast storm warnings were ordered posted yesterday from the Virginia capes to Eastport, Me., the wind expected to change to northwest today at 8 a. m. Disturbances north of the lower Lake will move northeastward, the Weather Bureau said, causing strong southwest winds, shifting to west and northwest between Eastport and Sandy Hook this morning and south of Sandy Hook to the Virginia capes tonight.

U. S. Debt Passes $41,000,000,000

The Federal debt went over the $41,000,000,000 mark yesterday, bringing the Treasury within $4,000,000,000 of its borrowing limit.

The daily Treasury statement disclosed the debt total had reached $41,023,872,434 as a result of a $51,055,840 increase in one day due to borrowing on short-term bills and to baby bond sales. A year ago the debt was $38,424,932,579.77.

The new peak caused a revival of discussion of how and when the Administration should ask, as it has said it would do, Congress to boost the limit from the present $45,000,000,000 to $50,000,000,000.

Lutherism's Start to Be Marked Here

422d Anniversary Fete Ends Wednesday At Continental Hall

Beginning tomorrow, and climaxed with a festival in Continental Hall on Wednesday night, the 422d anniversary of the launching of the Protestant Reformation movement will be celebrated by Washington area Lutherans.

Lutheranism's contribution to the development of American democracy will be the keynote of the observance, with the Rev. Frederick H. Knubel, D. D., of New York City, president of the United Lutheran Church in America, and Senator Wiley, of Wisconsin, as principal speakers on the Wednesday program.

The committee handling arrangements for the meeting—all Lutherans—includes the Rev. Howard E. Snyder, Atonement Church; Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder and the Rev. Ralph W. Loew, pastor and assistant pastor of Reformation Church; the Rev. Edward Goetz, pastor of Zion Church and president of the Lutheran Ministerial Association of Washington; the Rev. George Grewenow, Faith Church, Arlington, Va., and Dr. Gerhard E. Lenski, Grace Church.

Choir of 180 Voices

A massed, 180-voiced choir from Lutheran congregations will present a concert under the direction of Emerson Meyers, organist and choirmaster at Atonement Church. Miss Mary Weidley, Reformation Lutheran organist, will be at the console of the Orgatron which was installed for the service.

Appropriate sermons, music and other features will mark tomorrow's Lutheran religious services, with Dr. Henry W. Hanson, president of Gettysburg College, Gettysburg, Pa., slated to speak at 11 a. m. at Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas circle.

Meanwhile, Dr. Gerhard E. Lenski will address the 8:45 and 11 a. m. rites at Grace Church on "Far More Than Protest," defining past and present Protestant ideals as well as Luther's gift of religious freedom to this age.

At Christ Church, Bethesda, the Rev. Raymond Vogeley will discuss "The Christian's Debt to the Reformation" at 11 a. m., while the Silver Spring Lutherans will hear the Rev. M. J. Bieber preach on "The Beginnings and Blessed Results of the Protestant Reformation."

Dr. Wickey to Speak

The Rev. Edwin E. Pieplow's sermon topic at Trinity Evangelical, Mount Rainier, will be "The Paramount Blessings Which the Lutheran Reformation Has Bestowed Upon the World."

At the same time, the Rev. H. E. Snyder will be speaking on "The Place of Luther in History," at Atonement Church, and the Rev. J. Luther Franz will be discussing "How What to Know Is Right" at St. Mark's.

Dr. Blackwelder's 11 a. m. theme at Reformation Church will be "The Contribution of Classical Protestantism to Democracy."

Dr. Gould J. Wickey, executive secretary of the United Lutheran Board of Education, will preach at 11 a. m. at Georgetown Lutheran Church, his former pastorate; the Rev. J. Adrian Pfeiffer, pastor of Takoma Church and publicity chairman for the Continental Hall service, will discuss "Blessings from the Open Book."

Christ Lutheran, local, of which the Rev. J. Frederic Wenchel is pastor, St. Stephen's Evangelical, where the Rev. Sam H. Kornmann will preach; Concordia Evangelical, St. Paul's, and others will commemorate the anniversary.

Gingerich Called To Randall Post

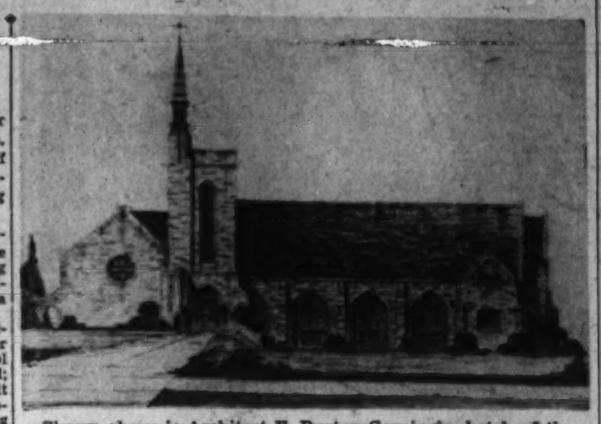
The Potomac Heights Community Church has extended a unanimous call to the Rev. Albert E. Gingerich, of the United Church of Canada, as successor to Dr. Oscar J. Randall, who recently resigned after a decade of service.

Native of Hamilton, Ontario, Mr. Gingerich is a graduate of Ohio Wesleyan University, the Boston University School of Theology, and has done post-graduate work at Union Theological Seminary, New York City.

He had charge of missionary churches in western Canada for five years, and for the last two years has served at the Caney Creek Community Center, in the mountains of eastern Kentucky and other places. In 1932 he married a local girl—Constance Lane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard H. Lane, 5327 Conduit road northwest.

Plans Completed by Bethesda Baptists For Church to House Growing Congregation

Work Is Expected To Start in Spring On $100,000 Edifice



Shown above is Architect E. Burton Corning's sketch of the proposed church for the Bethesda Baptist congregation

Dr. J. Raymond Nelson, pastor of the Bethesda Baptist Church, yesterday announced completion of plans for the erection of a $100,000 edifice to house the growing congreation.

The clergyman expects the construction of the first unit of the new building to start next spring on the site at Wilson lane and Melrose avenue, opposite the Bethesda Elementary School.

The first unit will contain a sanctuary, with seating capacity for about 275 persons; Sunday school facilities, departmentally arranged; space for young people's and adult activities, and equipment for social functions, including dining room and kitchen.

Future construction plans would add an educational wing, doubling the church school capacity; larger sanctuary, and other features. The first unit will cost about $27,500.

Began in 1931

The Bethesda Baptist congregation, now meeting in the Masonic Hall at 7002 Wisconsin avenue northwest, and whose interesting history and future plans were described by The Washington Post several months ago, had its inception in 1931 with afternoon services sponsored by the Silver Spring Baptist Church, under Rev. J. W. Loftis.

The Rev. B. M. Osgood, first pastor, assumed charge from December, 1932 until his death in 1935. In 1936, while the Rev. G. W. Griffin was minister, the church was received into the District of Columbia Baptist Convention, which purchased the present lot.

The Rev. Mr. Nelson, who became pastor in October, 1938, is a graduate of Wake Forest College, N. C., and the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary. His first pastorate was at Alexandria, Ky. Prior to his local charge, he served as pastor in Baltimore, and as recording secretary of the Maryland Baptist Union Association.

His tomorrow's themes will be "Eternally Safe With Christ," at 10:45 a. m., and "The Devil in the Wilderness," at 8 p. m.

Chevy Chase.—New Church Sunday will be observed tomorrow, when plans for the proposed new edifice will be presented and a water-color architect's sketch will be unveiled. Dr. Edward O. Clark, pastor, will reveal "The Secret of Building a New Church."

A new program featuring religious films will be inaugurated at the 8 p. m. service. The films will serve as a prelude to the minister's message. "Jesus and His Friends" will be the first picture. Youth organizations will unite in a fellowship supper at 6:30 p. m. and a service following.

Fifth.—Roll Call Day will be observed tomorrow, with Dr. Walter R. Feser, of Ventnor, N. J., addressing the 11 a. m., and 8 p. m., services.

National Baptist Memorial.—Dr. George W Truett, of Dallas, Tex., former president of the Southern Baptist Convention and the Baptist World Alliance, will conduct a series of meetings daily from November 1 to 8, Saturday excepted, in the National Baptist and New York Avenue Presbyterian Churches. Noon meetings are to be held on November 2, 3, and 6, 7, and 8, from 12:10 to 12:50 at the latter place. The Baptist church metings are set for 7:30 p. m.

Metropolitan.—The Rev. Robert Carlton Savage, assistant pastor, will occupy the pulpit at both services.

First.—Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden has selected the subject: "Undeniable Christian Evidences" for 11 a. m.

At the evening hour Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, executive secretary of the District Baptist Convention, will preach.

Sermon Subjects

"Nothing But Manna" will be Dr. Ulysses G. B. Pierce's sermon theme tomorrow at 11 a. m. at All Souls' Unitarian Church. Dr. Esther Calkin Brunauer, of the American Association of University Women, will discuss "Democracy and Our Foreign Policy" before the current problems class at 10 a. m.

Dr. Brooks to Talk

Dr. Seth R. Brooks, pastor of the Universalist National Memorial Church, will preach tomorrow at 11 a. m. on "Some Things Divine in Man." Miss Beatrice Newhall, of the Pan American Union, will address the adult forum at 10 a. m. on "Social Conditions in Latin America."

Metropolitan Services for China Relief

Metropolitan Presbyterian Church will dedicate tomorrow's 11 a. m. service to the cause of China relief, with Dr. C. C. Hung, pastor of the Chinese Community Church, speaking on "China's Gethsemane." The Rev. B. I. Barnes, of North Carolina Avenue Methodist Church, will be guest preacher at the evening rites.

Westminster Memorial. "Listen; Christ Calls" will be the Rev. Harry V. Porter's theme at 11 a. m.

Gunton-Temple. The Rev. Bernard Braskamp, D. D., will preach at 11 a. m. on "Looking Unto Jesus."

New York Avenue. Dr. Marcel Brun, of Swarthmore College, will again be the speaker at the French service tomorrow at 4:30 p. m.

Sherwood. "The Inner Bastion" will be the subject of the sermon by the Rev. Thomas L. Coyle at the 8:50 and 11 a. m. services tomorrow. Roy K. Easter, a graduate of the Westminster Choir School, of Princeton, N. J., will direct the young people's choir at both morning services.

New York Avenue.—"Whispers of Madness" will be the Rev. Peter B. Marshall's 11 a. m. theme. "The Saint of the Rank and File," will be the evening topic.

Covenant-First.—In another of the series of sermons on "The Only Reliable National Defense," Dr. Albert J. McCartney will preach tomorrow at 11 a. m. on "The Girdle of Truth and the Breastplate of Righteousness."

Central.—Dr. James H. Taylor will continue his sermon series on the Southern Presbyterian "Spiritual Crusade."

Chevy Chase.—Paul Harris, former Y. M. C. A. and Boy Scout worker, and for several years field director of the Presbyterian Board of Chrisitan Education, will address the annual fall joint meeting of the five youth units tomorrow at 6 p. m.

Eddie Cantor Will Speak at First Congregational

Eddie Cantor, now making a local theatrical appearance, has consented to speak tomorrow at 11 a. m. at First Congregational Church, Tenth and G streets northwest, on "Christianity and Democracy."

Invited by Dr. Howard Stone Anderson, the pastor, Cantor will occupy the pulpit in place of Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, leader of the Washington Hebrew Temple, originally scheduled as guest speaker, who graciously "gave way" to Cantor.

Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, leader of the Washington Hebrew Temple, will preach at 8 p. m. on "War and Peace."

Happy and cordial relations always existed between the First Congregational Church and local Jewish religious bodies, the leaders having exchanged pulpits on several occasions. The site of the Temple was the Frist Congregational Church's original place of worship.

Cleveland Park

Opening a series of book sermons, in which characters from fiction, biography and dramatic works will be discussed, the Rev. Paul W. Yinger, new pastor, will preach at 11 a. m. tomorrow on "Les Miserables," with its unforgetable character, Jean Valjean.

Mount Pleasant. "Neglected Neighbors" will be Dr. Fred S. Buschmeyer's 11 a. m. sermon theme. Ray Huff, superintendent of Lorton Reformatory, will address the high school forum at 6:15 p. m. on "The Cure of Crime."

Lutheran Session Will Open Today

The Augustana Lutheran Church, New Hampshire avenue and V street northwest, will be host today and tomorrow to the convention of the Luther Leagues, of Baltimore, Md.; Philadelphia, Wilkes-Barre and Sugar Notch, Pa., Augustana congregations.

The Rev. S. E. Engstrom, of Minneapolis, former president of the Luther League of the Augustana Synod, will speak at the banquet tonight on "Ceiling Zero—Visibility Zero." Delegates will attend Sunday school and church services tomorrow, led by Dr. Arthur O. Hjelm. The conclave will close with a rally at 3 p. m., with Dr. Engstrom again speaking.

With Deane R. Shure, organist at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, presiding at the console, the new Moller pipe organ was dedicated last night as a feature of dedication week.

Dr. Daugherty to Speak

Dr. Simpson B. Daugherty will preach at 11 a. m. at Memorial United Brethren Church on "Why Are We Afraid?" and at 8 p. m. on "The Empty House."

Catholics Plan Benediction At Monument

Demonstrations at the Washington Monument grounds and at the Tenth Annual Field Mass in Aquia, Va., will be high spots of tomorrow's "Feast of Christ the King," in which thousands of Catholic men will take part.

Representing every parish in Washington and vicinity, the men will march from the Capitol grounds at 2 p. m. via Constitution avenue to the Sylvan Theater section, where the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, Apostolic delegate to the United States, will preside, and celebrate the solemn benediction.

The sermon will be delivered by the Very Rev. Ignatius Smith, O. P., among the most prominent orators in the Dominican Order in the United States. Pioneer in Washington Holy Name activities, he was once national director of the society.

A reviewing stand will be erected on Constitution avenue, where hundreds of distinguished guests will witness the demonstration.

Dr. George F. Harbin, president of the Washington section of the Archdiocesan Union of Holy Name Societies, and chairman of the committee on arrangements for the parade and religious demonstration, has appointed the following committee to assist in completing plans for the affair: Daniel J. Cramer, chairman of the special religious groups committee; William A. Kehoe, chairman, special guests; Dr. George R. Ellis, finances; William J. Boyd, press and publicity; Alfred Neff, loud speaker equipment; Capt. William J. Walsh, flags and color bearers; Albert J. Headley, jr., music, and John Storer, permits for parading and assembling.

"For Peace Among Nations" will be the theme of the Aquia Mass, scheduled for 11 a. m., and at which the Rev. Arthur P. Taylor, diocesan director for the Society for the Propagation of the Faith, will be celebrant. The Rev. Thomas F. O'Connell, pastor of St. Paul's Catholic Church, Richmond, Va., who addressed the first field mass at the graves of the Catholic pioneers of the seventeenth century, will deliver the sermon.

Bible Class Spent $1,500 for Charity Its Report Shows

The Hummer Memorial Women's Bible Class, of Epworth Methodist Church, expended almost $1,500 for charitable work during the past year, it was revealed at the annual banquet in the parish hall last Wednesday night. Almost 200 attended.

Total expenditures of $1,640.02 included $500 for missionary work; $160.67 to the Gaithersburg Home, and the balance for various other services, the teacher, Mrs. Clifton Ray, wife of the Epworth pastor, pointed out in the report.

Dr. Robin S. Gould, pastor of Francis Asbury Methodist Church, was principal speaker; Mrs. Blanche Updike, vice president, brought greetings in place of Mrs. Pauline Clem, president, suddenly called out of town, and E. L. Loving, Sunday school superintendent, served as toastmaster.

George E. Harris, executive secretary of the District of Columbia Organized Bible Class Association, also spoke, and William R. Schucker, association treasurer and song-leader, led in group singing.

Church of the Week

Reformation Lutheran Proud Of Its Saturday School

Boasts It Is Most Unique Religious Project in Capital; Congregation Now Winding Up 70th Anniversary Celebration

Reformation Lutheran Church, on Capitol Hill, now winding up its seventieth anniversary celebration, boasts of one of the most unique religious projects in Washington—a Saturday church school.

Supplementing the regular Sunday religious services, the project was necessitated by the fact that the church draws its membership from all parts of the Washington area—even from Laurel, Md., and Fairfax, Va.—making it difficult to assemble all of the scholars on Sunday.

Blackwelder

So, each Saturday at 11 a. m., they meet for a program of religious education, including confirmation classes; adjourn at noon for lunch on the premises, then meet in the afternoon for handwork groups and expressional activities.

Lack Only Space

While the Rev. Ralph Loew, youthful assistant pastor, and his efficient corps of teachers conduct the school the youngsters have their own church council, and on the first Sunday of each month have their own worship service in the church at 9:45 a. m., serving as ushers, choristers and other leaders. The children's choir rehearses on Saturday afternoon, when the Intermediate Luther League, led by Miss Naomi Cross, meets.

Reformation's young people get plenty of opportunity for religious expression, and now lack only adequate space. However, it was learned yesterday that the growth of the congregation to 1,100 members may make it necessary to add one or two more Sunday services to the present three.

The Rev. Mr. Loew leads the Sunday matins.

Other youth activities are centered around the regular Sunday school, of which T. P. Hickman is superintendent; the college-age class, taught by Prof. Raymond J. Seegar, physics instructor at George Washington University; the senior, young people and round-table Luther League groups, led by Bruce Hulett, Miss Catherine Le Roy and Dwight Doty, respectively, and the Weidley Players, thespians.

Mary Weidley Leads Choir

Choir activities at Reformation Church are conducted under Miss Mary A. Weidley, whose father, Dr. John Weidley, is pastor emeritus. Her mother served for many years as organist, and the present instrument is a memorial to the Weidley family.

Women's work is carried on through the Ladies' Aid Society, led by Mrs. Helen Krechting; the Women's Missionary Society, of which Mrs. Merle Cain is general chairman. Circle leaders are Mrs. E. A. Chewning, daytime; Miss Marion Hess, evening, and Sister Pearl Lyerly, church deaconess, the business and professional unit.

S. J. Hinkel is president of the Men's Club, "big brother" organization to the church's boys, and which is hoping to start a Boy Scout troop very shortly. The men also actively promote the evangelistic work of the congregation. Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor, is president of the church council, while T. P. Hickman, vice president of the City Bank, serves as vice president, and presiding officer.

One Hundred from St. John's

Since St. John's Evangelical Lutheran Congregation disbanded 100 of its members have been worshipping at Reformation Church. Sometime in the near future it is hoped to build a St. John's memorial parish hall at Reformation with funds from the sale of the old St. John's property in the Southwest.

Coming here in 1933 after meritorious service as pastor of Christ Lutheran Church, Baltimore's largest Protestant congregation, Dr. Blackwelder has likewise distinguished himself at Reformation and in Washington's general religious and civic life.

He was president of the Washington Ministerial Union in 1938; is affiliated with the Sigma Theta, a local ministers' organization; the Interchurch Club, the National Cathedral Council and other groups. He helped promote the National Preaching Mission sometime ago. He and Mrs. Blackwelder have two children, Theodore, 9, and David Louis, 3.

Recently married was the Rev. Mr. Loew, native of Columbus, Ohio, where he was graduated from Capital University, and later from Wittenberg University in that State. He also did graduate work at Ohio State, and served for six years as pastor at Millersburg, Ohio, coming here in 1937. His bride was the former Maxine Uhl, Latin teacher in Millersburg.

Christian Science Topic 'Punishment'

"Everlasting Punishment" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m.

The golden text is from Ezekiel 18:31: "Cast away from you all your transgressions, whereby ye have transgressed; and make you a new heart and a new spirit: for why will ye die, O house of Israel?"

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "If thou, Lord, shouldst mark iniquities, O Lord, who shall stand? Let Israel hope in the Lord; for with the Lord there is mercy, and with him is plenteous redemption." (Psalms 130: 3, 7.)

Little Stories about GREAT HYMNS

"ALL THE WAY MY SAVIOUR LEADS ME"
Fanny J. Crosby

"All the way my Saviour leads me;
What have I to ask beside?
Can I doubt His tender mercy
Who thro' life has been my Guide?
Heav'nly peace, divinest comfort,
Here by faith in Him to dwell!
For I know whate'er befall me,
Jesus doeth all things well."

Desperately in need of five dollars, Fanny J. Crosby, the blind hymn writer, prayed to God and, in answer to her prayer, a gentleman called at her home. He shook her hand, greeted her and departed. After he left, she discovered a five-dollar bill in her hand. Her first thought was how wonderfully God had helped her. She immediately sat down and wrote the above hymn

Summary of Pope's First Encyclical, an Attack on Totalitarian State

Pontiff Says Poland Will Rise Again

Tells of Efforts for Peace; Nazi Racial Theories Denounced

The official summary of the Pope's encyclical issued by the Vatican follows:

Under the date of October 20, 1939, Pope Pius XII has addressed to the Catholic world his first encyclical letter, which he placed under the seal of Christ the King.

It begins by observing that this fortieth anniversary of the consecration of the human race to the Sacred Heart of Jesus is a date which coincides with the fortieth anniversary of the Pope's ordination to the priesthood, and the pontiff takes occasion to make devotion to the King of Kings in an opening prayer, so to speak, of his pontificate, the alpha and omega of his apostolic activity.

His holiness rejoices to perceive the splendid crowning of the spreading and deepening of devotion to the Divine heart of peace in the Feast of Christ the King, from which an immense good has sprung.

It is expected, however, that the Feast of Christ the King may mark a day of a great profound revival in the spirit of the Kingdom of Christ.

With singular gratitude the august pontiff points out the marks of reverent homage which come to him from sovereigns, the heads of states and public authorities.

Consoled by Faithful

Having noted in this grave hour a reawakening of sentiment of the community of the Catholic family, his holiness takes pleasure in the consoling proof which he received of this in a plebiscite of filial attachment to the church and vicar of Christ on the occasion of his election and coronation—a plebiscite of unbreakable Catholic unity throughout the world which comforted him greatly amid toils, activities and trials, and for which he addresses to all the world of deepening faithfulness thanks, which he extends also to those who are without the body of the Catholic church but who have not forgotten those things which, in Christ and God, still united them with the universal Shepherd.

He has particular reference to Italy, which now, by virtue of the Lateran pacts, occupies a post of honor among the states represented at the apostolic feast.

He expresses the wish that the peace of Christ sprung from those pacts may animate the Italian people so that they may ever remain faithful to their glorious traditions.

Tells of Peace Efforts

To dare testimony to truth with apostolic firmness will be, in the present hour, a fundamental duty of the apostolic office, and that without being influenced by earthly considerations, by fear of distrust and opposition of rebuff and a lack of comprehension, of disregard and false interpretation—always, however, in a spirit of charity—for the purpose of bringing about a recognition of the royal rights of Christ and return of individuals and society to the laws of truth and love.

While he writes, the Pope is prey to indescribable anguish because of the outbreak of "terrible hurricanes of war"—war which he sought to avert by every means in his power.

He, therefore, invites all to raise their eyes and hearts to the One only from whom comes salvation, so that this hour of greatest need may be one of change of thought and of sentiment for many, since it is true that hours of such painful delusion may become hours of grace, a passage of the Lord.

Reserving to a more opportune moment the "taking of a complete doctrinal position against the errors of the present time," the pontiff limits himself now "to some fundamental observations."

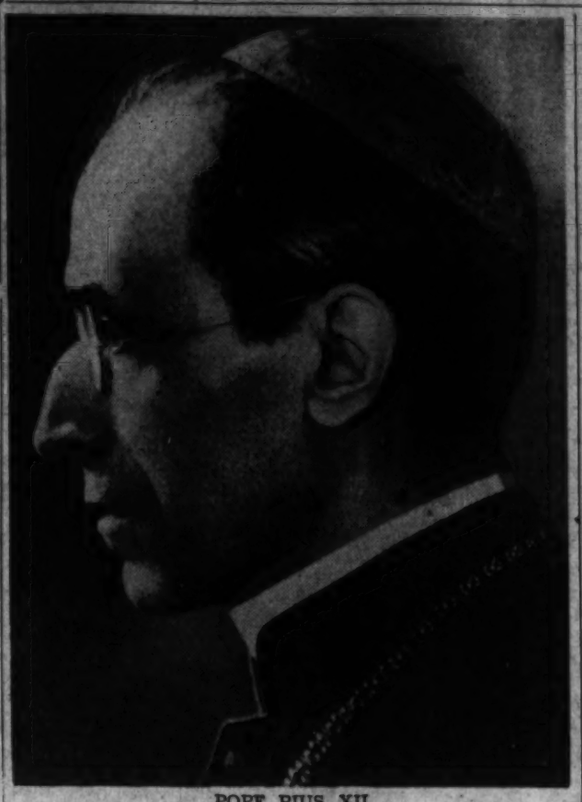
Root of Present Evils

The profound and ultimate root of present evils is the "refusal to accept a form of universal morality both for life of the individual and for social life and international relations;" that is to say, disregard and forgetfulness of the natural law whose foundation is in God, for after denial of God comes denial of law and that because of separation from the doctrines of Christ and from the chair of Peter, which is the depositary and teacher of that doctrine. From this separation has come the subversion of the central dogma of Christianity, the divinity of the Saviour. Naturally, laicizing of society has brought about reassurance of ever clearer, more distinct, more distressing signs of corrupt and corrupting paganism. Thus progress was in reality retrogression, elevation, degradation; arrival at man's estate, stooping to servility.

Undermined therefore was the sole irreplaceable foundation of that stability and tranquility, of that order internal and external, private and public, which alone can engender and safeguard the prosperity of states.

From religious and moral agnosticism, the august pontiff notes, have sprung pernicious errors. In the first place, forgetfulness of the law of human solidarity and charity dictated and imposed by common origins by equality of rational nature and by redeeming sacrifice of Christ.

The Pope develops Biblical concepts recalling the Biblical narrative on the origin of man and insisting particularly on the thought of St. Paul in which shines forth the unity of human nature of its purposes and its means of subsistence within a natural supernatural order. He touches upon the unity of ransom paid by the Son of God and underlines the precept of charity.



POPE PIUS XII

Individuals and peoples are not therefore disjoined from one another, but rather united in organic, harmonious mutual relations even amid a variety of differentiation according to diverse conditions of light and culture. The church appreciates and respects the particular characteristics of which every people are proud, but does not lose sight of its higher purpose which is supernatural unity in universal love.

Indeed, the church salutes with joy the development of those forces and tendencies which are peculiar in every stock, as proven by her missionary apostolate.

Those men who enter the church whatever the origin of their language have an equal right in the house of the Lord. Nor does this in any way stand in contrast to legitimate love of fatherland in accord with the order established by God in the exercise of charity; it has further nobly contributed to the religious aid and civil progress of mankind.

Assails Totalitarian State

No less harmful in the second place is the error which pretends to absolve civil authority from any dependence whatsoever upon God, and therefore from every bond transcendant to law, thus setting up the state as the final end of life and supreme criterion of the moral and individual order.

This absolute authority is contrary to the principles of natural reason and of Christian conscience, since it reduces everything to a utilitarian morality and deprives human law of that moral authority which is its foundation.

The activity of the state should co-operate to common good; if the state is considered as an end in itself, this cannot but be harmful to the prosperity of nations, since it is damaging to private initiative, disadvantageous to public welfare and compromising to the growth and well-being of the family which, with the individual, is by nature anterior to the state.

The rights of the consecrated are sacred and inviolable. The state may lay claim to position and blood, but never to the soul redeemed by Christ.

Youth should indeed perform with intelligence, conscientiousness and pride the noble duties of the nation, but cannot and must close its eyes to the supernatural fatherland.

It would be a crime lese majesty against the King of Kings. And most bitter would be its fruits.

Rights of Others Violated

If this error—as the pontiff observes—brings harm to the internal life of nations it is equally harmful to the relations among peoples since it goes counter to the unity of supernatural society, cuts away the foundations and values of international law, leads to violating rights of others.

The human race, although divided into social groups, nations or independent states, nevertheless is bound by moral and juridicial ties which are ordained for the welfare of all. Mutual confidence, prevision and persuasion of reciprocal fidelity to plighted word, conviction that better is wisdom than weapons of war are indispensable presuppositions and to all peaceful neighborliness among peoples.

International law cannot be torn away from the anchor of divine law without abandoning it to the caprice of private interests or collective egoism, thus opening the door to the domination of force giving legal standing to accomplished fact which is inconsistent with treaties and doing away with reciprocal confidence among nations. These are conceptions which have brought the world to the present horrible abyss.

Turning his gaze toward the future, the Pontiff asked what will be the new order of things when the tempest of war shall have ceased. Will there be a repetition of past mistakes which put the right of victors above every sense of justice?

Bases for New Order

Salvation comes not by the sword. The new order must rest upon the rock of natural law and divine relations. The human must be re-educated spiritually and religiously and this need starting from Christ as an indispensable foundation must pass along the ways of justice and charity as they are announced in the gospel with a view to the kingdom of God. For the triumph of this kingdom, all fine upright spirits must strive frankly and courageously, even at the cost of greatest sacrifices.

It is comforting—the holy father notes—that in all quarters of the world there appear evident signs of this generous, courageous spirit. From the Eucharistic Congress movement to the activity of Catholic action there sprang forth fountains of grace and reserve force. Above all, the pontiff sends his paternal gratitude and his thanks to that fruitful phalanx of men, women, youths and maidens which, in close collaboration with the hierarchical apostolate of church, are making of the laiety, so to speak, a ministry of Christ.

He then emphasized the special mission of the family, shaper of young generations, providential custodian and refuge of faith in times of persecution, when the church is not accorded that liberty and, therefore, that possibility of action to which in divine mandate it has a sacred and uncontrovertible right.

From that right comes a stream of happiness and tranquillity to nations.

Since human expedients had miserably failed, from church alone can come salvation to a medium of unity of religious and moral doctrine toward which turns the desire of numerous members of the church as of many rulers and also many noble spirits who are separated from it.

Against suspicions in certain quarters the Pope declares that the church is absolutely foreign to any idea impairing the foundations of civil authority or usurping its rights; it is interested not in dominating but observing; it is ready not to take the place of legitimate authority but to offer its aid in the spirit of Christ, inculcating obedience and respect; not retarding but accelerating civil progress in the peace which comes from practice of the love of God, of neighborliness.

Approaching his conclusion the Pope recalls his efforts to avert the scourge of war; "His warnings respectfully listened to but not followed."

The church and the faithful are living in difficult moments, but Christ the King was never so close to us as in times of trial.

The field of charity, toward those who have the right to pity or help, opens wider and wider before us. And the church as the blessed vision of peace stands above the vortex of error and passion trusting in Almighty God Who will calm the tempest.

Closes With Prayer

The encyclical concludes with an urgent invitation to prayer directed to the pastorate faithful, particularly those who are in suffering and sorrow, with a special paternal appeal for the legions of innocent children; all are asked to pray without interruption, not forgetting to make their prayers with a spirit of mortification and with worthy works of penance so that the mercy of God may be called down upon them. All are exhorted to live in unity, faith and love.

Boomerang Indictment

Russian newspapers are not following very intelligent tactics by attacking as "reactionaries" all those in this country who favor repeal of the arms embargo. This particular form of interference in American affairs is likely to ease a number of doubtful House votes into the repeal column.

Only a few months ago, when Russia was interested in forming a united front against Germany, every American who favored a rigid neutrality in Europe's troubles was by that token a "reactionary" in Communist eyes. Indeed, this was the mildest epithet applied to those who believed that the United States should not sell arms either to the Spanish republicans or to Gen. Franco in the recent civil war.

But communism, having gone into alliance with the Nazis, demands that its press should make a similar turnabout. Any form of opposition to Hitler is now an "imperialist aim" in the eyes of Moscow. And any American action which is not wholly subservient to the Fuehrer's wishes therefore becomes "reactionary," "capitalistic," "imperialistic," or what-have-you.

Communists, whether or not they personally approve this intellectual dishonesty, must swallow it if they are to remain party members. But for people of integrity the recent record of Moscow serves to turn condemnation from that city into praise, and vice versa.

So there are probably a number of Congressmen who, when told that the Soviet press views a vote for repeal as "reactionary," will be inclined to welcome the displeasure of the Communists. And these Congressmen may also conclude, with reason, that Russian newspapers would not be interfering so vociferously in the issue unless they regarded the action finally taken by the Senate as highly undesirable from the Communist viewpoint.

The Will To Believe

"Orthodoxy," wrote the genial Bishop Warburton, 170 years ago, "is my doxy; heterodoxy is another man's doxy." And at first blush it may seem that the Marquis of Lothian, in denying that the British government is conducting any propaganda in the United States, has applied the same convenient system of categories to the question of what is propaganda and what is not.

Nevertheless, it is a most valuable and intelligent distinction that he has drawn between "propaganda" and mere special pleading. The British, says Lord Lothian, are naturally making the best possible case for themselves in the sense that an advocate makes the best possible case for his client. "But having done so, by our own democratic principles we are bound to leave you perfectly free to form you own judgments."

This, says Lord Lothian, is not propaganda. In his definition, propaganda is the stuff manufactured for domestic consumption in countries where the control of popular thought and emotion has been wholly relinquished to the state. It is not a matter of asking people to form their judgments on incomplete and ex-parte evidence. It is not a matter involving judgment at all. It is simply instructing people in what they are to believe.

Thus it is perfectly possible in such countries for the state to order complete reversals of belief whenever the exigencies of state policy require. One need go no further than the equanimity and even enthusiasm with which both the German and Russian peoples have accepted the alliance. It explains why Dr. Goebbels has no difficulty in persuading his compatriots to hold at the same time two mutually irreconcilable beliefs—for instance, (a) that the Athenia was sunk by the British navy and (b) that the German navy was perfectly justified in sinking it.

Of course the fact that propaganda so brazen and so preposterous can be swallowed without revulsion does not prove the inhabitants of totalitarian countries to be inherently any less intelligent than ourselves or than the peoples of other countries where the principle of free discussion still exists. It does prove how rapid is the atrophy of the critical faculty wherever it is denied free exercise.

The tendency of human beings, in general, to believe what they desire to believe has often been noted, even in democracies, and even among philosophers. But it is only when the individual has identified that desire with the will of the state that the job of the propagandist becomes simple and almost automatic.

Therein lie both the fascination and the deadly danger that the totalitarian philosophy holds for the masses of the world. This philosophy has promised to the masses the status and security with which capitalist democracy has woefully failed to provide them. That up to now the promise has seemed more specious than real does not alter the desire of men to believe it.

All that is asked in return for this promise is the surrender of the individual intellect—or, if you like, of conscience. And there are times when to many it must seem a small enough price. Yet it is the one price which the human race cannot afford to pay—even for material security, even for political unity, even for peace.

Cart Before Horse

There is no question that Representative Dies is entirely justified in asking the Department of Justice to prosecute individuals whom he believes guilty of violating the registration act of 1938. The chairman of the House committee investigating un-American activities has had unusual opportunity to identify the agents of foreign principals who are spreading propaganda in the United States. His service in this connection could be made as valuable as his contribution to the indictment of Earl Browder on evidence of false application for a passport.

It may well be asked, however, why Mr. Dies has singled out the American League for Peace and Democracy as the first agency to be attacked. On several occasions Mr. Dies has expressed a belief that the American Communist Party and the German-American Bund are violating the law. Within the last week he wrote to the Attorney General saying that he regards testimony taken by his committee as containing valid evidence of such violations by these two organizations. But he has made no formal request for prosecution of their officials.

Therefore Mr. Dies seems to be putting the cart before the horse. His complaint against the American League for Peace and Democracy is based almost entirely upon the claim that it was organized by the Communist Party and acts as an "instrument" of that party. Even if that assertion can be proved, the league would merely be in the position of a sub-agent of an agent of a foreign principal. Common sense suggests that the status of the Communist Party and the bund, under the registration act, be clarified before any alleged "fellow travelers" are prosecuted.

The statute requiring agents of foreign principals to register with the Secretary of State is sweeping. The term "agent of a foreign principal" is defined as meaning "any person who acts or engages or agrees to act as a public-relations counsel, publicity agent, or as agent, servant, representative, or attorney for a foreign principal or for any domestic organization subsidized directly or indirectly in whole or in part by a foreign principal."

There seems no question that the Communist Party in this country is subsidized by the Third International in Moscow. It is precisely the type of organization which Congress had in mind in passing the registration act. Since officials of the American League for Peace and Democracy have testified to the receipt of contributions from the Communist Party, it too may be reasonably placed in the category of organizations indirectly subsidized in part by a foreign principal.

But whether a case against the league can be established in court is another matter. Certainly the Attorney General would be justified in postponing action until the status of the Communist Party has been clarified.

Mr. Dies' premature complaint against this organization must also be coupled with his previous publication of its "membership" list, which the league contends is only its mailing list. President Roosevelt has now properly condemned that discriminatory procedure.

Together these instances suggest a strong bias against the league on the part of Mr. Dies. That gives added reason for the Department of Justice to eliminate every suspicion of discrimination in its efforts to enforce the registration law.

Good Opportunity

John B. Colpoys' resignation as chairman of the Democratic central committee for the District has given new impetus to the move for enactment of direct primary legislation for this voteless community. Since the Hatch act has forced the chieftain of the majority party here to relinquish his hold after 22 years of control, the rank and file are greatly encouraged over the prospect that they may now be permitted to elect their own party officials and representatives.

The disfranchisement of the District does not prevent it from participating in the selection of presidential candidates at national party conventions. Even this relatively minor political function has been usurped in the past, however, by self-appointed political leaders who may or may not reflect the views of party members living in the Capital. That usurpation will undoubtedly continue until a direct primaries bill for the District has been enacted.

Forty-six States now have direct primary laws. A great majority of the States have utilized this democratic method of controlling political parties for more than 20 years. The direct primary cannot be regarded, therefore, as an experiment. Through long use it has proved to be the most fair and least corruptible means of selecting delegates to the national party conventions, as well as party officials and candidates. Some of the State laws are still in need of revision and extension. But the principle of the direct primary seems to be thoroughly established.

There can be no legitimate excuse for continded failure to apply this democratic procedure in the District of Columbia. Bills to set up the machinery for the election of delegates to the party conventions have long been pending in both houses. They have been approved by many civic organizations as well as by the District Bar Association. With the chairmanship of the local Democratic central committee vacant, the regular session of Congress will afford a special opportunity to press forward with this urgent reform.

Railroads And The Law

The Department of Justice has brought a civil proceeding against the Association of American Railroads and its officers and directors on the ground that the roads have violated the Sherman anti-trust act by refusing to cooperate with motor carriers in establishing through routes, joint rates and fares, and making joint billing arrangements.

Seemingly there is no hard feeling on either side. Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold states that the defendants have cooperated fully with the Department of Justice by furnishing it with the information on which to proceed. And President Pelley, of the association, expressing appreciation of the spirit in which the Attorney General has approached the question at issue, says he welcomes the suit.

It appears that the association simply advised its members not to cooperate with motor carriers in the way mentioned if the effect of such cooperation would be to invade the territory of another railroad. That advice has been generally followed, with one known exception, and is defended as a sound policy designed to avoid wasteful duplication of transportation facilities and services.

The wisdom of this policy, however, will not be decided by a suit brought to determine whether it involves a restraint of trade. Nevertheless, the suit serves a very useful purpose in calling attention to a serious gap in the regulatory laws applicable to public carriers. There is no authority in the law for compelling the railroads and the motor carriers to establish through routes and joint rates. Hence, even if the ICC harbored objections to the policy now being followed by the roads, it would be powerless to intervene.

It seems most anomalous for natural monopolies such as railroads to be subject to the prohibitions of the antitrust act. Railroad operations necessarily involve many restraints upon trade. That is why the roads have long been subjected to regulation. In the present instance, the matter of real concern is not whether the roads are engaged in restraining trade but whether their action is or is not in the public interest.

The roads affirm that their policies are "sound" and "consistent with the public interest." Aggrieved motor bus carriers naturally hold different opinions. It seems obvious that final decision in a matter of this sort ought to rest with the responsible regulatory authority, the ICC, instead of being submitted to irrelevant tests of legality. Indeed, regulated industries in the position of the railroads should be exempted from the prohibitions of the antitrust laws.

It is our aim to achieve comprehensive, coordinated regulation of our major transportation systems, enabling them to function as a unified whole with maximum economy and efficiency. That goal will never be reached unless Congress expands and strengthens the regulatory laws and concentrates authority in the hands of a single agency. The logical agency is the ICC, which has had a half century of experience in this field.

Mars Is A Dude

From the Hartford Courant.

The story of the German U-boat that landed the crew of a torpedoed Greek steamer on the Irish coast in County Kerry is like a tale out of the "Chanson de Roland" or "King Arthur's Round Table." It has in it all the foolhardy courage and derring-do that have always made men regard war as adventurous, glamorous and brave.

Of all the hairy-chested Olympians, only Mars was ever at pains to conceal at least some of his brutal vigor. He used silver and gold and bright plumes on his armor. And he bought the gayest silks in the market place for his banners.

Can it be that the gallant U-boat captains are playing the age-old game of making war seem attractive? Do Hitler's propaganda chiefs feel that a gesture like that of Saxe at Fontenoy—when he begged the English to fire the first volley on his French army—can make people forget how the blood flows once the volley is fired?

When the horrors of war are revealed, the dead, the blinded, the maimed, the more than half-starved! What price then rouge for the cheeks of Mars?

Tribute To Pirates

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am 80 years old, but I can still remember singing the old songs; "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," and "My Country 'Tis of Thee."

I can still remember my history lesson of 1776-1812 and how Decatur smashed the pirates and freed us from paying tribute to this gang of high-sea robbers. I can still hear the echoes of Fourth of July speeches boasting of our independence and freedom on land and sea. But lo and behold, how the mighty have fallen and the descendants of those independent ancestors are now kow-towing and taking orders as to where our ships may sail, or with whom we may conduct peaceful and commercial intercourse.

There is no difference between that and our once paying tribute to Barbary pirates for the privilege of sailing the seas. Again, as in 1812, our ships are being searched, mail, money and ships confiscated, when in pursuit of peaceful and commercial mission with countries with which we are at peace.

Are we going to submit to the dictates of two or more nations to order our ships off the seas to interfere with and destroy our commercial relations with whomsoever we see proper to deal, because of their private quarrel? If that is international law, then away with it. It's time we were writing a new Declaration of Independence to suit the times.

Neutrality admits of various constructions. It may mean that we refuse to allow our citizens to sell anything whatsoever to belligerent nations. And again it may allow them to sell in unlimited quantity or quality. But no matter how it may be construed, providing it is impartial, we should allow no interference with any ship sailing from any United States port to any other port on the globe, whether that nation is at war or at peace with another nation. I propose that instead of being ruled off the seas, we should compel warring nations' ships to remain within their respective war zone, and be treated as pirates if they interfere with the ships and commerce of peaceful nations.

Scorcher On Thompson

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Dorothy Thompson's scorching articles on Hitler and Hitlerism must have made her so Hitler-conscious that she has unconsciously acquired his hateful habit of flying into a red rage with any who dare differ!

It is high time that columnists who pride themselves on being aces recognize the fact that every American citizen has a right to his viewpoint without being assaulted by such ravings and rantings as she displayed toward the unfortunate Lindbergh. Inasmuch as our country guarantees this right of free speech, it would be well for her to take cognizance of it and temper her columns a little more with the tolerance that goes with that recognition.

Today, if ever, we need the leadership of people who can state their views dispassionately, coolly, calmly and without rancor. But it takes a really great personality to face adverse criticism without losing his head, so I should say that our country could do with ten Lindberghs to one Thompson!

I, for one, and I believe that many other readers will agree, am heartily tired of her constant harpings on the international woes about to befall all and sundry and her tirades against all who take exception to that line of thought. If she would devote half as much of her energy to an analysis of our internal ailments and its subsequent remedies as she does to the international situation she might do our country a real favor. As it is, her articles at times are highly inflammatory and harmful to the calm with which this country should meet present conditions. Besides, I doubt, nay I deny, that any one person is capable of forecasting with complete accuracy coming international conditions—the human factor is too inconstant and variable ever to be tied down to certainty!

Dies Committee And The A. L. P. D.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: My heartiest congratulations for your fine treatment of the Dies Committee's publication of the American League for Peace and Democracy list. In the present wave of war hysteria it is very reassuring to see that one Washington paper took time to reason out the implications of this most un-American action of the Dies Committee.

Although I don't work for the Government, and haven't for 2½ years, I am proud to have my name listed along with these other members of a splendid American organization. JANET GAINES.
Washington, Oct. 26.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial and Elderman's cartoon this morning will not hurt the Dies Committee in the least. The public knows that you are inclined to favor the left-wingers.

HENRY McAFEE.
Washington, Oct. 26.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: My name appeared in the papers of October 25 as a member of the American League for Peace and Democracy. The news article also stated that the list of members that appeared in the press would be incorporated in the record of the proceedings of your committee.

I would like to correct an error that appeared in connection with my name, so that it will appear correctly in the records of the committee. Next to my name there appeared in parentheses the notation "(Mrs. Henry Rhine)." I wish to inform you that I am not and have never been Mrs. Henry Rhine. My correct married name is Mrs. David Rein. In addition, my correct address is 1737 New Hampshire avenue northwest. Although I formerly lived at 1020 Monroe street northwest, I have never lived at 1734 Pennsylvania avenue northwest or 1713 H street northwest.

I would appreciate corrections before the record finally appears in print. SELMA RICE.
Washington, Oct. 26.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I thank you for the editorial, "Mr. Dies Explains," in The Post of October 26. I say this as a person whose name was published as a member of the American League for Peace and Democracy. I agree with all that was stated in the editorial. ERNEST J. WOLFE.
Washington, Oct. 26.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Don't you think Mr. Dies must be awfully hard up for a new appropriation to pick on an open and above board organization like the A. L. P. D. and plaster it with accusations?

NOT-A-MEMBER-OF-THE-LEAGUE.

Minority Patriotism

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post of October 24 carried the announcement that the British Parliament would shortly discuss the question of India's self-rule. British statesmen had decided to defer consideration of Dominion status for India until after the war. But Gandhi and his followers insist upon immediate action, on threat of civil disobedience through passive resistance. This is demanded as the preliminary price for cooperation with the war of the Allies against Germany.

The airing of group grievances at this time of national emergency greatly embarrasses the Allies, not only because it jeopardizes their chances of success but also because it emphasizes the hollowness of their claim that they are fighting to uphold the democratic ideal. In view of the political and civil disabilities imposed upon the majority of British subjects, the democratic pretension fails to make either logic or consistency in the astute Hindoo mind.

The Irish irreconcilables refuse to cooperate whole-heartedly with the other Dominions while their own grievances remain unredressed and continue to constitute a thorn in the flesh of the British Empire.

The United States is composed of a cosmopolitan population united by the bond of patriotism and baptized in the faith of democracy. The off-colored contingent is the only group with a long standing and deep-seated grievance. And yet the Negro perseveres in hope and belief that the democratic ideal of equality for all citizens will be early or ultimately realized.

Unlike Gandhi and his followers the Negro never allows his grievances, however justly grounded, to daunt his loyalty or dampen his patriotism. KELLY MILLER.
Washington, Oct. 25.

"Innocent Victims"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Traffic Director Van Duzer is to be commended for reminding the motorist that "pedestrians in the District have a guaranteed right of way over vehicles if they leave a curb on proper signals." This obvious right is, however, frequently violated in Washington even in the presence of police officers. Our fellow citizens do not yet seem fully awake to the frightful significance of the fact that automobiles in this country continue to kill, cripple and maim human beings greatly in excess of the total casualties suffered by our armed forces during the World War. The English and French are meeting the threat of air invasion with bomb-proof shelters, balloon barriers, antiaircraft guns, and wholesale evacuation of children from danger zones.

The people of America, on the other hand, faced in peacetime with a menace just as deadly as the bombing plane, are apparently not even aware of the danger. Against the swift ponderous projectiles on wheels, whizzing in swarms through crowded thoroughfares, and spreading death and destruction everywhere, we continue to make only puny efforts to defend ourselves by erecting occasional and confusing traffic lights at busy intersections, or by passing hundreds of feeble and unenforceable traffic ordinances.

As long as we remain indifferent and apathetic to the appalling menace of the automobile, so long will our hospitals remain filled with its innocent victims.

The Post Impressionist

The Grateful Lioness

Whenever people ask me to tell them my most beautiful memories, I have to tell them of my friendship with Gori, a fine Berber lioness, whom I sort of loved at first sight and who hated me at first sight. For between a beast-tamer and his animals—just as between human beings, there exist sympathies and antipathies. Anyhow this young lion lady certainly did not love me at all.

It was in the beginning of 1928 that I obtained Gori together with a couple of male lions in Marseilles.

I sat in front of Gori's cage contemplating her and letting her contemplate me. We were going to be companions, so we had to get well acquainted and learn to understand each other.

After some time I had come so far that I could risk entering Gori's cage and after five weeks I could use the intelligent animal in a group of lions as hoop-jumpers and made her perform several tricks. Gori obeyed me, sat down on a pedestal, lay down, yes I even dared to put my head in her mouth without any fear of afterwards having to bow a headless body to the public.

All the same, however, I dared not trust this cat. There was something in Gori's eyes which bode no good. There was a look of an enemy, a female attacker for whom I had to be constantly on my guard and upon whom I had to impress my good will.

I therefore took every precaution when I worked with Gori—but could not prevent her one day from pawing me on the head, so that the blood gushed all over my face; and another time, during a show in Olmutz, from biting me in the shoulder all but to the bone.

This proud animal queen was my irreconcilable enemy, until the day when the miracle occurred which made of Gori my truest and most devoted friend.

Gori was expecting a baby and it was in Liverpool that she was to become a mother. It was her first litter and she suffered terribly.

I was sitting in the circus restaurant having a glass of beer, when the keeper came rushing in and cried, "The lioness is dying."

I ran to the cage where I found Gori shaking all over and roaring frightfully in her agony, then she sat up but threw herself on her back and turned around again—a picture of torment and deep suffering.

As I watched her struggling helplessly, I felt that I could not stand idle any longer. Something had to be done—and at once. Before the circus attendants, rushing up from all sides, had been able to prevent my entering the cage where they expected me to be torn to pieces even before I should have closed the door, I was at the side of the suffering animal.

Gori came up to me even as a sick, agonizing human being would come up to the doctor of whom he expected relief of his pains. I went down on my knees and Gori, trembling all over, put her mighty head to my breast. She embraced me with her heavy stiff paws even as a human being in unbearable physical agony would cling to another human being to implore his help and support and to seek shelter.

I caressed Gori, soothed her, massaged her, spoke soft nice words. I talked with her in a friendly way, I buoyed her up even as a doctor would hearten up a patient. The animal seemed to quiet down and the pain seemed to decrease. But as soon as I made a movement as if I was going to leave her, Gori pressed herself closer to me.

In this way I remained for nearly half an hour with Gori in her cage. And then she gave birth, first to a dead lion cub and afterwards at short intervals there came three live cubs, little, blind, fluffy gray balls.

As soon as the birth was over, I stayed for a couple of minutes with the appeased animal who was now freed from pain. Gori was a happy mother and in the following weeks I often went to see her when she fed her young.

And then it happened. Gori did not hate me any longer. Really, she loved me. The memory of my aid had anchored in her soul. Gori, my former bitter enemy, whom I did not dare to trust, who had wanted to kill me, now met me with true friendship even with marked tenderness.

For the sake of my deed she seemed to have forgiven both me and humanity. She had completely changed. When I showed my face at the bars of her cage, she came up to me and kissed me. When I called her name, she came immediately. This wonderful animal became more attached to me than any other animal I ever knew. Since my experience with Gori, I am quite prepared to believe the moving story of Androcles and the grateful lion.

It seemed as if Gori rather enjoyed dancing with me during the evening performances. I could trust her implicitly now, we understood each other completely, my Gori and I, and she was and remained my most reliable cooperator and truest friend until her death.

She died some years ago in Eastern Europe.

But I shall never forget Gori.

More On Reno

INASMUCH as the Reno Mayor took me for a ride in the mountains, the Lieutenant Governor bought me a drink, the Chamber of Commerce gave me a lot of booklets and a deputy warden showed me the lethal chamber at the prison and a man condemned to go about Thanksgiving, I feel an obligation of courtesy to say that the air in Reno is bracing and the sunshine glorious on the golden autumn trees and that the moral conditions apparently are as sanitary as those of any other city of equal size.

The Lieutenant Governor, Mr. Sullivan, is a lawyer who deals in divorce and holds that counsel in this line sometimes prevent grievous crime and save life, citing support of this proposition remarks by distraught ladies to the effect that if they couldn't divorce their husbands they would shoot their way out of wedlock.

I was received, too, with distinguished courtesy by the Governor, Mr. Carvill, an alumnus of Notre Dame, class of '09, who has fortunately escaped the somber duty of deciding whether the bad but amazingly brave man in the death house might live in prison until God's own time or must die by gas in a room behind ice box doors not six feet from the cell in which he whiles away the sunny hours of his last days on earth swatting flies.

Slayer Chooses Death Instead Of Life Term

A GAMBLING house dealer by trade, this victim of his own rage met his estranged wife attended by another man at a country dance, killed her and two others, affirmed his conviction that he had only done something which required doing, and, when offered a chance to spend the rest of his life in the unrelieved idleness in which some 300 other men and boys fester in the prison, resolutely elected to die and have done with it. He thus spared Gov. Carvill the most painful trial of soul that befalls a man in American public life short of the duty to vote for or against war in Congress, and earned the awe of men less stanch. The Governor, it will be seen, may not even reward this kindness by sparing his life, for the condemned gambler has the option, and the only gift within the executive power consistent with the public weal would be ill-received.

This civility disposed of, I proceed to report that aside from her normal commerce with her sister States, Nevada has developed a unique practice, in part a sly and cynical racket but not altogether so. Nevada solicits the divorce business of those who must divorce, brazenly invites Californians to evade—and substantially violate—the requirements of the marriage laws of their own State, and even more boldly tempts Californians and others to establish legal but fictitious residence within her borders to escape paying their taxes, which Mr. Roosevelt once described as the price of civilization.

Competition Forced Drop In Residence

IT IS KNOWN, of course, that Nevada, under pressure of competition, dropped from six months to six weeks the period required for the establishment of a legal resident sufficient for the purposes of divorce. There is a pretense that this was done merely for her own convenience. But the insincerity of that is apparent in the fact that in Reno alone, a city with a fairly static population of about 20,000 of all ages, there have been 26,152 divorces in a little less than nine years. If the convenience of divorce were intended primarily for the people of Nevada a limit of one year or five would be convenient enough for the actual residents to not hurry by.

As a sop to her conscience and a pin to hold up her self-respect Nevada insists that, conceding everything, her laws of convenience and subterfuge are nevertheless a redress of impositions on the individual by the laws of other States. There is something to that, although Nevada's motives are not Samaritan.

Divorces To Suit The Pocketbooks

ILL-MATCHED persons may divorce easily, in privacy and with no more expense than they can afford. The rich pay high, the poor pay low, and a scioness from Palm Beach, biding her time in Reno, may be served at table or manicured by a sister in trouble temporarily employed at the minimum wage of $3 a day, whose own divorce signed by the same judge will be as good as one that costs $10,000 in counsel fees. The colored chauffeur of a rich divorcing man from Hollywood, putting in six weeks with the boss, decided that he would get divorced, too, seeing that he was on the ground, and got his decree the same day.

The wisdom of California's gin-marriage law may be challenged, but the blood test, or dog bite statute, was adopted to protect innocents, particularly babies.

That Nevada, having no such social and hygienic qualms, would attract a few elopers was to be expected, but the community could be in better business than that of enticing thousands of persons whose very preference for Nevada, under the circumstances, invites suspicion. In fact, the suspicion is the subject of so much ribald wit, not only in Reno but in California, that it may presently embarrass the marriage racket to death.

Germany's Weak Link

By Ray Brock

Will The Reich Be Starved Out?

Brussels.

GERMANY'S certain defeat is already forecast by loyal Germans who have seen and felt the fatal hole in the formidable armor-plate of the Third Reich.

"We will collapse inside, fighting for bread in the streets, and the English will have their empty victory over a starving people!

"But first the English will have had the fight of their selfish lives and they will pay in blood and untold agony and destruction—the price for the death of the Feuhrer and the National Socialist German government!"

The speaker was a respected German journalist, a brilliant pre-Hitler veteran of the once great Frankfurter Zeitung, a writer and analyst of unquestioned shrewdness who remains loyal today to the Nazi party which he joined in 1933. Call him Dr. Schmidt, for that is not his name, and absolute anonymity is the price of his analysis of why Hitler Germany will perish in what he firmly believes to be an unjust war forced by Great Britain. His arguments in support of his judgment about war-blame are familiar: they are virtually the same as Hitler's. We are concerned here with his admission of eventual German collapse and his reasons for it.

"THE HOHENZOLLERN Empire fell in 1918—it started disintegrating in 1917 . . ." said Dr. Schmidt, "because British and American sea-power was starving the German populations of the great cities, and finally the German soldiers in the trenches.

"In that last war our armies held control of all the resources of Poland, the Ukraine, parts of Russia, Serbia, Rumania, Belgium and the Saar. Our armies could have gone on fighting with an abundance of cannon, rifles, machine guns—yes, and even airplanes. But Winston Churchill and the British fleet and your own American fleet were starving us. Our wives and our children were hungry.

"Not for nothing did Ludendorff move troops back into the cities in 1917. The soldiers were sent back to kill men who had been left behind, men who were beginning to cry for an end to war because the people were hungry. Our history books do not tell of this because our leaders have tried to shield the people from this terrible chapter in the lives of this generation. But most of us elders remember . . ."

THE GRAY-HAIRED Nazi journalist described street riots at Frankfort, Munich, Berlin, Leipzig. "Yes," he said, "some of us remember.

"Ancient history tells a story like this. The Greeks held the seas and saved their civilization from Asiatic armies. Rome held the seas to vanquish Carthage. She lost the seas and she was overwhelmed. Look in later history. Napoleon was master of the world until Trafalgar. Yes, Britannia rules the waves! And she will kill our leaders and our government this time. But we have an air arm and Britain will feel our might before we go down before her.

"When we went to war in 1914," said Dr. Schmidt, "we were a rich empire with enormous trade and industry, a great gold reserve and investments abroad. We are forced into this war today at a time when we are still struggling for our rights to new riches, industry and trade. We are a people poor in gold but rich in spirit and courage." His voice fell. "But I am almost an old man and I have seen what a test of courage is required when the stomach is empty and a man's family is starving.

"It is no secret now, facing the third month of this unjust war, that Germany is already tightening her belt. Some of our leaders have great hopes of food and materials from our new ally, Russia, but I have been to Russia and I fear the worst.

"I have seen the Russian people and they are hungry, too, in the middle of plenty. Stalin is a great man of vast wisdom and immense foresight, a man comparable to Hitler, but his peoples are not Germans. He can issue his orders and back them up with bayonets, but he cannot teach his peoples in a quarter century what they have never known for dark ages."

DR. SCHMIDT extracted the 10 p. m. edition of "L'Independance Belge" from his overcoat pocket and pointed to a news item reporting the dispatch of six German "economic experts" to the Soviet.

"That," he said, "is shoddy reporting. We have sent hundreds, probably more than a thousand, engineers and specialists—mining, smelting, railroad, munitions men—oh, they have been going by trainloads and boatloads since late August. They are already at work putting the Russian resources in order for our use in this war.

"But Russia's industry, her railroads and her mines, like her stupendous farmlands, are disorganized, wasted. The machinery is rusting, the railroads broken down, the fields cultivated only to a tenth of their potential yield. To our land-hungry, trade-hungry peoples in Germany, our efficient, workmanlike peoples, Russia is a, a mess! She is a mess of badly assembled production lines, leaking mines, rusting machines and railroads. You couldn't put the Soviet together in less than years. If we could do it sooner, we would win! But——" Dr. Schmidt's voice had something of desperation in it, "we cannot, and we must lose, go down fighting, starving—but we may take England with us!"

DR. SCHMIDT now questioned earnestly, pleadingly. "Do you think there will be revolution in England or her colonies if times go hard in this war of her making—if her people are made to suffer bombs as we will suffer starvation?"

In all honesty, I told him I did not think so; that there might be a severe shakeup in her ruling classes—in the government, if there were a series of severe crises; in India, perhaps, a strengthening of the congress by demands that could not be refused in time of European war.

His face grew more gloomy. "We still hope in Germany today that England's selfish rulers will be deposed and that her downtrodden colonies will strike for freedom. But I do not understand the English people. The German people do not understand the English people. It is a pity, for the men who rule England do not understand us . . ."

"To keep fighting—with or without food—we must have manganese, mercury, copper, nickel, aluminum and other minerals and materials that we are almost without. Some of them we can get through the Scandinavian states by trade or force, if necessary. But again the blockade by the British, with French help, is beginning to tighten.

"We are an ingenious people," said Dr. Schmidt proudly. "As the Fuehrer says, we have genius and inventiveness like no other peoples on earth. Our synthetic rubber is not too good, but it may be made to work. Our artificial textiles are good and useful.

"Oil! We must have oil for our trucks, our tanks—gasoline for our thousands of fighting planes. We must have oil and we shall get it. You know the ways of politics and diplomacy and so you know that we have been delayed in our plans for Rumania. But we will have oil. You will see. Carol of Rumania is nobody's friend. He plays, as you Americans say, 'both ends against the middle.' But he will have to make up his mind—maybe sooner than anybody is expecting. We must have oil."

Now he pointed to some of the figures.

"OUR engineers will force Russian oil production upward rapidly within a year to more than 50,000,000 tons. True, Russia's own army is using about 25,000,000 tons now, but with our forces protecting Russia's western flank, she can demobilize much of her army of the west. There will be more oil. And do not forget that we are not through with Carol and his double-dealing in Rumania. He cannot play his game with Germany!"

Dr. Schmidt caught himself quickly.

"We cannot eat oil," he said softly.

In the little silence that followed, Dr. Schmidt watched the rain falling in the street. He spoke half dreamily.

"Some of that rain is falling on German soil, enriching it for growing food, raising feed for our cattle . . ." He relapsed into silence for a moment. Then.

"We were at peace! It was an armed peace, but England forced us to arm in order to make our voice heard at the world council tables.

"In 1914 a Hohenzollern carried us into a war and ruin because he wanted 'a place in the sun' for Germany. Now, in 1939, the British ruling classes are leading the world against us because we have found a place in the sun, a place too near that of the British Empire."

Dr. Schmidt rose suddenly and stiffly. It was almost a military gesture. One expected him to click his heels.

"One thing is certain," he said, "In a world full of the complexities of men's making, the old order will not survive. England may strangle us and Germany will lose, but England will lose, too—and she will never be the same again. We have been forced to fight and we will go down fighting, collapsing inside with a roar that will be heard around the world! Before Germany falls she may strike the blow that will spell destruction to the British Empire!"

Keep Out, Chief Aim

House Victory Seen

AS THE NEW neutrality bill goes from Senate to House, it faces an easier path—but a closer decision. In the House, vocal opposition, debate, will be less than in the Senate—partly because the Senate has said all that can be said, partly because the House had its own debate on substantially the same bill in the regular session last summer.

Yet observers feel, at this time, that the vote in the House will be close. Prevailingly, the House favors the new measure. Prevailingly, members of the House feel, as a matter of individual judgement, that the President's proposed measure is better than the existing law. The expected victory for the President's measure in the House will be a victory of individual conscience and judgment, over popular pressure.

For it is the common experience of House members that the net sentiment of their districts opposes the President's measure. The House has had more time than the Senate to assay the deluge of letters that poured in upon Congress when the special session began. A member of the House assaying these letters is able to identify those which are inspired by organized propaganda. Dismissing those, the remaining letters are expressions of the opinions, and the apprehensions, of serious men and women so deeply concerned as to write thoughtful letters to their Congressmen. Of letters of this type, a majority oppose the President's measure.

'Keep Out Of War' Is Main Thought

WHAT IS IN the minds of the writers of these letters, and of most Americans, is to stay out of war. The letters are written primarily to say to the Congressman "Keep us out of war." Because the existing law forbids absolutely the shipment of armament to belligerents, and because this sounds convincingly like avoiding war, letter writers expand their messages to say, in effect: "In order to keep out of the war, vote to continue the embargo on arms."

The truth is, from the point of view of keeping out of the war, the two measures—the existing one and the President's proposal—do not differ greatly in their effect. A Congressman guided solely by the wish to keep America out of the war might as conscientiously vote one way as the other. After the vote has been taken, there need be no reproach upon either those who favor the President's measure or those who oppose it. The roll call upon this measure ought not to be an issue in the primaries and election next year, in which every seat in the House will be contested. Some aspect of war, of America's relation to it, probably will be an issue next year. But the issue ought not to be the one upon which the House is shortly to vote.

Proposed Measure Embargoes All Goods

COMPARE THE TWO measures. The existing law, stated briefly and omitting minor features, does this: It divides all goods into two groups. One group is armament. This kind of goods, the existing law forbids absolutely to be sold to any belligerent under any conditions whatever. But the other kind of goods, nonarmament goods—foodstuffs, cotton, materials (including the materials out of which armament can be made)—is permitted to be sold to belligerents freely. This kind of goods can be sold for unlimited credit, and shipped upon American ships. In short, under existing law, the sale of ordinary goods, nonarmament goods, is without any limitation whatever.

Turn now to the proposed measure. This makes no distinction between kinds of goods; it puts all goods, armament or nonarmament, under the same restrictions. These restrictions are extremely drastic. No kind of goods, not even children's toys, can be sold to a belligerent nation nor to any citizen of a belligerent nation except for cash. And no American ship is permitted to carry any kind of goods, not even a cargo of golf balls, from the United States to a belligerent nation.

Between those two measures, the difference in drastic quality is not great. As an assertion and evidence of neutrality, as a way for America to keep remote from the war, one measure goes about as far as the other.

Planes Are What Allies Direly Need

IT IS STRANGE these measures should be looked upon as so different, should have given rise to such debate. Compare them from the standpoint of Britain and France. In the long run, it could be argued that Britain and France would be more helped by the existing law than by the proposed one. In the long run they would be more helped by being able to buy without any limitation all goods excepting armament, to buy such goods on credit and have them delivered in American ships—which is the existing law.

But it is the short-run that Britain and France think about. For the short run, they prefer the proposed measure—because it permits them to buy armament, even though under the restrictions of the cash-and-carry method.

Especially it is airplanes that Britain and France need, airplanes as quickly as possible and as many as possible. To a greater extent than is yet realized, this will be an airplane war—as planned by Germany it was to be a "lightning war," a war from the sky. While Britain and France have been making airplanes desperately, they need still more.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The War Without Battles

IF THERE IS a mystery about the quiet on the Western Front, the explanation can only be found inside of Germany. The position of the Allies is clear enough. They have nothing to gain and everything to lose by waging an offensive war.

They are besieging Germany by sea and land, and their blockade is even more effective as the neutrals of northern Europe, the Balkans and the Mediterranean become more and more determined to resist being drawn into the war. But Hitler's position is not so clear. And the question would seem to be whether he is hesitating because he is undecided or whether he is waiting because he is preparing a great surprise.

Waiting Tactics Used To Tire Out Allies

THE PRUDENT assumption is that he is preparing some sort of attack, and that he is using these waiting tactics to tire out the Allies and throw them off their guard. If he does mean to launch an attack in force, say by mass bombing, or by an invasion of Holland, Belgium or Switzerland, or against the Maginot Line, or by the use of some new weapon, his chance to succeed would be greater if he could cause the Allies to relax their vigilance.

It would, therefore, be suicidal for the British and French to act on any other view of the situation than that there is just now a tactical lull before the great storm breaks. And they will never be sure that the storm is not going to break until the war is definitely concluded.

Hitler May Be Genuinely Puzzled

THIS VIEW is not altogether inconsistent, however, with the belief that Hitler may, in fact, be hesitating. It may well be that he is genuinely puzzled and that he is waiting now, as he has so often waited in the past, to be inspired. Then, if his intuition tells him to attack, the present lull may help him to take his enemies by surprise; and if his intuition tells him that he must do something else, his army and his air force will not have been used up.

Though only Hitler and his immediate advisers really know whether he has made his decision, there are good reasons for thinking that he has not yet made it. Or perhaps it would be better to say that the reasons for hesitating would be good reasons for any normal statesman and for any patriotic German. They would even have been good reason for Hitler himself until he reversed his whole policy and threw away the chart which he had followed so faithfully, and with such outward success, until the spring and summer of this year.

No Dependable Ally For Hitler's Germany

THE CONSIDERATION which must make any sane German pause before unloosing a total war in the west is that unless the attack brings a decisive and swift and inexpensive victory, the impairment or destruction of the army will make the future of Germany extremely perilous. Hitler's Germany has no dependable ally and among all the nations of the world not a single friend. Italy, Japan, Spain and Hungary are estranged. Whatever may be the real intentions of Russia, it is certain that Germany cannot hope to deal successfully with Russia if the power of her army is seriously weakened.

A strong Germany may hope to divide eastern Europe with Russia and to fix a limit to the Russian advance into the west; a strong Germany may perhaps hope to obtain assistance from Russia. But a weak Germany could neither resist the advance, nor compel the respect, nor command the support, of Russia. Even with his army intact and with the prestige of his Polish campaign still high, Hitler has had to pay a staggering price for the Russian arrangement. There can be little doubt that if Germany were still weaker, the Russian price would be still higher.

Offensive Failure Would Be Fatal

WHEN WE EXAMINE the German position in the west, it becomes doubly evident that, unless there is almost perfect certainty of a swift, decisive, and inexpensive victory, it would be a fatal blunder to attempt a great offensive. If it fails after what the Nazi propaganda calls a blood bath, the enraged democracies will be in no mood for an early peace: but even more importantly, the German nation will have been deprived of the only sure guaranty against another Versailles.

That guaranty is the German army. For if peace is concluded with the army still effectively in being, there will be a negotiated peace in which Germany would come to the conference table as a great power. But if Hitler shatters his army in the west, and then loses the war, Germany will be helpless as against the Russians in the east and the Allies on the west.

Germany Placed In Ticklish Spot

BARRING ALWAYS the chance of a lightning victory over the Allies, it is almost impossible to imagine how Hitler can extricate Germany from the dilemma in which he has placed her. In order to get peace in the west, Hitler and the Nazi party must, at the very minimum, abdicate in fact even if the improbable happens and a face-saving concession is made which does not require Hitler to abdicate in appearance. On the other hand, in order to make the partnership with Russia a thorough going alliance, the Nazis would have to effect the final social revolution inside Germany by purging and liquidating the remaining conservatives in the army, the bureaucracy, and business.

There are some who think that this is the road that Hitler is now fatally destined to take. But if he does take it, he will disorganize Germany by bolshevising it, and Germany will still be on the horns of the dilemma! Hopelessly dependent on Russia and at the mercy of the Allies.

THERE IS PERHAPS one more possibility and that is to wait, endure the Allied siege, and to hope that in a prolonged war of nerves the morale of the free peoples will be less firm than that of the regimented German nation. Hitler might decide to test out that notion. Then the outcome may depend not only upon whether the Allies can remain always alert and vigilant against a smashing surprise attack but also steadfast in waiting until their accumulated power is such that they will have won the war without having to fight a great battle.

Goldfish And War

("London.—People here are urged to keep goldfish as a war antidote. An aquarium is lauded as a good thing, doctors say, because in watching the fish the mind is soothed and taken off troubles."—News item.)

I.

When air raids are impending
And incidents abound
I like to watch my goldfish
Go 'round and 'round and 'round;
The element I swim in
Is now so badly churned,
I wish I knew how goldfish
Could seem so unconcerned.

II.

They get along so sweetly
Without a show of gloom,
And never issue statements
About more "breathing room;"
Their world is far from spacious,
Their setup's very wrong,
They haven't any future,
And still they get along!

III.

They know of no disasters,
They get no bulletins;
With all the world so shaken
They barely move their fins;
They've never heard from Stalin—
They're quite beyond his reach—
And—what a break!—they never
Can hear a Hitler speech.

IV.

No blood lines can distress 'em—
They never feel much pain,
If any, over questions
Involving racial strain;
When space for great expansion
Fills all this world with talk
I sit and watch my goldfish,
Which never make a squawk.

V.

I've studied them intently—
They calmly take their fate
Without the least expression
Of envy or of hate;
They do not thump each other,
Or rage or shove or growl . . .
I wonder if my world is

VI.

What's happening at Scapa
My goldfish never know;
If all the world goes crashing
Their thought is "Let 'er go!"
And at one strange reflection
My heart with envy fills . . .
They'll never have a gas mask
Shoved back around their gills!

Senate Passes Neutrality Bill

Liveliest Senate debate yesterday centered on the amendment of Senator La Follette, (Progressive), of Wisconsin, to require an "advisory" war referendum before Congress could declare war.

Rejected 73 to 17

A variation on the old Ludlow war referendum amendment to the Constitution, formerly defeated in the House, the La Follette plan would not bind Congress to follow referendum results, and no election would be held if this country was attacked or threatened with attack.

After an afternoon of debate, the LaFollette plan was overwhelmed 73 to 17.

Sent down to defeat in yesterday's 10-hour session were the following amendments:

By Senator Clark, of Missouri—To restore the existing embargo on arms shipments to belligerents. Rejected, 60 to 33.

By Senator Danaher (Republican), of Connecticut—Requiring shippers to certify that goods sold to belligerents have been paid for "in lawful money of the United States." Defeated, viva voce.

By Senator Danaher—Making financial and credit restrictions in bill retroactive to September 3. Shouted down.

By Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina—To require aliens to certify they will make no statement in this country designed to influence the United States foreign policy, and to deport them if they do. Defeated, viva voce.

By Senator Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire—A proposal to hold Congress here for duration of the war. Rejected, voice vote.

By Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota—To substitute a drastic new cash and carry bill for the Administration measure, retaining the arms embargo, and placing quotas on exports. Rejected 67 to 22.

By Senator Nye—Restoring present law prohibitions against transshipment of American arms from neutrals to belligerents. Killed by voice vote.

By Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana—To reconsider vote by which the Senate earlier refused to add two Senators and two members of the House to the Munitions Control Board. Failed, 50 to 43.

By Senator Clark, of Missouri—To bar by statute entry of armed merchant vessels of belligerents into American ports or territorial waters. Rejected, 65 to 26.

By Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont, an embargo repeal advocate—To suspend all provisions of the neutrality bill once the President revokes his foreign war proclamations. Defeated by voice vote.

Amendments Approved

Relatively minor amendments approved were:

By Senator Connally—Exempting from the bill's sharp shipping restrictions American vessels which have been seven days en route to belligerent ports when the law takes effect. Approved by voice vote.

By Senator Johnson (Republican), of California—To exempt films shipped to belligerent countries from the bill's requirement that title first be transferred. Approved viva voce.

By Senator Gillette—Clarifying requirement that shipper must file with collector of port statement that title has been passed to belligerent purchaser, and that shipper will comply with future regulations.

By Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah—Requiring masters of foreign vessels to give bond that no foreign seamen aboard their vessels will remain in this country.

An amendment by Senator Gillette, prohibiting dealings in securities of belligerent governments issued before the President's "state of war" proclamation, was first approved and later stricken out at the vigorous demand of Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado.

Brush on Preamble

Adams charged the amendment would "reach back and depreciate, almost invalidate," peacetime securities of belligerents in this country, and make them unavailable for use for purchasing foodstuffs in this country.

The Senate's brisk round on Connally's proposed "preamble" came as an anticlimax to action on the bill. The chair had blocked the Texan's presentation of the preamble until after the bill passed. Clark charged it had been framed by "a little caucus" of Senate Democrats, and was not a correct presentation of the bill's purposes.

Wheeler joined the attack, to charge the preamble was "nothing more than a stump speech" smacking of "politics." Connally, Foreign Relations Chairman Pittman and Senator Maloney (Democrat), of Connecticut, flew to the rebuttal. Maloney replied that Wheeler was "making the stump speech" and Pittman declared Wheeler was "excited like most people who have been defeated.

"Just because you've been licked, you can't take it; you haven't got the courage to take it," shouted Connally. He said the opposition was "using the methods of a backroom domino parlor."

Asks Where Geysers Are

Wheeler sat smiling while Connally charged him with "spouting like one of those geysers in——." At this point the Texan leaned over and asked Wheeler where the geysers were located.

"The legislation speaks for itself," Wheeler had declared. "Why inject politics into it with this preamble?"

Connally said his purpose in the preamble was to serve notice that America was "not surrendering one jot or tittle of its rights under international law" by the legislation and was taking "no craven, or cowardly attitude."

Preamble Withdrawn

When Walsh entered the discussion to propose that the preamble be amended to declare America's purpose to "keep out of wars" except those affecting its own safety, Connally withdrew his preamble. Connally said the House bill already carries a preamble "and the matter can be worked out in conference."

Before the row broke, Majority Leader Barkley announced the leadership's intention to move for sine die adjournment of Congress immediately after final House and Senate action on the bill.

The personal clash between Pittman and Clark came during heated debate on the war referendum proposal.

"Pettifogging," Says Clark

The Missouri Democrat had just declared "that in all my life I have never heard more suggestions of a pettifogging nature in so short a time, as I have heard this afternoon upon this amendment."

"Just a moment," snapped Pittman; "does the Senator include my remarks in his statement?"

"Some of the remarks of the Senator might be classed in that category, but I will withdraw the statement," replied Clark.

"No, the Senator will not withdraw it," said Pittman. "He has a habit in his conceit and vanity and lack of ethics of engaging in such expressions. I want to have the pleasure of answering him."

Both Ordered to Seats

"I call the Senator to order for making personal remarks," retorted Clark.

"I will take my seat," said Pittman, "but I suppose the Senator does not think he is pettifogging at all."

"Both Senators will take their seats," shouted Senator Lucas (Democrat), of Illinois, who was presiding.

Senator La Follette immediately moved that both Senators be permitted to proceed "in order" and the Senate by a voice vote gave them that privilege.

Debate on Referendum

Pittman said he had "nothing more to say" and Clark resumed his speech, without reference to the incident.

Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas; Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, and Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, took the floor to criticize the referendum proposal, while Clark, La Follette, Senator Frazier (Republican), of North Dakota, and Nye spoke for it.

Connally charged the La Follette amendment would "make mannikins and Edgar Bergens" out of Senators, by making them refer back to the voters before they voted on a war issue. Galleries laughed and the chair tapped for order as Connally mentioned Bergen instead of the ventriloquist's "Charlie."

"Thought We Had Brains"

"The people of this country think they have elected to Congress more than a suit of clothes and a stuffed shirt," said the Texan. "They put us in here because they thought we had brains enough to act for them. We've been here on this little resolution for four weeks. How long do you think it would take 130,000,000 people not informed on the issue to decide a question?"

Gish Girls and Mother Believe Inner Repose Keeps Them Young

THIS STARTED out to be a heart-to-heart talk with Lillian and Dorothy Gish, who are always being stopped on the street—often by perfect strangers—and told, with beautiful sincerity, "You don't look a day older than when you starred in 'Orphans of the Storm.'"

How long ago that was is not the point and you can look it up yourself! The point is they looked very young then, and they still do! And since their astonishingly youthful appearance is entirely natural and they give no indication of having to work for it at all, it seemed to me that they might have stumbled on some priceless formula which should, by all means, be handed right along to their fellow-women.

Lillian Gish was in California, but Dorothy Gish said come on up. And then I met Mrs. Mary Gish, who is a real beauty and almost as incredibly young looking as her two daughters. You can do your own conjecturing about Mrs. Gish's age, too.

Sleep 10 Hours a Night

Anyway she beleives that an inner repose is the thing most important to any woman's looks. If you can cultivate serenity, then you are not so likely to overwork your face by twisting your mouth into grimaces of pleasure or unhappiness, and by wrinkling your brow into lines that even a plastic surgeon can't do anything about.

Her daughters believe in it, too. Something seems to work for them, and that may be what it is. At any rate, the formula helps them all get their beauty sleep—and that certainly wards off the crow's feet! Both the sisters like plenty of sleep. Dorothy gets about 10 hours a night and so does Lillian.

Tied up with this talent for relaxation is an exercise program. She does take a long, brisk walk every single day and she gets enough exercise swimming and working and playing around their farm that she keeps extremely supple. For instance, she has no trouble at all assuming the Lotus posture that is so difficult for a good many Yogi students. You might like to try it:

Lillian Exercises Every Day

Sit on the floor and rest the sole of the left foot upon the right thigh, and the sole of the right foot upon the left thigh. If you can do that without tying yourself in a knot, you can then sit there and think how strong you're making your tummy muscles. Dorothy weighs 110 pounds, is 5 feet, 3 and has these measurements: Bust, 33 inches; waist, 24 inches; hips, 36 inches.

Lillian exercises every day and has a varied program of calisthenics. She is 5 feet, 3 inches tall, weighs 110 pounds, and has these measurements: Bust, 31 inches; waist, 23 inches; hips, 34½ inches. Both sisters have very slight frames.

The entire family is more or less food concious. They are all careful to eat their vegetables. Dorothy Gish says, "I'm a vegetarian—until I see a nice, juicy steak!"

What they all follow, the repose formula included, is a regular health program.

Green Powder for Red Faces

Anita Louise, movie actress has an evening tip for the fair-skinned girl who spends a day in the wind or sun and becomes over-rosy. Her suggestion is to apply a regular make-up, then dust it over lightly with a pale green powder to tone it down.

Streamlined Ski Suit for 'Teenster

Being almost a grown-up, the 'teen-aged girl has put away her childish fancies for snow suits. She emerges this winter in a professional type of ski suit that is streamlined, lightweight and becoming. This new 1940 version pictured is of Zelan processed cotton poplin, which means it is permanently water-proofed and spot-proofed. The hooded scarlet jacket, lined with fleecy plaid, can be worn either right or wrong side out. The navy blue downhill pants are tapered for minimum wind resistance, lined with cotton kasha and anchored down with elastic "stirrups" for security

Curtain-Hanging Is a Perennial Household Job

New York (AP).—Curtains and curtain-hanging are perennial household problems.

Once the basic principles are mastered, however, the problem seems quite simple.

Two questions are usually asked: How wide? How long?

The answer to the first is: One-and-a-half times the width of the window—for curtains that are not too fine. Twice the width for very fine, soft types.

Length depends on how the window is built. Generally speaking, lace curtains are cut into three lengths: sill, slightly below sill, and floor length.

Curtains cut to sill length are good for high windows—they help minimize their apparent height; they're good for recessed windows, especially in rooms decorated in an informal manner, and for windows under which book cases are built or a radiator has been placed.

Smooth Manners Aid Popularity

HOW TELLTALE are the manners of a girl not used to going out.

When her new beau courteously says, "What would you like to do tonight?" she hesitates awkwardly, finally stammers "Oh! goodness, I don't know—what would you like?" Of course, he'll think she doesn't care.

A socially experienced girl would answer, "Let's go to the movies," or "Let's go dancing"—tactfully fitting her suggestion to her beau's pocketbook.

And if asked to go to a place of doubtful reputation, the girl of poise and breeding evades the question with a pleasant "Not tonight," or "Have you seen the new show at the Capitol?"

Men are always proud to go out with a girl whose dating manners are ace-high. And that's one reason why clever girls check up on etiquette before a big date.

You seem used to little attentions if you let your escort hold your wrap, open doors for you. On returning home, give him your key to unlock your door.

Have you asked your beau to be your guest at a club dance? Courteous to give him the tickets before you leave. If you get "stuck" when dancing, the smooth thing is to look up your escort, suggest the two boys trade partners.

And would you like to be a favorite date for football games? Then remember your etiquette. At a game with a man from a rival school, refrain from cheering your own team.

Your date book is always full when your manners are smooth, charming, correct. Our 40-page booklet, "Etiquette for the Teens," gives you the sophisticated modern, etiquette for movies, dinners, dances, games; when visiting, entertaining, motoring. Discusses the petting question.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "Etiquette for the Teens," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Selling the Femmes

SALESMAN—Now this, Madame, is an exquisite model that should appeal especially to ladies. You see luxury is the motif in all our interiors. Luxury and beauty! You'll note, we're featuring for the first time the smart new two-tone upholstery effect——

CUSTOMER—Is this a six-cylinder?

SALESMAN—What? . . . Oh yes. Now as I was saying, we're carrying out this year the idea of the ensemble in our color schemes—you know the same idea that all smartly dressed ladies like yourself——

CUSTOMER—What kind of a gear shift has it?

SALESMAN—Gear shift? . . . Oh, yes, in just a minute. Now speaking of color, you'll notice that the trim is in beige to match the piping on the upholstery, a little refinement that we feel will appeal particularly to the ladies. And, by the way, isn't that an interesting fabric treatment, that herringbone wool twist? Now if you'd just step inside—

CUSTOMER—What type of engine has this car?

SALESMAN—What? . . . The engine? Oh, yes, we're coming to that. But did you ever see such exquisite fittings, Madame? Now you'll note that this car has two ash trays instead of one. And note how they tie in with the color ensemble. Now if you'll just step inside—

CUSTOMER—Has this a custom body?

SALESMAN—The body? . . . Oh, yes, we'll examine the body in just a minute. You see everything possible has been done for milady's comfort. Now here's a place for the radio—all cleverly concealed under that grill, you see it's in bronze to tie in with the color styling. And here's a little compartment for cigarettes . . . and here's one for the beauty aids . . . and one for perfume . . . and here's a place to keep a book or magazines. And I want you especially, Madame, to note this little bronze flower container that enables a lady to constantly enjoy the beauty of fresh flowers——

CUSTOMER—What horsepower has this car?

SALESMAN—What . . . Oh, er, yes, the horsepower. However, before we leave the color scheme I wish you'd note that instrument board—all in tobacco brown and fawn, to carry out the smart color styling of the upholstery. Now that's a little refinement ladies appreciate—oh, and here's a compartment for gloves just under the instrument board. Now if you'd just get in here behind the wheel——

CUSTOMER—Is the windshield of the new safety glass?

SALESMAN—The windshield? Oh, yes! Now just look at this windshield wiper. It's absolutely noiseless. Now say that two ladies were conversing—but, really, you could see much better if you'd just step inside——

CUSTOMER—How many miles will this car do on a gallon?

SALESMAN—The mileage? . . . Oh yes, that is very important. But I want to call your attention to one more feature of the interior. You'll note that it has the indirect lighting, which is not only smarter, but more flattering, than the old glaring effects. Oh, yes, and now here's a feature of which we're particularly proud—a little magnifying light for applying make-up, as ladies often wish to do just before arriving at a ball . . . a concert . . . or the opera. Now if you'll just PLEASE step inside——Oh, er, I thought you were there . . . Oh—er, Madame! Just a minute! Let me lift that hood for you! Was there something you especially wanted to see there?

CUSTOMER—Yes, I thought I'd take a look at the carbureter and the fan belt, and the steering knuckle.

Mary Haworth's Mail

The Man She Loves Was Insincere, So Girl Banished Him; Suffering Desperately, She Asks Encouragement

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: There must be some encouragement you can give me. I am almost desperate. For weeks I have been smiling to everyone and trying to be congenial with my associates, but behind the mask I am utterly miserable. After a broken love affair several months ago, I tried to take an interest in everything to help forget, or to ease my hurt pride, but all to no avail. I realize now that I love the man more than ever, and I am so unhappy I don't see how I can go on.

None of my friends know the terrible ache in my heart. Knowing how much I cared for the man, they marvel at my decision to stop seeing him when I found that he had not been as sincere as I had thought. They delight in seeing my apparently carefree attitude. If they only knew! I am 25 and have always faced trying issues competently, but this one is insurmountable. I don't feel able to go on acting; it is all such a farce. I fight back tears when others are around, but my pillow is damp every morning, after almost sleepless nights.

I have reached the point where nothing interests me. I can't concentrate long enough to enjoy reading, the movies, others' company, or even my work, which always before was intensely interesting. Even after a delightful trip, the return to familiar scenes caused a flow of bitter emotions to rise in me. And it is necessary that I remain in Washington. I admit that I am quite a sensitive person and regardless of loving the man, I can't go back with him again because of my hurt pride. I can't hold out much longer, so please answer me soon.

Break the Deadlock Between Pride and Passion

DEAR I. G. W.: What you need more than anything else in this crisis is a personal confidante, with whom you can discuss freely and fully the occasion and extent of your current desolation and disillusionment. This might be a consulting psychologist, a kindly and understanding physician who can find the time to give to your problem, a spiritual guide (i. e., pastor or priest), or a completely trustworthy friend, preferably some years your senior, who has likewise known and eventually triumphed over heartbreak.

You need the release of confession, the consolation of sympathetic understanding, the tonic of ironic, humorous or sober philosophical comment which a dispassionate but loyal auditor could supply, in order to regain the equilibrium and perspective which you have lost for the time being. It is a pretty theory, perhaps, that people should suffer interior disaster with stoic outward calm. It is a theme which is often beautifully embroidered in so-called "light fiction." But it is seldom an advisable procedure in real life, since it rapidly brings the average individual to what is known as the "breaking point"—the point at which you are now arrived.

Psychology and psychiatry know of the "cure by catharsis" technique when dealing with potentially destructive emotional conflicts. Once the sufferer gets the conflict out of his system and on the table, so to speak, by the confessional method, he is able to evaluate his objective situation far more clearly. Pride and pretense should be thrown out the window when one's whole personality is being demoralized by an attempt to sustain them—as it is in your case. Far better to weep on a dependable shoulder, figuratively speaking, than to cry into one's pillow, night after night. Solitary grief begets self pity, and self pity begets more anguish, whereas the tears that are shed in another's presence very often turn to a rueful laugh at one's own expense, and that is the inception of a tremendously healthy reaction to the source of one's sorrow.

Much of your bitterness stems from the conviction that you were most cruelly and wantonly betrayed by the man in the case. It would be healthier to accept the fact that you really betrayed yourself, through imposing trust in an unworthy individual. When you can take that attitude, you will have begun to grow in wisdom as a result of the experience, and only through growth can you survive the pain it has inflicted.

Also, there is an equal and opposite lesson to be learned concerning the treacherous aspects of pride-which-sits-in-judgment, and the infantile instinct for quick revenge. Naturally, I do not know to what extent or in what way your beloved betrayed your trust, but it is possible that the present rupture would never have developed had you been more charitable in your judgment, less jealous or possessive in your love, less assiduous in probing the details of his private life or less receptive to malicious reports.

An unconscious, unadmitted realization of this fact, and of the added fact that the punishment you meant to inflict upon the man for his defection has recoiled upon your own head probably contributes largely to your nocturnal torment and waking misery. Having acted hastily and self-righteously, perhaps with the vehement intention of bringing the man to his knees in a paroxysm of remorse, only to find him defiantly unregenerate and yourself completely "out in the cold," as the saying goes, you are now violently torn between passion and pride. When driven by these two masters in opposition, one is brutally belabored, indeed. One's moral integrity and psychological security are sorely threatened, and one has no sane guide by which to act.

The deadlock between pride and passion must be broken. It can be done, I am sure, by substituting straightforward common sense considerations in place of prideful reactions. The way to make this substitution is to talk out the whole problem with a disinterested adviser who is competent to say, after hearing both sides honestly presented, whether you were justified in banishing the man; or whether reconciliation is possible and advisable.

If the break was warranted, you will be helped by your adviser to see both the present and future profits of the move, and that knowledge will sustain you through the ordeal. You will find peace when you know beyond all question that you did the constructive thing. But if you acted in too great haste, and would be showing greatest courage in seeking to heal the breach, put aside pride and made reasonable overtures to the man. If he disdains them or seeks to take advantage of your hard-won meekness, let him go forever, and never be sorry that you did invite the second chance.

M. H.

Sculpture Back For Decoration In the Home

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

The wasp-waist corset isn't the only mauve decade detail that's important on the fashion horizon this fall. In home furnishing, pieces of sculpture and statuary are back in style, but don't get worried for fear your life is going to be cluttered up with a lot of those little bronze statues and bisque cupids that were "in" around the turn of the century.

No, sculpture will be used with more restraint and with more design. That means that fewer pieces will be seen and probably much larger, more important pieces. And the entire room will then be planned to set them off with distinction. Of course the sculpture wants to be worthy of such places of honor. Reproductions of finer pieces from the Louvre are now available in America along with casts of classic pieces. Modern sculpture in plaster, marble, wood, aluminum, copper and terra cotta have verve and freshness even in conventional backgrounds.

Wall brackets and consoles are effective for displaying fine sculpture—so are pedestals, tables of interesting design, mantel shelves and built-in niches. For a background, decide between the rather subtle charm of white marble against white or pastel tones or the dramatic effect of white against a dark wall. Terra cotta is lovely against pine panelling or a biege painted wall. Often a piece of modern sculpture is stunning against a mirror or against a softly draped length of fabric. Consider also the possibilities of lighting sculpture with indirect units or with baby spotlights.

If you are using a collection of small pieces rather than one or two dynamic large pieces, then group them as a together on a hanging wall cabinet or in a niche or a breakfront cabinet. Don't leave small pieces of statuary to fend for themselves scattered alone in different parts of the room—they'll only clutter things up. Whereas a really fine assortment, displayed as a unit, acquires a connoisseurs aura about it.

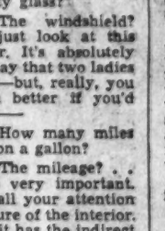
'Miss America 1939' Is Auto Show Smash Hit Without Trying

New York, Oct. 27.

NOT THE MEASLIEST streamlined feature of our Automobile Show has been the presence of "Miss America, 1939," the Atlantic City phenomenon who this year is the fetching Patricia Donnelly of Alabama—19, with brownish-red hair and brown eyes. One of the motor monarchs has hired her to decorate his exhibit, though not without even trying. She's a knockout of a girl.



ALICE HUGHES

But I found, in no time, that Miss Patricia America has both feet firmly on the good earth. The half-witted hullabaloo of Atlantic City is long since over, and Patsy is very wisely seeing what there is in this Miss America racket while the little wheel still spins. Already she has warbled in a Pittsburgh hot-spot, and from here she goes to Detroit to adorn still another exhibit at the automobile bazaar. There are things to sponsor, of course, and she has had the conventional movie screen test—about which she's not too sanguine, she tells me. She figures that if she can net herself $10,000 while wearing the crown of love, beauty and shape she'll be doing all right. No monkey shines for Patsy, I assure you.

Nor is she allergic to the soothing come-ons of our city slickers. Plenty of these fiends in human form would linger near her Wyllis and woo, but Miss America is not having any, thanks. She makes no bones about the fact that her girlish heart belongs at present to a star football player at the University of Alabama, a sturdy youth pushing 180. A word of this to local saps induces them to move along quietly. While these twain are not engaged, exactly, Pasty figures she'll get married in a few years, and has already decided to have five tots. Anyhow, that's what she says at the Auto Show. And she's probably as cool, as well as pretty, a "Miss America" as the Jersey shore has ever elected.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The current Dream Man of our crossroads these days is no long-legged, wavy-haired demi-god from Hollywood, but a little, wispy, gray Italian named—you guessed it—Arturo Toscanini. The greatest living conductor is New York's idol, and it's harder to get a seat for one of his broadcasts in the big studio in Radio City than it is to get a pair in the first row for "Hellzapoppin," our mightiest cultural exhibit. And what reverence the audience shows the little maestro! It rises in an awed hush when he comes out to pick up the magic stick, and after the broadcast they'd have him take bows until dawn, if he would . . .

It is said around town that Toscanini unlaxes after a symphony performance by popping a bottle of champagne. The efficacy of bubble water for this purpose is also a belief of the great Kirsten Flagstad, Norway's prize loan to America . . .

Local girl makes good—again. Mayor LaGuardia has come out with a ringing indorsement for Miss Dorothy Kenyon, whom he appointed to fill out an unexpired term as a justice of the Municipal Court, and who is now running for a full term, which lasts ten years.

LOCAL THEATER-GOERS seemed a bit distressed, one night, by the handbag carried by our Oriental-looking Mrs. "Tokio" Payne. It had little bells on it which jingled with every move, as though openings were not rackety enough without such sartorial monkey-shines! . . .

THE BIG AVENUE MERCHANTS tell me that their business has shown very pleasant increases over that of the fall of 1938—nothing dangerously spectacular, but sound and profitable.

They believe—or at least hope—that this happy condition will continue right up to the eve of Christmas. After that, it will be up to general business condition, and employment. No work, no buy.

Mrs. Thorpe Honors Musical Comedy Star

Peter Chambers, of 'Very Warm for May' Cast, Gives a Delightful Impromptu Guitar and Vocal Program at Tea

By Hope Ridings Miller,

DELIGHTFULLY DIFFERENT was the tea given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. George C. Thorpe at her home at 3218 Woodley Road. Guest of honor was Peter Chambers, who has a divine voice and a role in the current Kern-Hammerstein musical comedy, "Very Warm for May."

Instead of the usual milling mob one finds all too often at Washington parties, the event was large enough to be interesting; small enough so that you could indulge in a bit of conversation instead of a mere greeting in passing. Furthermore, it featured a guest of honor who did a lot more than merely acknowledge introductions.

Shortly after he arrived in a Russian costume (he had been rehearsing all afternoon) he hauled out his guitar and gave the most thrilling impromptu program I've heard in a long time. Russian, Spanish and Hungarian numbers entertained the tea-ing crowd until long past the final hour set for the party.

A NEPHEW of Robert W. Chambers, he seemed to know everybody in yesterday's gathering, having met most of them, including the hostess, in Paris, and the others later in New York. Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, who presided at the tea table, said she had known him for many years; had followed his career with special interest, and was expecting great things from him in the musical world. Mrs. Laurence V. Benet and Mr. and Mrs. Carleton Holdrege were others in yesterday's company who had met him in Paris and who had glowing reports of him.

Receiving her guests informally, Mrs. Thorpe wore a smart black crepe frock, pleated and draped into a becoming blouse and a floor-length skirt. Her son, George W. Thorpe, also did his share of receiving.

LADY BRODERICK and her daughter, Miss Sheila Broderick, were surrounded from the minute they arrived. Mrs. Wilbur Carr, who came in a few minutes later, also had a little court around her during the entire time she stayed at the party. Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Evans, jr., two of my "favorite people," were among those coming along a bit earlier than most of the crowd. Dr. and Mrs. Breckinridge Bayne arrived shortly afterward; and before you knew it, the room was filled with familiar faces.

REFLECTIONS IN A TEA CUP: Mrs. Blair Bannister asking for "only one lump please" and looking very handsome in an all-black ensemble . . . Mrs. Ralph Worthington exchanging reminiscences with the honor guest shortly after he finished his program . . . Lady Chalkley, a very popular addition to the party . . . Still others there—Angus Malcom, Mr. and Mrs. Henry I. Quinn, Robert Webster, Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim, and Mr. and Mrs. George Ross, the latter especially lovely in a black ensemble relieved by a three-strand pearl necklace.

Miss Chaffee Will Be Wed To Mr. Brooke

Bride-Elect's Parents To Entertain Today At Providence Home

Col. and Mrs. Everitte St. John Chaffee, of Providence, R. I., announce the engagement of their daughter, Carolyn St. John Chaffee, to Frederick H. Brooke, jr., of Corning, N. Y., son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, of 3021 N street northwest.

Miss Chaffee is a graduate of St. Timothy's School, Catonsville, Md., and Sarah Lawrence College, Bronxville, N. Y.

Mr. Brooke was graduated from St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H., and from Yale University, class of 1937, where he was football manager and elected to the Fence Club and Skull and Bones.

Mr. and Mrs. Brooke are in Providence, R. I., to spend the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Richard S. Aldrich. This afternoon the parents of the bride-elect will entertain at a large tea in their Providence home in honor of Miss Chaffee and her fiance.

Woodrings Go To Baltimore

The Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring drove to Baltimore last evening to attend a National Guard banquet at the Southern Hotel, following which the Secretary delivered a radio address over a Nation-wide hookup.

This afternoon Secretary and Mrs. Woodring will attend a party to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Ernest K. Lindley in honor of Henry J. Haskell, editor of the Kansas City Star, and Mrs. Haskell. Monday they will attend opening of a play at the National Theater and the following day Mrs. Woodring will attend the Junior League luncheon, going on with the Secretary to a party to be given by Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim on their yacht Firenze.

Thursday the Secretary and Mrs. Woodring expect to be present at an after-theater supper which will be given by Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean at Friendship for the cast of the current play, and the next day the Secretary and Mrs. Woodring will leave for New York to attend the Army-Notre Dame game there Saturday.

To Speak

MRS. JOHN TWOHY 2d, of Norfolk, Va., will be one of the speakers at the twenty-sixth anniversary luncheon of the Junior League on Tuesday at the Shoreham. She will be the guest of Miss Cecil Lester Jones, president of the Junior League of Washington. Mrs. Twohy is director for Region 3 of the Association of Junior Leagues of America. With her on the program will be Dr. Albert Joseph McCartney

Masons Entertain At Dinner for Grover Loenings

Mr. and Mrs. George Grant Mason entertained at a small dinner party last night at their home in Georgetown in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Grover Loening, who have been visiting them. Mrs. Loening and Mrs. Mason will leave today to spend the week-end in the country.

Other guests last night were the Undersecretary of the Treasury and Mrs. John Hanes, Mrs. Lloyd Moore, and Roberto Mendoza, of the Cuban Embassy.

Another dinner last night was that given by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Krock, who entertained for their house guests, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Thompson, of Roxbury, Conn. Mr. and Mrs. Thompson are paying their first visit to Washington.

Second Jefferson Concert Given

Williamsburg, Va., Oct. 27.—Music from the library of Thomas Jefferson was played this evening in the second concert of the series being given in the ballroom of the Governor's palace. A large audience heard the program last evening opening the second series of the concerts.

Among those attending the concert tonight were Mrs. Price Whitaker, Mrs. Harry Waite, Mrs. Frederick Atherton, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bell Sweeney, Mme. J. J. Von Kaathoven, Mrs. John M. Sternhagen, Mrs. Rudolph Stanley Brown, of Washington.

Society Goes Western at Fall Round-up

Jack Logan Is Host at Real Frontier Party At Normandy Farms

Washington society went Western last evening for the "fall round-up" party given at Normandy Farms in Maryland by Jack Logan. The host himself wore a cowboy outfit which featured a green satin shirt and high-heeled boots, and the guests wore anything from riding clothes to slacks.

It was a real old-time frontier party, with amusing barroom signs made of oil cloth, and an enormous bar. Between dances, stunts diverted the guests, one of them being a steeplechase in which one of the men was mounted on a real mule while others used horse heads on the ends of long sticks. Mock trials were held, with culprits obliged to do stunts as forfeits. One of the judges was Eugene O'Dunne, and Royce Powell served as a deputy out to apprehend guests accused of such offenses as "being too well dressed."

Several There From Congressional Set

Persons who often remark plaintively that you see the same faces at every Washington party would have found no grounds for complaint at last night's affair, for Mr. Logan mingled all sets, and older and younger alike. There were several present from Congressional circles, among them Senator and Mrs. Scott Lucas, Representative and Mrs. Dudley A. White and Representative and Mrs. John M. Vorys.

Others who danced until the small hours included Mr. and Mrs. John Guider, Mrs. Thomas Cowell, Solicitor General and Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, George Abell, Dr. and Mrs. William A. Morgan, Judge and Mrs. Dickinson Letts, Miss Peggy Townsend, Miss Elsie Ekengren, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Fleming, Mrs. Royce Powell, Mrs. Irene Caldwell, Mr. and Mrs. Thad Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Britten, Judge and Mrs. Peyton Gordon, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. Rose Saul Montgomery and John Saul.

Engaged Couple Seen in Crowd

Mrs. McKenney Mallan and William Rapley were receiving congratulations on the recent announcement of their engagement. Their cousin, Miss Francesca McKenney, was also present.

Others were Miss Ruth Tuckerman, Mrs. William T. Mann, Mrs. Robinson Head of Atlanta, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, Dr. and Mrs. William Burns, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Shipp, Mr. and Mos. Edward Wilbur, Dr. and Mrs. Howard Lee Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Page Hufty, who have recently bought a home in the country near the Burning Tree golf course.

Tea Will Honor Lillian Willett

Mrs. E. Jean Willett will entertain at tea tomorrow afternoon in honor of her daughter, Miss Lillian Willett, who recently returned from Europe. The party will take place in her apartment at 2601 Calvert street.

Miss Willett was to have entered the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art in London this winter, but the war obliged her to give up her plans. She and her mother gave a tea on Thursday.

David McCoach, Jrs. Entertain at Halloween Party

The Engineer Commissioner, Col. David McCoach, jr., and Mrs. McCoach, entertained last evening at the dinner dance and Halloween party at the Army-Navy City Club.

Guests included Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Charles F. Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Tompkins, Col. and Mrs. Edgar B. Colladay, Col. and Mrs. Walter M. Robertson, Col. and Mrs. William A. Snow, Col. and Mrs. Ludson D. Worsham, Col. and Mrs. Wade H. Haislip, Maj. and Mrs. Albert C. Lieber, jr., and Capt. and Mrs. Charles W. Stewart, jr.

Moores Entertain Madeira Seniors At Annual Tea

R. Walton Moore, Counselor of the State Department, and his sisters, the Misses Jennie and Margaret Moore, entertained at their annual tea yesterday at their home in Fairfax in honor of the seniors of the Madeira School. The guests, who included the headmistress, Mrs. David Wing, and several members of the faculty, numbered more than 60.

Before the tea Mr. Moore escorted the young ladies to the office at the clerk at Fairfax Courthouse, where they inspected the wills of Gen. and Mrs. Washington and other old records, and the portraits of the courthouse, which has been in use since 1799.

Mr. Moore is a member of the board of directors of the Madeira School.

Eleanor Flood Gives Cocktails

Miss Eleanor Flood entertained at a cocktail party yesterday afternoon in her apartment at the Shoreham in honor of Mr. and Mrs. William Coad, jr., who will leave today to return to their home in Omaha. They have been visiting Mrs. Coad's mother, Mrs. Ralph Worthington, of Washington, and have been widely feted during their stay.

The pretty hostess wore yesterday a smart black dress, simply made, with a gold buckle. Among those invited to say hello and good-by to the Coads were Mr. and Mrs. Mark Sullivan, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Willcox, Mr. and Mrs. Gale McLean, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hight, Mr. and Mrs. Jean de Sibour, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Kauffmann, Miss Eleanor Meem, Miss Mimi Scott, Miss Emily Davis and Miss Stellita Stapleton.

Friday Supper Dance Series Is Opened at Sulgrave Club

Presence of Mrs. John R. Williams, Group Founder, Makes the Event Official; Many Dinners Are Given Beforehand

PRACTICALLY ALL AGES, from 17 to 70, gathered at the Sulgrave Club last evening for the opening dance in this season's Friday Supper Club series. Since the group was started several years ago by Mrs. John R. Williams, these subscribtion dances have become increasingly popular, so that now there is a long waiting list of would-be members.

The presence of Mrs. Williams in her customary place at a table to the right of the entrance to the ballroom made the brilliant opening official. Mrs. Williams was hostess beforehand at a small dinner party and among those present was her granddaughter, Miss Nancy Leiter.

The committee, which includes leading members of Capital society, relies on good music and excellent food rather than fancy decorations for the success of the parties. Meyer Davis' orchestra played gaily until the small hours and a supper, which included scrambled eggs, sausages, hot soup and ice cream, was served at midnight.

Many dinners were given beforehand, among the hostesses being Mr. and Mrs. E. Cortland Parker, Mr. and Mrs. William McCracken, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Peters, Robert Buell of the State Department, Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, Miss Nancy Ordway, Dr. and Mrs. B. Lauriston Hardin and Miss Louise Claytor and her brother Graham, who entertained at a buffet supper for a sizeable number of the younger set.

Zuberbuhlers Feted At Dinner

One of the largest dinners was that given at the Sulgrave Club by William FitzGerald in honor of Senor and Senora Mariano Zuberbuhler. The former Margot Garrett and her husband have been in New York this week looking for an apartment. Mr. FitzGerald arranged the dinner by long-distance phone, inviting friends from Wilmington, Del., and then coming here yesterday to complete plans.

Mrs. Cortland Parker wore one of the loveliest dresses seen at last evening's gathering, a rose and gray moire gown, diagonally striped, with narrow shoulder straps and a full skirt. Glimpsed at her table were Mr. and Mrs. Walter Chappell, Mr. and Mrs. Reber Littlehales, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Stevenson (Mr. Stevenson was recently ordered here by the State Department from Berlin), and Robert Coe.

Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Morgan, who seldom miss a supper club party, appeared after dining with Mr. and Mrs. MacCracken. Debutante Patricia Prochnik, glimpsed twirling about the floor with Norton Goodwin, was honored at the dinner before the dance by Mr. and Mrs. Tuckerman. Mrs. Tuckerman has just returned from Philadelphia, having attended the Girl Scout convention, at which Mrs. Harvey Mudd was named national president to succeed Mrs. Frederick Brooke, of Washington.

Sitting at a table with Dr. and Mrs. Hardin between dances were their house guests, Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Shoettle, of Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Scott, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph K. McCammon and Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Carusi. Mrs. Hardin wore a stunning green gown.

Miss Hurley With Large Party

Miss Patricia Hurley, daughter of the former Secretary of War and Mrs. Patrick Hurley, and one of the prettiest of the season's debutantes, sat at a table with several friends, among them Miss Maisie Howard, who is visiting here this week from Philadelphia; Miss Jane Acheson, Miss Ann Wilkinson, Miss Alice Barry, Miss Marie de Limur, daughter of Count de Limur, of the French Embassy, and Countess de Limur, and John Oakes.

Guests of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Peters at dinner and the dance were her cousin, Miss Jeanne Marie Ballard, of London, who, with her mother, is staying at the Sulgrave Club while on a visit to Washington; Mr. and Mrs. Gorham Hubbard, who have a lovely place in southern Maryland; Judge and Mrs. J. Edgar Murdock, and Denys Smith, English newspaper correspondent.

Dinner guests of Miss Nancy Ordway before the dance were Mrs. William T. Mann, who wore a smart black satin frock with a bustle; Mrs. Scudder Doeg, Miss Lisette Riggs, Blair Rolles, Pendleton Hogan and James Parks.

Others seen here and there: Miss Laura Tuckerman dancing with Robert Buell; Miss Stellita Stapleton dancing with Arthur Vandenberg, jr.; Dorsey Fisher and George Benchard cutting in on debutantes; Miss Cassie Parker, Mr. and Mrs. L. M. C. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Gray Foster, Richard Bolling and Miss Diana Rowland.

Gregorio Marquez Has Frolic Party

Disguised as a Hindu prince, Gregorio Marquez, of the Pan-American Union, welcomed his guests last night at his Halloween frolic party at the Hay-Adams House. The guests' costumes ranged from pirate outfits to hula-hula skirts, and old-fashioned games were a feature of the evening.

Assisting in receiving were Miss Mary Theresa Norris, Ignacio Smith and Miss Nancy Archibald. Others present included Senorita Maria Theresa Escalante, Senorita Laura Recinos, Senorita Rosie Castro, Senor and Senora de Crespo, Miss Ada Dannouiller, Miss Marion Morris, Miss Gloria Rea, Miss Anne Waller, Senorita Eugenia Sosa, Miss Mary Ellen Dagnau, Senorita Nonnie Campbell and Senorita Nina Castro.

Scanlons Return From Honeymoon At World's Fair

Mr. and Mrs. James F. Scanlon have returned to Washington from a visit to the New York World's Fair. The former Miss Ida Barbara, of Boston, Mass., and Mr. Scanlon, of Louisville, Ky., and this city, were married September 28.

The couple has been widely feted since returning to the city. Mr. Scanlon, who is a member of the staff of the House Committee on Appropriations, and his bride will make their home at 4207 Twelfth street northwest.

Representative John J. Cochran, of Missouri, was host at dinner Thursday evening in their honor when guests were Representative Sam Rayburn, Representative Marvin Jones, of Texas; Representative Richard M. Duncan, of Missouri, and Mrs. Duncan; Representative Jesse P. Wolcott, of Michigan; Capt. George W. Calver, U. S. N., and Mrs. Calver; Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Deschler, James E. Barnes, Mr. and Mrs. J. Gilbert Nettleton, Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Nagle, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cleary and Gus Cook. The party was given at the Occidental Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Marcellus C. Shield entertained at dinner in honor of the couple at their home in Chevy Chase last Saturday.

Mrs. Mary Wallace Entertains at Tea

Mrs. Mary Bruce Wallace entertained at tea yesterday afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock. The party was a birthday celebration, 12 hours early as the hostess' natal day falls today.

A large number of diplomats, officials and residential Washingtonians attended the party. Among the guests were the South African Minister and Mrs. Ralph William Close, the former of whom also celebrated his birthday yesterday.

Miss Peet Entertains Executives' Wives

Mrs. Elizabeth Peet entertained at a luncheon on Wednesday at the clubhouse of the American Association of University Women in honor of wives of executives of the American Schools for the Deaf. A conference of executives has been in session at Gallaudet College.

The party included Mrs. Percival Hall, wife of the president of Gallaudet College; Mrs. B. B. Boutner, of Connecticut; Mrs. Jackson Raney, of Indiana; Mrs. C. E. Rankin, of North Carolina; Mrs. E. R. Wright, of Texas; Mrs. J. S. Ganey, of Alabama; Mrs. Ignatius Bjorlee, of Maryland; Mrs. Sam B. Craig, of Washington.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

ALL ROADS lead to Middleburg today for the Hunter Show which starts at 9:30 a. m. and lasts until sunset. Hot luncheons will be served at tables in the enclosures by a group of women headed by Mrs. William Seipp, and Mrs. Arthur White and her helpers will preside at the hot dog stand.

First class of the morning is for model hunters, followed by four-year-olds and under; green hunters, junior riders, hunter hacks, qualified hunters, and half century. Then after luncheon, will follow ladies' qualified hunters, and a special class which will represent fox hunting through the ages. Judges for this class were hard to find, for they must know how to decide the merits of such things as characters and costumes. However, after much discussion, Mrs. Graham Dougherty, of Berryville, and Mrs. Reginald Vickers, of The Plains, were selected.

FOLLOWING THIS CLASS come those for bona fide hunters, ladies' side saddle, hunt staff and field, Corinthian, and last of all, hunt teams.

All the judges and out-of-town guests were entertained at dinner last night by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Davis. The judges include Mr. and Mrs. Welsh Strawbridge and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Byrd, of Boston, who are staying with Mrs. Amory Perkins; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Voss, of New York, and Col. Sloan Doak, of Washington, guests of Mr. and Mrs. Davis.

There will be numerous dinners in honor of the many visitors here for the show. Among the hostesses tonight will be Mr. and Mrs. Daniel C. Sands, Miss Charlotte H. Noland, Mr. Warburg and Mrs. Mildred Taylor.

MANY OUT-OF-TOWNERS arrived in time to attend the sale of B. B. Jones' fine thoroughbred horses held yesterday at Audley. Jay S. Phipps flew down from New York on Wednesday, bringing as houseguests his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Douglas, jr.; Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Douglas, sr., and Raymond Guest, all of whom were at the sale.

Mr. and Mrs. William Streett entertained at dinner on Thursday evening for their house guests, Mr. and Mrs. Barkley Douglas, of New York. Mr. Phipps and his party attended this event and other guests included Mrs. George Sloane and Mrs. Amory Perkins. They were all bidders at the Jones sale.

Panhellenic Group Acts For Job Aids

Convention Favors Advisers to Further Work of Women In Professions

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor.

The Women's Professional Panhellenic Association, at the opening session of its ninth biennial convention yesterday, adopted a resolution calling for the establishment of an advisory committee "to develop the work of professional women and to further their employment."

The plan, presented by Miss Virginia Diedel, of Washington, a Phi Delta Delta and member of the program of work committee of the W. P. P. A., is designed to bring together on the advisory committee, leading women in the professions, industrialists, employers and others interested in the general objectives of the body. By this means, the council expects to establish direct contact with employers who have openings for professional women, and to study the trends from the standpoint of their needs as well as from that of the women.

Mrs. Whittington Conducts Sessions

Mrs. Vashti Burr Whittington, also of Washington, and a Phi Delta Delta, presided at the business meeting yesterday afternoon and at the banquet last night at the Wardman Park Hotel, headquarters for the convention. She was introduced at the banquet by Miss Catherine L. Vaux.

Speakers were Hugh Clegg, Assistant Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, who talked on "Criminal Control;" Dean Grace Hays Riley, of Washington College of Law, only woman law school dean in the country, and Miss Elizabeth F. Reed, grand dean of Kappa Beta Pi, international legal fraternity.

Dean Riley discussed the function of the professional fraternities as a help to students in preparing for careers. Her talk followed the theme of the conversation which will point toward the establishment of a bureau of employment information, a project which has been under consideration for two years, during which research has been conducted. Miss Reed welcomed the guests in behalf of the hostess chapters here.

The employment round-table luncheon, scheduled for this afternoon at 1:30 at the Wardman Park, will reveal the possibilities in the field of professional guidance. Factors and methods of choosing applicants for positions will be discussed by Miss Helen Sioussat, assistant director of education for Columbia Broadcasting System; A. M. Boyd, personnel director of the Philadelphia Electric Co.; Miss S. M. R. O'Hara, Secretary of State for Pennsylvania; Ernest Kelly, executive director of Unemployment Compensation and Employment Service of Pennsylvania, and Dr. Arthur S. Flemming, of the United States Civil Service Commission.

Many Prominent Officers Here

The program will include songs by Dorothy Beaty Mitchell, soprano, accompanied by Florence Street Elliott.

At the banquet last night, Mrs. Helen Turley, noted Washington contralto, and a member of Sigma Alpha Iota sang a group of songs, accompanied by Mary Izant Couch.

Among the W. P. P. A. officers and official representatives introduced by Mrs. Whittington were Mrs. Francis R. Murray, of Verona, N. J., national secretary of the association and national vice president of Phi Chi Theta, commercial fraternity; Eva M. Pletsch, of Philadelphia, Delta Pi (physical education), W. P. P. A. treasurer; Ruth F. Enson, of New York, Delta Phi Kappa (physical education), editor of the association's bulletin; Pauline Camper, Farmville, Va., Sigma Sigma Sigma (education); Lola L. Robinson, Lexington, Ky., president of Phi Beta (music and drama); Bessie Covert, Chicago, Delta Omicron (music); Anna Boyle, of Kappa Beta Pi, Washington; Cora Craven, Lawrence, Mass., president of Lambda Kappa Sigma (pharmacy); Mrs. Dorothy B. Stevenson, Westfield, N. J., past president of Phi Beta; Alma Martin, Atlanta, president of Phi Chi Theta; Corrine Quarles, Washington, former recorder of Phi Delta Delta; Mary Musgrave, Philadelphia, Gamma Nu (commercial); Lillian Gilbert, Phi Delta Pi (physical education); Mrs. Anna Carmichael, Denver, Phi Gamma Nu; Mrs. C. M. Salo, Dallas, Sigma Alpha Iota (music); Mabel Lee Walton, Clermont, Fla., president of Sigma Sigma Sigma and of the National Association of Education Sororities; Gertrude Evans, Ithaca, president of Sigma Alpha Iota.

Honor Distinguished Alumna

Wife of Secretary Of State Recently Was Given College Award

Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, was honored yesterday by the Washington alumnae of Mary Baldwin College at a tea, given in the clubhouse of the American Association of University Women. The occasion was in recognition of her having received the Algernon Sydney Sullivan award for distinguished service, presented by the college on founders' day in behalf of the Southern Society of New York.

Among the guests were Dr. L. Wilson Jarman, president of the college; Miss Elizabeth Poole, the dean, and Mrs. John Mapp, of Richmond, Va., national president of the Mary Baldwin Association. Receiving with them were Miss Margaret Daniel, chairman of the Washington Alumnae Association, and Mrs. A. B. Evans, past chairman. Mrs. Edmund D. Campbell, former dean of the college now a Washington resident, announced the guests.

In the lounge of the clubhouse, where tea was served, Mrs. Lucian P. Giddens and Mrs. Jarman received. Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillin, civil service commissioner, who is also one of the distinguished alumnae of Mary Baldwin, was unable to be present because of her absence from the city.

Alternating at the tea table were Mrs. Conrad Syme, Miss Betty Keith Harrison, secretary and treasurer of the Washington group; Mrs. Baldwin Cook, Mrs. Sidney Andrews, Mrs. Charles Kappler and Miss Elva Lee Chew, vice chairman of the Washington alumnae.

Yellow and white chrysanthemums decorated the rooms, carrying out the college colors. The several hundred guests who attended included alumnae from the District, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia.

The college is the oldest institution of higher learning in Virginia, founded solely for women, and one of the oldest women's colleges in the United States.

Mrs. Keyes to Talk To Study Guild On Foreign Trip

A lecture by Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, on her recent trip abroad, will be sponsored Tuesday night at the Playhouse, 1814 M street, by the Study Guild of St. Matthews Church, a group of young women from the six Roman Catholic parishes in the city. The program will be a benefit for the club which was organized two years ago for the study of religion and meets monthly in the church basement.

The lecture also will be a "birthday party" for Mrs. Keyes' new novel "The Great Tradition" which will be issued Tuesday.

Mrs. Robert Walsh is leader of the guild; Miss Patricia Moran, recording secretary; Miss Anita St. Laurent and Miss Margaret Iwinski, corresponding secretaries, and Mrs. Wilfred Chaput, treasurer.

Among the patronesses for the lecture are Mrs. William Corcoran Eustis, Mrs. Harry Meem, Mrs. George Hamilton, jr., Mrs. McCeney Berlich, Mrs. Chauncey DePew, the Misses Patten, Mrs. Pierce Butler, Mrs. George Scriven, Mrs. Daniel Stapleton, Mrs. Thomas Riggs, Mrs. Corcoran Thom, Mrs. Milton Ailes, Mrs. Edgar Murdock, Mrs. Walter Distler, Miss Anne Squire, and Mrs. Dudley Morgan.

Women of the Moose Mark Founders' Day

Columbia Chapter, Women of the Moose, last night observed Founders' Day, the birthday of Senator Davis, founder of Mooseheart, with initiation of a class of candidates in his honor. Mrs. Wade H. Mitchell was chairman of the meeting. Mrs. George B. Clark, ritual chairman, directed the initiation and the class, presented by Mrs. Blanche Aubaugh, was accepted by Miss Katherine Smith, grand recorder.

The Alumni Committee of the chapter has arranged a joint meeting with Columbia Lodge at Moose Hall tomorrow night, in celebration of Mooseheart Day. Mooseheart was established 26 years ago as a community for the care and education of orphans of deceased members of the order.

Churches Urged To Lift Poverty

The church should take its place in helping to lift the load of poverty from the Nation, and not leave it all to the Government, Mrs. Leila Rothenburger, of Indianapolis, told the Women's Council of the Washington Federation of Churches yesterday.

Summing up the study of "Homeland Harvest," home mission text for the year, by Arthur H. Limouze, she declared people take too much of their religion secondhand, waiting to be told what to do, instead of pioneering on new frontiers. The frontier of today is that of poverty, she declared.

She urged the women to follow the work of the Washington Housing Association, and to study the problem of the home.

She spoke at the closing luncheon of the council's three-day institute at Mount ernon Methodist Episcopal Church. Mrs. Harper Sibley also addressed the luncheon and answered questions on world cooperation. Mrs. Leslie Swain, of New York, who conducted the foreign mission study of "Through Tragedy to Triumph," by Basil Mathews, talked on the international missionary conference she attended in Madras.

Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, president of the council, presided, and introduced Mrs. Eugene V. Pugh, immediate past president, who is here from California for a visit. Mrs. Pugh's father, Dr. Pinkerton, offered the invocation, and Dr. W. L. Darby and Dr. John Rustin also offered prayer.

The institute, with a registration of more than 600, was one of the most successful ever held here.

Mount Holyoke Luncheon

The Mount Holyoke Alumnae Club will hold its first meeting of the 1939-1940 season today, at the A. A. U. W. headquarters, 1634 I street. Luncheon will be served at 1:30 p. m. and Mrs. Harold D. Krafft, the newly elected president, will be in charge of the meeting. A report of the last Mount Holyoke commencement will be given by Mrs. Frank Weaver, and plans for the season will be discussed.

Textiles to Be Subject of Dinner Of Home Economics Women

TEXTILES, rather than food will be the subject (although not the menu) for the dinner of the Home Economics Women in Business, to be given Monday night at the Admiral Club, Ann Sullivan Hagen, the president, has announced as the speaker Gladys Winegar, of New York, home economist with the Textile Education Bureau.

Miss Winegar will bring with her an exhibit which is to be modeled by home economics students of the University of Maryland, and will give the latest information on textiles in clothing for men and women. She will discuss style as well as quality, with hints for the consumer on how to buy.

The bureau she heads is a clearing house for information on textiles, and supplies exhibits and educational materials for schools as well as for the textile industry.

Home economics teachers in the local schools will attend the dinner as will representatives of a number of Washington stores and members of the staff of the Division of Textiles and Clothing of the Bureau of Home Economics of the Department of Agriculture, including Miss Ruth O'Brien, the division chief.

GENE GOWING, of the English Folk Dancing and Song Society, and Marcy L. Sperry, of Washington, will be the speakers today at the weekly luncheon at Opportunity House. Mrs. Pennell C. Kirkbride, of the board of directors, will be hostess, and William Henry Denney, assistant minister at Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, will offer the invocation.

The luncheons each week at Washington's newest settlement house are popular with its members and acquaint other guests with the work being carried on there. Opportunity House is located at 78 I street.

Magazine Business—The Washington Alumnae Association of Alpha Delta Pi Sorority last night held its first fall meeting at Henderson Castle, 2200 Sixteenth street. Mrs. Richard Fourchy, the new president, announced that the national headquarters of the Alpha Delta Pi Magazine Service had been moved to Washington and would be under her direction as national magazine service chairman.

The service handles subscriptions of sorority members for any one of 26,000 magazines and newspapers it lists.

War Mothers Install Officers

The Bicentennial and District of Columbia chapters of the American War Mothers held a joint installation of officers at the Raleigh Hotel last night.

Coronation, Auto Show's Climax, Tonight

Voting for Queen Ends At 9, With Ceremony To Begin at 10:20 p. m.

Washington's twentieth annual auto show will close tonight after a colorful climax in which the queen —still unknown—will be crowned and presented with a 1940 model of her own selection. And a couple of the city's best "hep cats" will get the District title in the finals of the jitterbug contest.

The auto show's last day at the Riverside Stadium, Twenty-sixth street off Constitution avenue, will run from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m., with visitors eligible to vote for the queen until 9 p. m. With 22 of Washington's fairest lassies seeking the honor—and gift auto—and the election still in doubt, ballots will be counted and posted every two hours until 6 p. m. and every hour thereafter. Coronation ceremonies will start at 10:20 p. m. and will be broadcast over WJSV.

Tonight the third elimination jitterbug contest will be followed by the finals. In the second round last night the winners were Hoover Kemp and Virginia Johnson.

The queen will be crowned by King Richard I, better known as Dick Murphy, manager of the show, with Harry Hites taking over the duties of master of ceremonies.

Judges in the third jitterbug elimination tourney will be Mary Harris, of The Post; Bill Strickland, of the Lotus, and Charles Daly, of WJSV. In the finals the arbiters will be Leroy Thayer, president of Dancing Masters of America; Tony Wakeman, of WOL, and Harry MacArthur, of the Star.

Julien Friant Funeral to Be Held Today

Special Assistant to Wallace Dies After Stroke in Taxicab

Funeral services for Julien N. Friant, 53, special assistant to the Secretary of Agriculture, will be held at 10:30 a. m. today at Hysong's funeral home, 1300 N street northwest, with burial Monday evening at Cape Girardeau, Mo., where Mr. Friant had lived before coming to Washington. Requiem mass will be celebrated at St. Vincent's Church in Cape Girardeau.

Mr. Friant died early yesterday in Emergency Hospital, after collapsing in a taxicab Thursday afternoon. Death was attributed to a cerebral hemorrhage.

He had been in charge of non-civil service appointments for the Department of Agriculture since 1933, and previously was associated with the Himmelberger & Harrison lumber and land operating firm. Born in Cairo, Ill., he moved to Missouri as a child and was educated at Cape Girardeau.

He was a member of the Chamber of Commerce, Rotary Club and Knights of Columbus in Cape Girardeau, and active in Missouri politics. He had lived here at 1326 Hemlock street northwest.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Bertha R. Friant; two children, Katherine and John, and two sisters, Regina Friant, of Ames, Iowa, and Marie Friant, of Cape Girardeau.

Miss Perkins Calls Saunders' Death Blow to Friends

Richardson C. Saunders, Assistant to the Secretary of Labor, who died Thursday, was praised last night by Secretary Frances Perkins as "a man of great honor, integrity and ability, a tireless worker and an experienced administrator of wisdom and vision."

"His death is a blow to all of us who worked closely with him," said Miss Perkins.

Funeral services will be held at All Souls Memorial Episcopal Church at 2 p. m. today, with burial in Rock Creek Cemetery. Dr. Bowman F. Ashe, president of Miami University, will speak.

Pallbearers will be Assistant Secretary of Labor Charles V. McLaughlin, W. Frank Persons, Gerard D. Reilly, Robert C. Smith, John R. Demorest and James V. FitzGerald.

Honorary pallbearers will be Arthur Bliss, Dion Birney, William S. Culbertson, Marshall Diggs, Newell Ellison, Charles T. Estes, Howard Leroy, Samuel J. Gompers, Paul Shorb, S. D. Weissbuch and Isador Lubin. Ushers will be Turner W. Battle, L. Metcalfe Walling and Verne A. Zimmer.

Sousa and Walter Reed Stamps Will Be Placed on Sale Here

Two stamps in the Famous Americans series will be placed on sale in Washington, Postmaster General Farley made it known yesterday when he announced the cities where the series would be sold. Dates and denominations will be announced later.

John Philip Sousa, "March King," composer of "The Washington Post March" and former leader of the Marine Band, will be one of those honored on a stamp to be sold here. The other will be Maj. Walter Reed, whose research determined the mosquito to be the carrier of yellow fever and ended that scourge on this continent.

Two men, an inventor and a painter, who were intimately connected with Washington, though this was not their home, also will be among the series. They are Alexander Graham Bell, whose stamp will be sold at Boston, and James McNeil Whistler, whose will go on sale at Lowell, Mass.

Virginians to be honored will be Booker T. Washington, whose stamp will be placed on sale at Tuskeegee, Ala., where he founded Tuskeegee Institute for colored youths, and Cyrus H. McCormick, inventor of the reaper and binder, whose stamp will be sold at Lexington, near his birthplace. Walt Whitman, poet, who spent most of the Civil War years as a nurse in Washington hospitals, also will be honored, his stamp to go on sale at Camden, N. J.

Among others in the series will be Mark Twain, Ralph Waldo Emerson, Luther Burbank, James Russell Lowell, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, Victor Herbert and Louisa M. Alcott.

Citizen Catches Federal Agents Being Secretive

Four Federal narcotics agents who were trying to be very secretive aroused suspicions of citizens and the whole police force here yesterday.

They retired into an alley near the Tower Building to change license tags on their car prior to an investigative expedition. But they were detected at the business by a zealous citizen.

Within a matter of moments the police radio broadcast throughout the city: "Four men are changing the tags on an automobile. They are substituting New York plates for North Carolina ones."

"Dopes," one of the agents exclaimed, when the arm of the District law descended on the arm of the Federal law.

Rain Fails to Aid Drought Zone

Chicago, Oct. 27 (AP).—Clearing skies in the Southwest today dashed hopes that North America's richest winter wheat land would produce a normal sized crop for 1940 harvest.

The great fall drought of 1939, now well in its third month in the heart of the belt where the bulk of the United States' surplus bread grain is raised, has spread over important wheat lands of five States—Kansas, Nebraska, Oklahoma, Texas and Colorado.

Rains fell around this zone the past few days but little or no moisture was reported in driest areas where the most wheat is raised.

Surgery Risk In Diabetes Held Smaller

4 Garfield Doctors Reveal Sharp Drop In Mortality Rate

The hazards of surgery in treatment of diabetic patients gradually are being lessened, according to a report made yesterday by four Washington physicians. They are Drs. Janvier W. Lindsay, E. Clarence Rice, Maurice A. Selinger and K. Hammond Mish, of the Garfield Hospital staff.

In an article prepared for "Medical Annals," publication of the District Medical Society, the four collaborators reported on 48 operations performed at Garfield on diabetic patients between July 1, 1936, and December 31, 1938. The mortality rate was 10.41 per cent, a sharp reduction compared with previous figures.

Only 86 such operations were done in the preceding 12½-year period, the doctors said, and the mortality rate was 15.29 per cent.

Three deaths in the new series of 48 cases were due to leg amputations and the other two to abdominal operations. Exclusive of operations on infected and gangrenous extremities, the mortality rate was 6.25 per cent for the 30-month period and 12.24 for the preceding 12½ years.

"Further reduction in the mortality rate in the surgery of the diabetic patient awaits a closer cooperation between the surgeon and internist," the doctors concluded.

Jones' Papers Reveal Indian Rite

The life story and works of William Jones, Indian boy, cowboy, anthropologist and expert on the Fox Indians, are now ready for the public 30 years after his death, the Smithsonian Institution announced yesterday.

Margaret Welpley Fisher has finished editing Jone's papers, containing descriptions of secret Fox rites unknown to any white man, the announcement said.

Boy, 14, Who Saved 2 Women In Hurricane, Wins Hero Medal

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Oct. 27.—The Carnegie Hero Fund [illegible] today recognized acts of bravery by 28 persons in 17 States who faced fire, water and storms in rescues or attempts at succor.

Three New Englanders were awarded bronze medals for their part in daring rescues during the hurricane of September 21, 1938.

One of the heroes was a 14-year-old schoolboy, Richard W. Holmes, of Warren, R. I., who swam through flood waters of the Warren River at Barrington, R. I., to save two women at the height of the storm.

Another hero of the disaster, Hayward Wilson, 54, died attempting to save three people from drowning at Gray Gables, Mass. He had joined them in a flooded house that was swept out to sea.

The third hero of the hurricane was Henry M. Morris, 27, of Westerly, R. I., who saved five persons from drowning at Weekapaug.

California led the States in the number of awards with four. New York and Massachusetts were next with three each. Texas and Rhode Island had two heroes and there was one award each in South Dakota, Oregon, Michigan, Pennsylvania, Washington, New Jersey, Montana, Connecticut, Alabama, Maine, West Virginia and Illinois.

Four of the heroes died during rescue attempts and to the father of one $250 was granted, to be applied as the commission might approve.

In four cases, awards totaling $2,000 were made for educational purposes, and in 17 other cases awards aggregating $10,000 were made for the purchase of homes or other worthy purposes.

Two women and a 15-year-old girl were among those honored.

One hero, Harold H. Thompson, 30-year-old carpenter, of Pleasantville, N. J., performed a prodigious feat of strength to save seven persons from death aboard a burning launch at Atlantic City.

Thompson, in charge of the launch, fought the flame and was severely burned. He seized a rope attached to the launch and [illegible] the craft 200 feet to shore.

He then ran 1,000 feet and leaped into the water. He swam 1,000 feet, seized two men clutching floating debris, and towed them to shore.

Again Thompson dashed 1,000 feet down the shore and leaped into the water. This time he swam a quarter of a mile and towed the remaining passenger to shore.

Crash Victim Gets $25,000 Judgment

G. Carl Rittenhouse, 20, of 6347 Thirty-first street northwest, yesterday was awarded $25,000 damages for cuts on the head and body and a compound [illegible] fracture, he suffered in an automobile accident February 19. George F. Royal, 45, Government employe whom Rittenhouse blamed for the accident, failed to defend the suit when it was called in the District Court.

Rittenhouse testified he and his wife were returning from a dance when their automobile was struck by one driven by Royal. The amount of the damages was fixed by a jury which heard six other witnesses.

Citizens Elect R. J. Hellmuth In Anacostia

S. E. Otto Declines To Seek Presidency Because of Business

Robert J. Hellmuth was elected president of the Anacostia Citizens Association, meeting last night at Anacostia High School, after Stanley E. Otto, former president, declined to run because of the press of other business.

Others elected were Mrs. Carrie G. Smith, first vice president; E. S. Weightman, second vice president; William J. Tucker, secretary, and Frank Tew, treasurer. Tucker and Mrs. Smith were named delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Informed of a rumor that several fire companies, including No. 15, in Anacostia might be disbanded or moved, the association adopted a resolution opposing any change in the District's setup of fire companies east of the Anacostia River. Another resolution instructed the secretary to make an effort to learn why additions to the Ketcham School, for which appropriations have been made by Congress, have not been begun.

Col. L. C. Crawford addressed the association on pedestrian safety.

Membership Drive Of Central 'Y' at The Halfway Mark

Central Y. M. C. A.'s membership drive yesterday passed the halfway mark with a total of 651 new members signed up. The "Y," located at 1736 G street northwest, is seeking 1,200 recruits by November 7.

Next report meeting is scheduled for Thursday, with special entertainment program planned for the final meeting November 7. Yesterday's report revealed that 127 new members have been enrolled since Monday. Of these 38 were brought in by "The Circle Y Ranch" groups, led by Arthur C. Pearson.

Earl A. Nash, a former "Y" campaign chairman, addressed the volunteer workers at last night's meeting.

Capital News In Brief

Benefactor Beaten

A "good Samaritan" was accosted by two strangers in a downtown cafeteria last night and given a story of hard times, hunger, and the rest. So the good Samaritan not only bought the two strangers food and drink, but also took them to a hotel and paid for a room.

Once in the hotel room, the strangers beat up their benefactor and robbed him of $45. The "good Samaritan" phoned police, and a detective was immediately dispatched to the cafeteria to see if the strangers would show up. They did.

But a woman patron recognized the detective and tipped off the two and the three started to make a getaway. They weren't fast enough.

The two strangers and the woman went to cells; the "good Samaritan" was taken to the hospital.

Driver Is Unhappy

William Nelson, colored, 32, was very unhappy last night.

Police said Nelson was driving in the 2600 block Thirteenth street northwest, when his auto was in a collision with one driven by William V. Stoos, of 4526 Thirteenth street northwest.

Nelson suffered cuts to his face and after receiving treatment at Freedmen's Hospital was charged at the Tenth Precinct Station with driving while under the influence of liquor and operating on an expired permit.

Dr. Harry S. Sullivan Traces Development of Psychiatry

500 at Interior Dept. Auditorium Hear First of Series of William Alanson White Memorial Lectures

Dr. Henry Stack Sullivan, professor of psychiatry at Georgetown University Medical School, last night sketched the development of psychiatry to its present-day conception that the science deals with all interrelations of people.

The talk, "Conceptions of Modern Psychiatry," was the first of six William Alanson White Memorial Lectures to be delivered by Dr. Sullivan, who is co-editor of "Psychiatry" and president of the William Alanson White Psychiatric Foundation. More than 500 persons attended the lecture last night in Interior Department auditorium.

At the start of the century, he said, three great men appeared in the field of psychiatry. These were Sigmun Freud, who showed the relationship between past experience and present activity; Adolf Meyer, of Johns Hopkins, who taught that every thought or act of behavior was a result of a huge number of processes going on within the individual, and Dr. White, late superintendent of St. Elizabeths Hospital, who developed the concept that psychiatry should deal with all relationships of men and not only mental illnesses.

In dealing with the individual's desire for satisfaction of his wants and security, Dr. Sullivan pointed out that an infant will cry to relieve the pain of want, but that if its cries do not bring the relief, it will stop crying and enter a stage of passiveness or stupor and is apt to die.

The roots of generosity, the professor said, probably lie in the peculiar relationship between infant and mother. The baby expresses pleasure in being satisfied, and the mother expresses pleasure in satisfying the child, thus enjoying the giving away of something.

Catholic Worker Editor Assails Dies Committee

Miss Dorothy Day, editor of the Catholic Worker, last night attacked the Dies Committee on Un-American Activities as "Un-American itself" and "contrary to American traditions." She spoke before more than 200 people at the Holy Trinity Theater, under the auspices of the Georgetown Visitation Society.

"Some of their recent activities have not only done no good—they are doing harm," she said. "The Dies Committee is carrying on a direct attack on labor unions that smacks too much of things we saw during the last war."

Admitting that there is "plenty of Communist activity in the union," Miss Day said she didn't think "the Dies Committee method of attacking that menace to our institutions is a good one at all."

Miss Day formerly was a member of the Socialist Party and the International Workers of the World, an organization which she said "is hardly the same thing as communism."

Boarding House Operator Guilty of Zoning Violation

Warning that other zoning ordinance offenders faced a possible $100 fine for each day of violation, Police Court Judge Walter J. Casey yesterday suspended sentence on Mrs. Mary Beuchert, 5900 Sixteenth street northwest, convicted of operating a boarding house in a restricted "A" area.

Corporation Counsel George D. Neilson told the court that the defendant was ordered by the Zoning Commission on October 5 to suspend boarding house operations by October 15. She was arrested October 25, ten days after expiration of the time limit, Neilson said.

Mrs. Beuchart testified that she had complied with the order and had not charged her tenants after October 15. Those that remained after that date, she said, were guests.

Clouds Mar View of Moon In Eclipse

200 Visitors at Naval Observatory Are Disappointed

The moon over Washington last night was eclipsed almost four hourse, but experts here had no opportunity to watch it with thair telessopes.

Well before the ' ellipse was scheduled to begin at 11:54 p. m., clouds had hidden the moon from view. At 3:18 a. m. today, when the eclipse was ended, the clouds were still riding across the moon's face.

At the Naval Observatory, more than 200 Navy Day visitors were interested more in the eclipse than in the complicated gadgets shown them. But observatory scientists took it calmly enough.

"I'm going to watch the occulation of faint stars," said H. E. Burton from his station by the 26-inch equatorial telescrope, and explained that meant the same as eclipse. From the time it would take three small stars near the moon to pass through eclipse their distance from the moon could be gauged.

At the 40-inch telescope, J. E. Willis was preparing to take pictures. He explained they "will just be pretty pictures, I guess," and added, looking at the gathering clouds, "I don't think we'll get any pictures after all."

He was right.

Miss Jackson, Object of Pride To 1914 Suffragettes, to Retire

Personnel Aide at War Department Goes On Leave Today, After 52 Years of Continuous Service; Personally Knew Taft

A woman whose accomplishments gave the suffragettes a big talking point 25 years ago yesterday left the War Department after 52 years continuous service.

She is Miss Lucretia Jackson, an employe in the Secretary of War's office since the Spanish-American War and before that a clerk in the Bureau of American Republics, forerunner of the Pan American Union. She goes on a leave today, pending retirement February 1.

Miss Jackson, who knew personally Elihu Root, William Howard Taft, and every War Secretary since, is credited with many contributions to the development of the War Department. She was transferred to the Secretary of War's office in 1898, when the then Secretary, Russell A. Alger, needed a Spanish language expert, and has served there since.

In 1914, her appointment to a War Department board to check procedure and audit accounts of the Army supply divisions was used extensively by women's suffrage organizations as an example of what women were capable of doing in public affairs.

Born near Hyattsville, Md., in the early 1870's, Miss Jackson has always lived in or near Washington. She plans to spend her leave traveling and then retire to her home at 203 Carroll avenue, Takoma Park, Md.

Since 1922, Miss Jackson has handled retirement cases in the civilian personnel division of the Secretary's office. During that time every case of the retirement of a civil service employe in the department has crossed her desk. Her own was the last one.

Col. Annie Davis To Leave Civil Service Tuesday

Kentucky colonel and employe in six Government bureaus since 1917, Miss Annie Laurie Davis will be retired from the Federal Civil Service Tuesday.

MISS DAVIS

Miss Davis began her Government service in the World War at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind., at the Medical Officers' Training Camp. Coming to Washington as a clerk in the Quartermaster General's office the next year, she has served here as a translator in the Army Finance Office, State Department clerk and foreign language proofreader in the Government Printing Office.

Since 1927, she has been employed in the Bureau of Insular Affairs, which was transferred from the War to the Interior Department this summer. One of the few women Kentucky colonels, she was given the appointment in 1933 for work as a legislative representative for the Veterans Commission of Kentucky.

O. C. Short Heads Delaware U. Club

Oliver C. Short, Commerce Department official, last night was elected president of the Washington Club, University of Delaware Alumni Association, at the first fall dinner meeting, held in Wesley Hall. Samuel M. Hunn was named vice president, and I. H. Bleiberg, secretary-treasurer.

Speakers include Assistant Secretary of State George S. Messersmith, Representative Williams of Delaware, Milton L. Draper, alumni president, and John M. McDowell, alumni executive secretary.

Cowboy at Dance

Jack Dalton, WJSV Singing Cowboy, appeared last night as guest star at the jitterbug Halloween dance at Friendship House. More than 130 jitterbugs attended.

Gas Station Owner Wins $20,000 From Former Policeman

Herman L. Harrison, 28-year-old motor salesman, of 611 Otis place northwest, was awarded $20,000 damages in the District Court yesterday for the "seizure" of his filling station three years ago by Frank W. Sanford, former Metropolitan policeman, of 3600 Nichols avenue southeast.

The damages were fixed by a jury after Harrison told how Sanford, who owned the lot occupied by the station, took over the station and began to operate it himself.

"I never heard of anything like it," Justice Goldsborough commented after hearing the evidence presented for Harrison by Attorneys M. Phillip Katz and L. M. Shinberg. Sanford did not appear for the trial and his lawyers withdrew.

Fourth Precinct Boys Make 'Sarge' Blush At Party for Retiring John T. Langley

Lieut King Capt. Letterman Lieut. Varney Sergt. Langley Inspector Kelley

The boys down at the Fourth Precinct police station got together at the Republic Cafe last night to tell Sergt. John T. Langley what they thought of him. And the veteran of 28 years of service could only blush with pleasure, for what the boys had to say were words of friendship, praise and admiration.

The "sarge" will be retired next Wednesday and No. 4's 78 bluecoats and plain clothesmen weren't feeling so good about it, but they were there to give Langley a sendoff he would remember.

Inspector Edward Kelly, Capt. Oscar Letterman and Lieut. Fred Varney expressed what the boys were thinking with speeches that were "short and sweet"; then some one presented the sergeant (the word "hardboiled" never fitted him) with a plaque from the boys. All 78 of them, plus some of the boys higher up.

Langley, 55, has been having a run with illness these past few months and hasn't been feeling so chipper. Among police he was sort of a specialist. He handled most of the special White House and diplomatic corps details. Commended time and again for efficiency, the "sarge" got his biggest thrill when King George and Queen Elizabeth praised his detail last summer.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Capital's Star Parade to Continue Through Monday

Claire Trevor and "Dick Tracy" Here in Person; "March of Time" Goes Agricultural in Next; This, That and the Other About the Theater

WITH THE CAPTIVATING and immensely popular Ann Rutherford hardly out of town, another celebrated screen star will arrive in Washington on Monday morning for a hurried 24-hour survey of the Capital of her country. This will be Claire Trevor, whose abundant talents only recently have gained the recognition they long have deserved.

Miss Trevor, a native of New York City, came East from Hollywood to be present at the premiere of "Allegheny Uprising" in Pittsburgh. That close, she would not take "No" for an answer to her petition to the studio that she be allowed to continue on to Washington. So here she comes, much to the gratification of all who will be privileged to meet her.

BELL

In "Alleghany Uprising," Miss Trevor is co-starred with John Wayne, which is by way of perpetuating the happy coalition of their talents that was first disclosed to the public in Walter Wanger's production of "Stage Coach." These two, with the able assistance of Thomas Mitchell, John Carradine, Donald Meek, George Bancroft, Andy Devine and a considerable number of others, conspired to make Mr. Wanger's unique production one of the outstanding releases of last season.

Hardie Meakin, manager of RKO-Keith's Theater, will be in charge of the full day's activities that are planned for Miss Trevor's hasty visit, under auspices of RKO-Radio Pictures and that prodigious young fellow, S. Barrett McCormick, of the swanky Rockefeller Center home office of that auspiciously affiliated company.

Among other things, a cocktail party for the press is planned for 4:30 Monday afternoon, at the Carlton. It is the hope of the drama desks that Miss Trevor will have survived Mr. Meakin's hectic and all-inclusive program for her entertainment, up to that hour.

If she could withstand the rigors of that "Stage Coach" trip, she ought to be able to get away with this one!

Preceding the blond Miss Trevor to the Capital will be Ralph Byrd, who plays that fabulous Government-man, Dick Tracy, on the screen. Mr. Byrd already is here for his four days of personal appearances at the Atlas Theater, 1331 H street northeast, and today is making a tour of G-Man J. Edgar Hoover's Federal Bureau of Investigation, where, one is given to believe, he will be accorded a rare welcome by a department that looks upon him as the cinema's most authentic sleuth. Having gone over the FBI's college of crime detection, Mr. Byrd will make a tour of the less exciting drama desks.

According to last-minute report, S. Ashkenazy is planning to show a series of Jewish films of high artistic merit at the Belasco Theater. The first attraction will be "My Son," a screen musical by Sholom Secunda, renowned composer of "By Meir Bist Du Schein," scheduled for Sunday, November 5. Rosenberg, Leon Fuchs, Feld, Cashier, Aaron Liebedoff and other prominent members of the Art Theater appear in the principal roles. Alexander Olshanetsky and his orchestra supply the instrumental background. For the youngsters, the picture is said to provide music and comedy; for their elders, drama, love and romance. The film has complete English dialogue titles.

Those special Halloween bills in the outlying picture houses seem to be as contagious as the new Thursday opening day for new attractions in the downtown area. At Sidney B. Lust's Bethesda Theater this afternoon there will be a combination stage and screen bill with special added features. Apple-ducking will be one of them, with prizes awarded for the best bobbers. The vaudeville bill will be presented at 3:30, 6:40 and 9:30 p. m., with the Emerald Sisters, acrobatic comediennes, and Farrell and Drew and Their Rhythmettes in the featured spots. On Tuesday, October 31, the Congress Theater, Nichols avenue and Portland street southeast, will present a special "Midnight Spook Show," beginnig at 11:30 p. m., with "The Old Dark House," which is spooky enough to suit anybody, as the screen attraction. And that's the way it spreads.

In its next issue, the "March of Time" once again will divorce itself from consideration of the various aspects of the European War and devote its footage to "Uncle Sam, the Farmer." This release will show in detail how the United States Department of Agriculture, founded 77 years ago by Abraham Lincoln, is today carrying out its gigantic task of preserving and improving the billion acres of fertile soil that is America's greatest single asset. A short-notice preview of this "March of Time," eventually to be seen on the screen at RKO-Keith's, was given in the Department of Agriculture auditorium on Thursday night at 8—unfortunately this column's busiest night of the week.

"Dick Whittington and His Cat" will be presented in the National Theater this morning as Clare Tree Major's Children's Theater of New York's first offering of a season's series of six Saturday morning performances. The remaining plays will include "Under the Lilacs," "Rip Van Winkle," "Pocahontas" (three American plays of widely different types), "Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp" and "Old King Cole."

A professional career in dancing opened last week for Doris Gene Isbell, when she became a member of the Capitol Theater's Rhythm Rockets. Miss Isbell is 18 years of age and resides at 3149 Mount Pleasant street, northwest. She has studied locally under Bekeffi, former member of the Russian Ballet, and the Misses Marion Venable and Virginia Barry. In tryouts for the last "Going Native" revue, Miss Isbell, a sophomore at George Washington University, attracted the attention of the Capitol's talent seekers, but was unable to make professional appearances at that time under the District's restrictive child labor law. She since has passed her eighteenth birthday, so now there she is "Rocketing" around.

The Mask and Bauble Club of Georgetown University will open its new season with three one-act plays, to be presented in Gaston Hall on the university campus, Wednesday night, November 8. "The Game of Chess," by Kenneth Goodman; "The Silent Host," by Percival Wilde, and "Where's Elmer?" Howard Reed's comedy, will comprise the bill.

The boys work fast, once they put their minds to it. Almost half an hour has been whittled off the running time of "Very Warm For May," the new Kern-Hammerstein musical comedy being presented at the National Theater by Max Gordon, since its metropolitan opening last Monday night. It won't be long now!

Still-Befuddled Note

If this is Saturday, then what does Monday look like?

TOM GIRDLER: The monopoly investigation in Washington, after the current inquiry is terminated, will be devoted to the steel industry. It will be followed by an investigation of the investment banking business . . . Attorney General Frank Murphy: Abe Shushan and his five codefendants in the Louisiana cases will move for a change of venue and ask that their cases be tried outside of the State . . . John D. Rockefeller: Those 12 people at your Rainbow Room last night—who ordered 3 pounds of caviar, four bottles of vodka and four magnums of Russian champagne—were not from cafe society. They were from Amtorg!

EARL BROWDER: Your counsel, Joe Brodsky, was very much surprised when that socialite lady suddenly appeared to furnish bail for you . . . "This proves," said Brodsky, "that there's not only a Santa Claus but also a Mrs. Santa Claus" . . . "I thought you Communists don't believe in Santa Claus?" the lawyer was asked . . . "Why not?" he replied. "Wait eight weeks—and Browder will send you a Christmas card."

ALEXANDER WOOLLCOTT: The published version of "The Man Who Came to Dinner" will be dedicated to you . . . Barbara Hutton: There's one hitch in connection with your divorce and then marriage to Bob Sweeney. Your husband's friends inform that, in the settlement you made with him in Europe, Count Reventlow is to get the custody of your child if you should remarry before the youngster is 6.

MAX REINHARDT: Your son, Gottfried, hired a Filipino servant in Hollywood. In addition to performing his duties satisfactorily the Filipino proved to be an excellent chess player and licked all the guests Gottfried brought to play against him . . . After weeks of this, Gottfried finally asked him: "Where did you ever learn to play chess so well?" . . . "I learned it," he confided, "in prison. I served 12 years for killing a man. He was my employer. I killed him because he fired me."

LEOPOLD STOKOWSKI: After his current radio contract is terminated Orson Welles—who in his radio dramatizations of books and plays has found the rewriting and censorship too annoying—confides that he'll try a new idea. He plans to present a program featuring a symphony orchestra, a choir and Welles reading a book which will require neither censorship nor rewriting. The book will be the Bible. . . . Spec. Pros. Amen: And now another member of your staff will resign soon—to take a job higher up . . . J. Edgar Hoover: Isn't it true that you had the passport tampering story two months ago, but waited until Browder boasted about it before the Dies Committee?

DARRYL ZANUCK: Arthur Kober, whose new book, "Pardon Me for Pointing," is so good that it's sure to be a best-seller, was flattered when he received a letter from Harry Joe Brown, one of your top producers at Twentieth Century-Fox . . . Brown stated that he was proud of his collection of autographed books and was sending him a copy of "Thunder Over The Bronx," Kober's last book, to secure his autograph . . . Arthur, very much pleased at the thought that a famous Hollywood producer was interested enough to secure a copy, opened the book—and found a sticker pasted on the cover. It read: "Submitted by Small-Landau Company"—Kober's former Hollywood agents.

FRANK CAPRA: The executives at Columbia Pictures are hoping that your newest film, "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," will bring them a lot of money—because they've all just accepted a one-third cut in salary . . . Gypsy Rose Lee: Paul Stewart, who toured with you last summer in the show, "Burlesque," and who helped produce Welles' Martian broadcast, now portrays the role of Sammy in "The Rise of the Goldbergs."

POLICE COMMISSIONER VALENTINE: Phil Regan, who just returned from Hollywood, told the boys at Lindy's that his pictures cost only $100,000 to produce and are "quickies" . . . "Well, some day you'll get a break," he was consoled . . . "A break?" Regan laughed. "I've got a home, two cars, servants—and five years ago I wore a cop's uniform, at $44 a week."

DORIS DUKE: That insomnia-cure test, via recordings, which was to be held at Duke University last week was called off at the last minute, because a Life photographer appeared and wanted to take the pictures. The psychology department didn't want any publicity . . . Will Hays: For the filming of "Disputed Passage" Dorothy Lamour was told that she needn't wear her sarong. Director Frank Borzage, however, gave her a costume which was even more revealing than a sarong. "Oh, well," Dorothy told him, "at least I'm not being typed."

'Senator Smith' Elected for Second Week

Capra's Sensational Comedy of Capital Is Earle Holdover

The much-discussed "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" began its second week at the Earle yesterday, thus becoming one of an exclusive group to enjoy an extended engagement at that theater.

Surely, by now, every Washingtonian must have heard what happened to Mr. Smith when he arrived in our midst. The Frank Capra comedy, in which lanky, likeable James Stewart plays a starry-eyed, Governor-appointed Senator, has found its audiences here more interested, more knowing and hence more critical than they are likely to be anywhere else in the world. We have the feeling we are being put on the spot and are quick to our defense.

And for the early part of the film, Mr. Capra is brightly on his mettle. The State machine which appoints a youngster to fill an unexpired Senate term, purely because it feels itself safe with the poor dope and his cynical secretary on Capitol Hill, are amusing and biting conceits. The awe of the visitor and the indifference of the resident toward the Capitol dome is a nice detail which we all have surely experienced.

Some Unique Procedure

But Mr. Capra has tried to make the latter part of film a paean to democracy. A more noble aim one couldn't possibly imagine, but certainly democracy consists of more than well-worn words, more than the spectacle of a well-meaning, but inept young man reeling off the Constitution in a dragged-in-by-the-hair filibuster; more even than a lovely young cynic who has just seen the light, but doesn't seem to realize that her boy friend's case would be vastly improved if she merely wrote him a note of what was really going on in his home State rather than wig-wagging to him from the Senate gallery and watching him suffer.

Wrapped up in its red, white and blue package, this hollow quality has won cheers from quarters which might have been expected to know better. People also have been known to recoil from the person who "takes it all too seriously." Yet, it is offered seriously and thereby lays itself open to serious criticism.

Stage Revue Remains

The cast could scarcely be improved upon. James Stewart brings warmth and sympathy to the title role and Jean Arthur's ability to put real meaning into her lines is given free rein. Claude Rains, Thomas Mitchell, Guy Kibbe, Edward Arnold and Eugene Palette have the leading supporting roles in a company which include some of the most reliable names of the screen.

The brief and swift-moving stage revue at the Earle is also being held over, thus postponing the vacation of the incomparable Roxeyettes for a week, a matter which may not particularly please these peppy dancers but which meets with the full approval of those of us who view them as part of the capital scene. Maurice and Cordoba present a group of their beautiful dances in many tempos and the Oxford Boys score resoundingly with their impressions of famous orchestras. Arlene King introduces the acts with clever song arrangements and the Roxyettes complete the bill with their slick and swingy Scottish routine after a gala session on sixteen marimbas. RICHARD L. Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Oct. 27 (DS).—Frank Capra arrived home late tonight and he was extremely noncommittal over the hot rumor from New York that he, Dr. A. H. Giannini and David Selznick have formed a combine to try to buy Columbia Pictures Co. This hot tip was flashed to me today with the report that Harry Cohn had lingered on in New York to talk over the deal. Whether or not Harry and Jack Cohn would be willing to sell is another matter, but I do hear from a reliable source that this trio is eager to buy. If they do, the deal would include Wesley Ruggles' contract as well as the commitments Irene Dunne, Jean Arthur and Cary Grant have with Columbia.

LOUELLA PARSONS

While the Hollywood contingent dickered for Columbia, another offer was made in New York from a banker whose name is being kept quiet. All I am at liberty to tell is that he has a bankroll of many millions and is prepared to pay cash. Often in the past rumors have been current that Columbia was on the market, but no deal has ever materialized.

Whether the disheveled, thin, blond woman who came into Dave Chasen's hatless and wearing just a thin dress, was really Winnie Ruth Judd or some other unhapy soul—she threw hte entire cafe into an uproar. It was cok's night out and the place was filled with movie folk when the mystery woman, acting very strangely, entered and asked for a drink at the cocktail bar. When the bartender refused because of her odd appearance and manner, she quickly dashed out, jumping into a taxi that had been waiting for her. Immediately the hue and cry went up that it was the trunk murderess, just recently escaped from an Arizona asylum. The police were called and tried to get the license number of the cab, but evidently our movie stars aren't good detectives—because no one knew.

I was discussing Deanna Durbin with Joseph Pasternak on the Universal lot. Joe is getting ready to produce "Its a Date," her next picture, and you never heard such enthusiasm. He says it is her best story. I asked him about all the talk that Deanna was getting hard to handle. He says it is all a lot of nonsense. He has made six pictures with her without the slightest difficulty. All Deanna asks is the right to lead a normal life like any other girl of 18. I can't say I blame her for that, for it is not much fun when you're out with the B. F. to have cameras photographing your every move, and since Deanna knows what she wants, there is little doubt that she and Vaughn Paul will marry as soon as Deanna comes of age.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Don Ameche, who has been sicker than anyone admits, leaves on a duck-hunting trip, after which he and Mrs. Ameche will take a look at the shows in New York; Joan Crawford and Franchot Tone, an attractive pair dancing and dining at Victor Hugo's; Gladys George receiving the condolences of friends over the passing of her father, who had been sick for many weeks; Lupe Velez and Art Lashelle acting as if they cared, even though she denies it, at the Blossom Room of the Roosevelt Hotel; Fifi D'Orsay, who looks wonderful, did a number at the opening of the Sports Circle and nearly stopped the show; Lana Turner with Bill Hunt created almost as much attention as Bob Ritchie and the good-looking unknown he escorted to the Sports opening.

Jeanne Cagney, Jimmie's sister, biking around Beverly Hills with Roger Jones; Margaret Sullavan and Jimmy Stewart were on the M-G-M lot today for makeup tests for Lubitsch's picture; Penny Singleton is entertaining her dad, a newspaper editor; that was Sonja Henie's brother Leif with her at the Tropics; the Frank Lloyds have issued invitations for a dinner dance at the Beverly Wilshire November 3. Kenneth MacKenna and his bride, the former Mary Phillips, off to New York to buy material for M-G-M; Steffi Duna goes into the La Conga Tuesday, Halloween, to entertain the visiting customers.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Oct. 27.

Just ran into Gene Autry, who gave me a giggle about his trip to Ireland. Landing there during horse show week, he and his entourage took up practically an entire floor in the best hotel. Along came Liz Whitney, who, being unable to get a room, and hearing that Autry has most of 'm, decided to introduce herself. "I'm Mrs. Jock Whitney," she said, after knocking on his door, "you've got so many rooms, how about subleasing one to me? Just move over, cowboy—I'm going in!" Gene told me he all but swallowed his Adam's apple. "Lucky thing 'Champ' wasn't there—I might have swallowed him too." I complimented him on his judgment, choosing Jane Wither's picture rather than let the Marx brothers slice him up and put him together again in their next screwball comedy. Picture a cowboy getting a square deal with three Marxes!

HOPPER

And since we've been yowling about lack of opportunity our short-sighted producers have been giving to Dick Powell, it's nice to record that he was so good in Washington that they gave him a special day at the World's Fair. Opens tomorrow at Paramount in New York and has offers to star in three musical comedies. And I'll bet Hollywood will groan and moan when they have to pay his salary after he's finished those Eastern engagements.

Little Gloria Jean just called to tell me that she's championing dachshunds, too. And the wanted to know if her puppy could qualify. "You see, Miss Hopper," she explained, "Wimpy is only half dachshund—but his hind legs are fox terrier!" . . . For the first time in his life, Mickey Rooney has a chauffeur—not because he's gone "Hollywood." But his dad, Joe Yule, who likes football, won't go with Mickey 'cause he doesn't want to spoil the kid's fun. So Mickey hires a limousine, uniformed chauffeur to take his dad, while he and his "gang" go in his station wagon. And while we're about it—let's give Max Reinhardt credit—it was he who gave Mickey his second chance in "Midsummer Night's Dream"—remember?

We've all read, and loved, O. Henry. Wonder if you know how William Sidney Porter came by that name? While he was in prison, he decided that when he got out he'd make writing his life's work. Didn't want to use his own name. A cellmate had the habit of prefacing everybody's name with: "Oh, eh—" Porter's nickname was Henry, so when his pal called: "Oh, Henry," he jumped in the air. "That's it!" And so O. Henry was born. Now Ralph Spence is writing the screenplay of his life, and Spencer Tracy is crazy to do it. Met thinks he'll be crazy if he doesn't!

When Director Arthur Lubin watched Vic McLaglen get a summons because of Dr. Sonneland's glandular treatments — Lubin promptly presented virile Vic with a stuffed monkey . . . Leave it to "Muzzy" May Robson to do it the gracious way. You don't have to ring her doorbell—there's a buzzer under the "Welcome" mat, and by the time you reach the door, it's opened . . . Gracie Allen's Sandra is following in her mama's footsteps apparently, for she likes to make speeches. When little Ronnie fell and gashed his jaw, Sandra said: "To bad, but goody, now I'll have something to make a speech about in school tomorrow . . ."

Maestro Andre Kostelanetz was listening to Tony Martin, star of "Passport to Happiness" making a recording. "You know," Tony said seriously to the maestro, "I used to conduct an orchestra when I went to high school. A hot outfit, too—we called ourselves the "Five Peppers'. Ever hear of us?"

*X WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, OCTOBER 28, 1939 17

25,000 to See Hoya-G. W. Clash Today

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Milwaukee, Oct. 27.—Random (and I mean random) thoughts about football:

1. Why doesn't the rules committee give football officials authority to penalize a team half the distance to the goal line any time one of its players discards his helmet or takes the field without one?

POVICH

Of all the stupid attempts to court favor with the grandstands, the business of making oneself conspicuous by wearing no headgear is the champion. It's strictly a grandstand trick in most cases and inexcusable at all times. A helmet has never yet hurt its wearer, but a good swift kick by a cleated shoe on the place where the helmet should have been can be tragic.

The rules committee has tried to reduce serious injuries by ruling out the flying wedges and rolling blocks and severely penalizing piling-on, but it blithely disregards a feature every bit as dangerous despite the simplicity of the cure. The coaches are as much at fault. The coach who allows his zealous young men to play bareheaded and expose himself to a brain-chilling sock should be hooted out of the profession.

Best Drawing Cards in Pro Football

2. Hamlet apparently was right when he deduced that the play was the thing. The professional teams that draw the biggest crowds are not the Washington Redskins and the Detroit Lions, who feature the sideshow entertainments, but the Chicago Bears and the New York Giants, who stick faithfully to football.

(George Marshall, owner of the Redskins, takes exception to this paragraph. He states that the Washington Redskins will be second only to the New York Giants this season in point of attendance. He also states that the only reason Detroit exceeded the Washington attendance last year was because it played seven home games to five for the Redskins. The Chicago Bears are not an outstanding attraction at home, he states. Mr. Marshall produces this viewpoint, he says, in justice to the Redskin fans.—Editor's note.)

The Bears and the Giants are perfectly content to let George Marshall wheel out his toy cannons between the halves and regale the gathering with pirate skits and Redskin dances, and they probably applaud when Owner Dick Richards, at Detroit, calls out his 100-piece band and Mardi Gras troupes, but they show no signs of following that lead.

The Bears and the Giants are sticking to the quaint idea that football fans go to football games to see football played by the best kind of football players. And it may be no coincidence that they are the best drawing cards in pro football.

3. Chicago University, whipped on successive Saturdays by scores of 61 to 0 and 85 to 0, is making no attempt to obtain better football players, but is placing its faith in God, according to a student publication. There can be no quarrel with Chicago's decision if it was seeking the finest available tie-up.

But it reminds this department of Harry Costello's story. Costello was the young Georgetown quarterback in the lush days of Georgetown football when the Hoyas were playing Carlisle and the University of Virginia in their big games. Costello was the 135-pound freshman star of the backfield and the finest field-goal kicker in Georgetown's history.

Weighted Down With Responsibility

But with Georgetown students having bet their shirts on the coming game with Virginia young Costello was worried for fear that he might miss a field-goal attempt that would decide the game. Weighted down with responsibility, he attracted the notice of a priest as he paced the campus on the morning of the game.

"What's the matter, son?" the priest asked. Costello confessed his worries. "Well, son," said the priest, "did you ever think of prayer? Go over there to the chapel and say some prayers and I think everything will be all right this afternoon."

Costello went dutifully to the chapel. And that afternoon, as he stood on the 45-yard line with a minute to play and the score tied, he said another quick, silent prayer while waiting for the center to snap the ball. He prayed again as the ball sailed off his foot. And he intoned a prayer of thanks as it split the posts for the game-winning field goal.

That evening Costello encountered the same priest, "Thanks, father," he said, "the prayers did it."

"That's right, son," said the priest. "I saw that game this afternoon. Prayer is a wonderful thing, but it also helps if a fellow can kick a little bit, especially from 45 yards out.

Good Lesson for Anyone on Team

4. Any football coach would probably exchange a cargo of ball carriers for one excellent blocking back. Ball carriers are a dime a dozen, but potent blockers are rare. The coach knows what a blocker can mean to a football team, how it can make a teams attack move. But the blocker himself sometimes doesn't appreciate the part he plays.

One famous blocker does, however. Michigan's Tom Evashevsky, one of the Midwest's stand-out blockers, appreciates now what he means to his team. He was enlightened during Michigan's 85-0 rout of Chicago last week.

The Michigan team, scoring at will, decided to let Evashevsky carry the ball to see how he reacted. He hit the line for 11 yards and came back in the huddle excited. "This is fun," he said, "gimme that ball again." They did, but this time his teammates gave him no blocking, deliberately stepped aside and Evashevsky was smothered for a 10-yard loss by the entire Chicago team.

"What happened?" asked Evashevsky after he dug himself out of the pile.

"The same thing that happens to me," said Ace Ball Carrier Tom Harmon, "when guys like you don't block for me. How does it feel?"

Dope Favors G. U. in Tilt At Stadium

Cold, Clear Weather Forecast; Underdog Colonials Fired for Redemption Effort

By Jack Munhall.

Rousing student pep rallies and back-slapping alumni left behind, football teams of Georgetown and George Washington universities will be on their own come 2:30 this afternoon when the District's "mid-winter dream game" is revived after 16 lean years and presented to 25,000 avid fans at Griffith Stadium.

The weather man's latest prediction last night of "cold and clearing" was all that remained to assure the success of this local classic as the greatest, the most spectacular college football attraction in District history. Prodded by the promise of no additional rain, the advance ticket sale late yesterday had zoomed to 11,000, an infallible guage of the tremendous interest and enthusiasm provoked by the renewal of one of the section's oldest and most traditional rivalries.

Past Means Little

Apparently, it means little to this city's natives that a heavier, better-manned Georgetown eleven, riding the giddy heights of two undefeated seasons in which a tie with Syracuse alone marred a streak of 11 victories, will take the field a prohibitive 2-1 favorite. And it should mean little, for history of the Georgetown-Maryland football series, with its never-ending surprises and upsets, has set precedent that cannot be overlooked in a relationship so intense as that existing between G. U. and G. W.

Toss the dope sheets to the winds. Throw out all previous games played by the teams this season. For in this rivalry—one which dwarfs the G. U.-Maryland series by comparison—there are factors far more important than statistics. Cold, unsentimental reasoning can have little significance for this game.

G. W. Desperate

Involved are two squads of fiery, unpredictable youths, almost equally large and fast, if not on a par in potential ability. On the one hand is a Georgetown team, confident because it has met the test often and was not lacking; a team which, despite adverse criticism, would not be out of its class with any in the East, as it hopes to prove at N. Y. U.'s expense next month. On the other hand is a hard-bitten George Washington squad, a dismal failure in its three games to date; a team writhing under unfavorable press notices, and the pressure of its many local alumni, but still imbued with a confidence born of bitter determination and despair.

The Colonials are capable of great football. The players know their limitations and fully realize that they have been performing at a low ebb. Already they have all but wasted any chance of an impressive season, let alone a perfect one. But they see in Georgetown a hope, an opportunity to redeem themselves fully. The G. W.'s have pointed for this game, not since the beginning of the season, but from the very hour that it was arranged last spring. They have lived and eaten and talked nothing but victory over Georgetown, and there will be no slackers wearing the Buff and Blue this afternoon. Should one show the white feather, Coach Reinhart wouldn't have time to replace him; the other players with great dispatch would send him to the bench.

Audley Sale Yields Total of $218,425

By Anne Hagner

Berryville, Va., Oct. 27.—In the greatest sale of thoroughbreds ever seen in the Old Dominion, B. B. Jones' renowned Audley Farm stock went on the auction block today to yield a total of $218,425.

Of the 133 head of stallions, yearlings, broodmares and weanlings, highest price went for Audley's top sire, the imported Quatre Bras II, which went for $38,000 after five minutes of intense bidding. The big bid was made by Charles W. Williams, of Stadacona Farm at Glydon, Md., who was appearing in behalf of a group of prominent Maryland breeders. Future engagements will be booked in Maryland.

Spirited Competition

The dark bay stallion, a stake winner both here and in France, went to Williams after spirited competition among a number of Virginians who hoped to keep him in their home State. The smooth-tongued Fasig-Tipton auctioneer began the bidding at $15,000, from which it shot steadily upward to the final price.

Highest-priced yearling of the day was a yearling son of Quatre Bras, which went to the Christiana Stables, of Wilmington, Del., for $6,000. The colt, a bay grandson of Sweep, was considered by experts to be one of the finest racing prospects in Audley barns, and Virginians were not surprised that he brought the top bid of the young stock.

Other prominent bidders were Walter Chrysler, jr., of New York, who bought a number of yearlings and weanlings; Col. J. F. Wall, of Camden, S. C.; D. N. Rust, of Washington; Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloan's Brookmeade Stables, and many others who acted as agents for large racing stables.

Dukes Down Tex. Tech, 13-0, For 5 in Row

Forbes Field, Pittsburgh, Oct. 27 (AP).—Paced by their coach's flashy young brother, Alan Donelli, the Duquesne Dukes downed a hard-fighting Texas Tech eleven tonight on a muddy field, 13-0, and ran their string of victories to five straight.

The field was very wet and the ball slippery, causing both sides to resort to frequent kicks. Ahwesh made the game's first down picking up his own fumble of a pass from center on his 20 and running to the 40. As the first period ended scoreless, Ahwesh ran 15 yards for first down on Tech's 35 and Unites added 4.

The Dukes ran in an entire new team in the second quarter and on the first play of the period Alan Donelli, speedy young brother of the coach, ran through center from Tech's 31 on a fake reverse for a touchdown. After an argument by Coach Donelli on the field with officials, Rokisky was permitted to use a detachable kicking toe and booted the extra point. The half ended after more punting with Duquesne ahead 7-0.

The field was so sloppy the Dukes changed into blue jerseys at the intermission. The punting duel shifted into Tech's territory after one of Calhoun's kicks was partially blocked. Yurchey sent one out of bounds on the Tech 1-yard line. A 5-yard offside penalty for Duquesne and Calhoun's beautiful kick to the Dukes 35 put the ball in safe territory, although Connors returned the ball to the 44, where the period ended Duquesne still leading 7-0.

Donelli started another Duquesne touchdown by returning Calhoun's punt from the Tech 48 to the 31. He made 6 then first down on the 20. Semes ran from the 23 to the Tech 6 and scored from the 4. Rokisky's placement was wide. Douglas for Tech ran 20 yards late in the period to the Duke 40 and passed to Duncan for the first down on the 24, but the Dukes took the ball on downs just before the game ended, Duquesne, 13; Tech, 0.

Cornell Fights Ohio State in Grid Feature

By Bill Boni

Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Oct. 27.—The college football campaign, which each week has managed to produce one game of overshadowing importance, turns up another "natural" tomorrow in the meeting at Columbus between the unbeaten and untied forces of Ohio State and Cornell.

It brings together two crack representatives of their sections—Ohio State, a team with better morale and better balance than in recent years, and ranked with Michigan as Big Ten co-favorite, and Cornell, best team the East has produced so far and strong choice to retain the championship in the Ivy League.

Some 60,000 will be in the Buckeyes' stadium to see this clash, but the day's honors for attendance, once again, are due to go to Notre Dame. The Irish move into Pittsburgh, stacking their hopes for a perfect season against the embattled skibos of Carnegie Tech, and a sellout crowd of better than 65,000 will witness the festivities.

"The moving finger writes; and having written, moves on" to the complicated business of trying to weed the winners from among the also-rans. This week's predictions (probable attendance figures in perentheses):

Catholic Wins, 14-0, To Preserve Streak

Special Dispatch to The Post

Miami, Oct. 27.—The undefeated Cardinals of Catholic University tonight made their first appearance here since beating Mississippi in the 1936 Orange Bowl thriller, and ran their victory string to five straight games with a 14-to-0 victory over Miami University.

A crowd of 17,046, including Fred Snite, the famed "man in the iron lung," saw the alert Cardinals take advantage of two breaks to push over touchdowns in the second and third periods.

A Miami fumble which was recovered on the Hurricane 22 led to the first C. U. six-pointer. In three cracks at the line Fullback Rocco Pirro, a smashing 200-pounder, went over. Brother Carmen Pirro converted from placement.

Intercepts Pass

C. U.'s second touchdown came without warning early in the third stanza at a time when the Miami team apparently was threatening. Quarterback Pete Sachon intercepted a pass thrown by Steiner and galloped 56 yards on the most spectacular play of the night. Carmen Pirro converted again to make it 11 times this season he had added points after touchdowns for the Cardinals, who are one of the few untied and undefeated teams remaining in the East.

Miami, whose only loss before tonight was to powerful Wake Forest, put up stubborn opposition considering rumors that its players were torn by a dissension which resulted Thursday night in a week's suspension of a regular and a dependable reserve.

The visitors from the Nation's Capital, however, displayed a hard-tackling, smart blocking squad of huskies which had averaged 30 points in four previous games and which was definitely the better team tonight.

The Pirros—Rocco, the fullback, and Carmen, the tackle—were one of the greatest brother football combinations ever seen locally. Rocco, fast for a big fellow and an un-

Baltimore, Oct. 27.—Boston University pushed over a third-period touchdown here tonight to defeat Western Maryland's eleven, 6 to 0, in a night game originally scheduled for tomorrow afternoon.

Hoya Frosh Defeat G. W Yearlings, 13-0

The slim, slippery legs of Jack Doolan, Hoya halfback and former national interscholastic 60-yard sprint champion, were the difference between victory and defeat yesterday as the Georgetown frosh eleven turned back George Washington's Little Colonials, 13-0, at Griffith Stadium.

A disappointing crowd of 2,500 saw Doolan, an Asbrook Heights, N. J., lad, who schooled at Deton Hall Prep, dash 63 yards to the G. U. cubs' first touchdown in the second quarter and then pave the way with his fleet running for the Cornwall Station, Ontario, Oct. 27.—The barnstorming Washington Eagles' ice hockey team, which this season will become the National Capital's first entry in the Eastern Amateur League dropped a 9-5 decision to Cornwall Station tonight in a heavy fog.

A forecast of rain last night caused the postmonement of Central High's grid clash with George Washington High, at Alexandria. The game will be played tonight at the Alexandrians' stadium at its originally scheduled time, 8 p. m.

Virgil Davis Sold To Pittsburgh Pirates

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 27 (INS).—Virgil (Spud) Davis, veteran Philadelphia Phillies catcher, has been purchased by the Pittsburgh Pirates for an unannounced sum of cash, it was announced tonight.

The deal was disclosed by Bill Benswanger, president of the Pirates. He said the move was made at the request of Frankie Frisch, newly appointed manager, who wishes to bolster his weak catching department.

Isolater Injured, Scratched From Pimlico Special, Nov. 1

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Oct. 27.—The injury jinx that has dogged William Woodward's horses this year struck again today, knocking Isolater out of the Washington Handicap and Pimlico Special and probably ending his racing for the 1939 season.

Injured in Stall

Isolater, who would have been favored to take the $15,000 added Washington Handicap at Laurel tomorrow in a final tune-up for Wednesday's Special, cast himself in his stall last night and injured his left hock in trying to release himself.

Assistant Trainer Tom Driscoll said Isolater apparently had rolled over on his back and in attempting to regain his feet either kicked his hock or struck it against the wall. The joint was filled, bruised and feverish. It left Isolater limping.

In New York, "Sunny Jim" Fitzsimmons, head trainer for Woodward's Belair Stud, described Isolater's injury as a "terrible blow." He said the 6-year-old son of Blandford—Priscilla Carter was at peak condition and would have made a "real race" of the Special.

Scrooge, With George Wallace Up, Wins Feature at Laurel

Apprentice Gives Victor Good Ride

5-Year-Old Goes Route in 1:46 3-5; Daily Double Pays Backers $84.90

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent.

Laurel, Md., Oct. 27.—The Tall Trees Stable's Scrooge, with Apprentice George Wallace putting up one of his best rides, survived a lot of hustling and scuffing to win the fifth race, serving feature purposes on an ordinary Friday program. In front with the first tingle of the starting bell Scrooge skimmed the rail for the entire mile and a sixteenth and fought off a closing bid of Charlotte Girl, the favorite in a field of eight.

With a good track under him, the 5-year-old son of Haste had hot feet and went the route in 1:46 3-5. The oval was slightly off as the result of rains during the morning hours. However, overcast skies gave way to a bright sun after three races.

Tanganyika gave Scrooge a slight tussle for the lead going to the backstretch, but the gelding shook off his rival to open daylight on him. The Bedwell racer kept near Scrooge, but Wallace was rating his mount. Leaving the backstretch, several in the rear of the field began moves, including Charlotte Girl and White Sand. Sensing the action behind him, Wallace placed Scrooge to a drive and the gelding responded nobly. White Sand could not threaten seriously, but Charlotte Girl went up on the inside to tackle the pacemaker. Wallace did plenty of kicking on his mount which closed with excellent courage to hang on to a slight lead within 50 yards of the wire.

The daily double brought a return of $84.90 for the usual deuce. Jockey Maurice Peters was a hero with those who cashed in the four and two combination, for he rode both ends. He brought Canterup, a paddock tip, home ahead of Henry Tait and Cherry's Child.

Interlace Scores

In the third race, he hustled E. K. Bryson's Interlace to the wire ahead of Ponemah, the heavily played favorite, and Old River. Canterup paid $11.20 and Interlace paid $15.20.

Eleven horses started in the day's steeplechase and nine finished. Valpuiseaux, running in the colors of Walter Wickes, turned back the field after taking command going to the twelfth fence. He downed Maenard by three lengths, the latter holding the same margin over Pimochio. Jockey J. Haley brought the winner along on the inside, saving ground while his rival ran wide at the final bend. alpuiseaux paid $7.10.

Miss Kiluna fell at the first fence and Jockey Poland was thrown among the flying hoofs. The boy escaped with face cuts and a big black eye.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CANTERUP, $11.20, $5.80, $4.10; HENRY TAIT, $8.60, $4.80; CHERRY'S CHILD, $2.60.

CANTERUP, in thick of contention from break, came to inside of leaders to wear down LITTLE MOWLEE and held HENRY TAIT safe in closing drive. HENRY TAIT, sluggish out of gate, was sent to outside for racing room, circled horses and improved position, but faltered under punishment in closing 50 yards. CHERRY'S CHILD raced close up from start, took brief lead approaching stretch and weakened.

SECOND RACE—About 2 miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. Steeplechase. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:05. Off 2:06. Winner, W. Wickes' ch. g. (6), by Clarissimus—Vallonia. Trained by W. Chatman. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 3:36⅘. (14 jumps.)

FLYING FEATHERS	(Newton)	140	10	7	Lost rider					9.35
MISS KILUNA	(Poland)	135	8	8	Fell					398.70

Two-dollar mutuels paid—VALPUISEAUX, $7.10, $4.10, $4.50; MAENARD, $6.80, $4.50; PIMOCHIO, $6.40.

VALPUISEAUX, confidently handled and raced for a mile, improved position steadily when put to drive, saved much ground to come to inside to take command approaching thirteenth fence and drew out under hand riding. MAENARD, forwardly placed from beginning, took lead over PIMOCHIO, but ran out at turn nearing thirteenth fence and came gamely when straightened. PIMOCHIO, steadied off the early pace of WAR PORT, took command when pacemaker faltered, but was held safe at close while tiring. PROMOTER dropped far out of it and closed some ground. FLYING FEATHERS lost rider at first fence. MISS KILUNA fell at first fence.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:36. Off 2:36½. Winner, E. K. Bryson's b. f. (2), by Transmute—Wee. Trained by J. Serio, Jr. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:14⅘.

MAMIE'S LAD	(Dufford)	111	12	7	11h	12	12	12	312.00

Two-dollar mutuels paid—INTERLACE, $15.20, $3.80, $2.90; PONEMAH, $2.60, $2.20; OLD RIVER, $3.60.

INTERLACE, forward factor from beginning, was put to drive when PONEMAH went to front, rallied to wear down latter and won going away. PONEMAH, off in tangle, was rushed to front and weakened. OLD RIVER, off slowly, came wide for racing room and closed gamely. ROYAL JESTER was hard ridden on inside to gain contention and tired.

Daily Double, CANTERUP and INTERLACE, Paid $84.90.

WEATHER, CLEAR. TRACK, GOOD.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,100. The Hollywood. For maiden 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:05. Off 3:05. Winner, W. E. Johnson's ro. g. (3), by Kiev—Keene Lady. Trained by C. P. Miles. Value to winner, $800; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:49.

Horses	Jockeys	Wt.	Post	St.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Straight
KEYMAN	(Robertson)	112	6	8	7h	5d	3hd	2h	1½	$6.70

CULL KING	(Polk)	112	2	6	8	6	Pulled up			144.05

Two-dollar mutuels paid—KEYMAN, $3.40, $2.40, $2.10; SANTIAGO, $4.30, $2.40; NILON, $2.20.

KEYMAN, steadied along for half, came to outside for racing room, circled SANTIAGO and NILON to get to front and held away thereafter under drive. SANTIAGO was rushed to front going to first turn, could not shake off NILON for three-quarters and held on willingly, but was no match for winner. NILON pressed pace to midstretch and weakened. GOSSIP TIME was eased back going to first turn along rail and failed to rally. CULL KING was pulled up when outclassed.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,100; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won easily; place same. Went to post 3:35. Off 3:37. Winner, Tall Trees Stable's ch. g. (5), by Haste—Curiosity Shop. Trained by L. O'Donnell. Value to winner, $800; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:46⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SCROOGE, $13.20, $6.90, $3.90; CHARLOTTE GIRL, $4.00, $2.70; WHITE SAND, $2.70.

SCROOGE, first away, shook off TANGANYIKA to get clear lead, was rated along in front and held on gamely when put to stout drive from midstretch. CHARLOTTE GIRL, striking distance from start, came to inside boldly in midstretch, and hung after almost getting to winner. WHITE SAND saved ground to improve position and hung near close. BALLOTER had speed in spots.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls for all but Broadway Juel. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:06. Off 4:07½. Winner, Mrs. E. C. Eastwood's gr. g. (4), by Dark Hero—Candy Queen. Trained by F. J. Mormile. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:47⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GEODESIAN, $46.70, $15.90, $10.80; COURSING, $4.20, $3.30; GAONA, $3.80.

GEODESIAN, forced to weave between horses to gain forward position in opening quarter, was steadied along rail to the far turn, came through on inside with rush to get to front and barely lasted. COURSING, slow to begin, came around horses while improving position and was wearing down winner at end. GAONA set early pace, was steadied along when MISS FIXIT was rushed to front and came willingly at close.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won easily; place same. Went to post 5:05. Off 5:06. Winner, Mrs. L. Vlau's ch. g. (3), by Omar Khayyam—Cambeltiy. Trained by J. P. Jones. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:57.

Jack Walsh Stars For Victors, Passing For One Touchdown And Scoring Another

By Bill Burnett

Roosevelt High ended its prolonged scoreless streak yesterday at Tech, but its winless record remained as good as gold as the maroon-clad defending team ground out a 20-to-6 victory.

Danny Boothe, elongated wingman of the Riders, made the unprecedented scoring effort with less than a half-minute of the final quarter remaining, taking Hymie Lancaster's 10-yard aerial over the head of Tech's safety man in the end zone. It wasn't the only stellar performance of tall Denny. He sparked a defense that appeared downright brilliant in the first half and made easily half of the Rider tackles. Along with Marvin Kogod, his opposite in appearance, he spent half the afternoon in Tech's backfield trying to stop gains Roosevelt couldn't halt at the line of scrimmage.

First Interhigh Victory

The victory was McKinley's second straight, though its first in the western division of the interhigh series. And the star of the sound thrashing given Roosevelt was Jack Walsh, 155-pound triple threat back, who pased to Bill Dellastatious for one touchdown and carried another over after accepting Vic McCampbell's heave.

Until Walsh was allowed to pass, as a matter of fact, Roosevelt appeared to have a bright chance of winning. It stopped two headlong drives, one of 68 yards and the other covering 22 yards, in the first half, and the only score McKinley could manage was a safety in the waning seconds of the second quarter. Pushed back to its 2-foot line in the first quarter, an offside penalty gave Roosevelt a momentary respite, and Bernie Kolker a few minutes later kicked out to the 31.

Again the win-hungry Trainers came on, this time to Roosevelt's B. There they lost possession of the ball because of a back in motion. Kolker's attempt to kick out again was hindered by a bad pass from center, and he was nailed by Les Ehrlich, of the Maroons, for the only points of the half.

As ineffective as were the Trainers in the first half—at least as far as score went—they functioned with beautiful precision after the start of the second. Taking a Kolker kick on Tech's 40, Vern Hollidge lateralled to Walsh, who reached the 50. Two successive first-down passes, Walsh to Jack Hoyert and Walsh to Dellastatious, brought the ball to the 16, from which point after three fultile line plays, Walsh hurled again to Dellastatious over the goal. It was the first touchdown, and Buckley's placement, like all other tries for points, was no good.

The second McKinley score came on the first play of the final quarter. Lancaster, standing on his own 32, aimed a pass at Boothe that somehow got tangled in Bob Firomanti's fingers, and the speedy reserve went over without a hand on him.

A few minutes later Tech struck for the third and last time. McCampbell's pass to Walsh ate up 21 yards of Roosevelt territory to make the score 20-0, then came Roosevelt's first score of the year.

That Roosevelt was hopelessly outclassed despite its comparatively close loss is evident by the statistics. Tech amassed 15 first downs to the Riders' 3, and 10 of the Trainer firsts were registered in the first half against none for their foes.

In the air, where the game was actually decided, Roosevelt seemingly had a wide edge. It tried nine passes and completed four, but the rub was three interceptions. Tech went into the upper strata 21 times, made eight attempts good, and saw only one interception.

Georgetown Prep, Landon Tie, 6-6

A touchdown pass, McKelway to Baker, with a scant 40 seconds of the final quarter remaining, gave Landon Prep gridders their third deadlock of the season yesterday at Bethesda, a 6-to-6 tie with Georgetown Prep. The team had previously ended games with St. Paul, of Baltimore, and Woodrow Wilson High in stalemates.

The Little Hoyas, winners of three straight going into the game, registered their solitary score in the second quarter when Marty Kuntz, substitute back, skirted the end and raced 35 yards to a touchdown. It was the climax of numerous brilliant gains by the youthful reserve, and set Georgetown up to a lead it was just 40 seconds short of holding.

Landon desperately attempted to knot the score as the second half progressed. Late in the fourth it reached the Little Hoya 4, but there it encountered a rugged line that wouldn't yield. After taking the ball, however, Georgetown Prep was guilty of the fumble that later gave Landon its chance to tie.

Redskins Depend on Passes To Beat Packers Tomorrow

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Milwaukee, Oct. 27.—There isn't any secret about Coach Ray Flaherty's plan of battle when his Redskins take the field against the Greenbay Packers at the State Fairgrounds here on Sunday.

That is, there isn't any secret if Flaherty is intending to strike along the path of least resistance, a formula that always gets consideration. The Redskins coach in all likelihood will give his team the forward-pass signal Sunday and tell his passers to keep pitching.

Because despite the Redskins' own vulnerability against passes the Packers have even a worse record against the aerial game. The Greenbay club has had little difficulty stopping enemy running games but it has been no great shucks on pass defense. Statistics of the National League reveal that nearly twice as many passes have been completed against the Packers this season as against the Redskins.

Busy Afternoon

Thus Sammy Baugh and Frank Filchock are anticipating a busy afternoon for their throwing arms and if they reckon rightly Sunday's battle may develop into the greatest aerial display to be seen in the league in this season or several seasons.

The Packers are one of the cleverest passing teams in the league if, indeed, they are not the cleverest. With Arnie Herber and Cecil Isbell to chuck the ball and Don Hutson to receive it, Coach Curly Lambeau has been playing a passing game to the hilt this season. It netted three touchdowns against the tough Detroit Lions last week.

The Packers, however, expose themselves to the enemy's running attack whenever they have the fleet Don Hutson in the line-up for pass-catching purposes. Hutson, unparalleled as a pass receiver, is something less than even a good end defensively, and his presence in the line-up may be the signal for the Redskins to cut loose the full fury of their running game.

Packers Favored

The extent to which Hutson is feared as a pass receiver was made known last year by the New York Giants in a pair of late-season games with the Packers. The Giants actually assigned two men to cover Hutson on long passes, even at the risk of leaving another man uncovered. Center Mel Hein would cover Hutson in the area immediately behind the line of scrimmage and safety man Ed Danowski had orders from Coach Steve Owen to tail Hutson any time he passed out of Hein's territory.

The betting odds still favor the Packers at 7 to 5 and 8 to 5, despite the fact that the Redskins are as yet unbeaten while Green Bay has been knocked off once this season. Responsible for those odds is the fact that while the Packers last week were slapping down Detroit, 21 to 7, and ruining the team's unbeaten record, the Redskins were looking very weak against the passing attack of the lowly Pirates, whom they were able to lick only 21 to 14.

Coach Flaherty has not been neglecting other phases of the Redskins' defense in his frenzy to improve their play against passes. All week in dummy scrimmage reserve Redskin backs have been simulating the rushes of big Clark Hinkle and Cecil Isbell, who will be carrying the ball whenever the Packers' passing game is sidetracked.

Mayo Lost to Navy For Clemson Tilt

A Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Oct. 27.—Already cast in the role of underdog for their game here tomorrow with Clemson, Navy's football Midshipmen received another blow today when it was announced Lou Mayo, understudy to the injured Emmett Wood, nad Tom McGrath, massive line wheelhorse, will see the battle from the sidelines.

Only silver lining for Coach Swede Larson was the return of Cliff Lenz, 200-pound fullback, and a dim report that Banks McFadden, the South Carolina Cadet's potential all-America halfback, may also be held out of the game because of an injury.

Larson Optimistic

Although the Navy starting lineup picture was changing with a rapidity rivaling that of the European map as hourly bulletins from doctors arrived, Larson was optimistic—he even went so far as to say it'll be "an even bet" tomorrow.

"It's wide open. Clemson has a sweet ball club, but both teams will feel the absence of key stars," he said.

Larson said his squad is ready and that its strength will hardly be any lower than usual at midseason. But he will wait until shortly before game time to decide upon his starting lineup.

If McFadden is held out, the Tigers' famed "two team" strategy will be considerably upset. The running, passing and kicking of McFadden has been the spark of Clemson's attack.

Two Teams Ready

Clemson has two smoothly functioning teams which Coach Jess Neely has used in piling up 76 points to 12 for the Tigers' opponents in every game this year. It was the so-called "second" team which ran over South Carolina, 27-0, last week.

The game marks the first time Clemson has met Navy and will carry heavy import for the Midshipmen as a "test" game.

Eastern Beats John Marshall In Richmond

Passing Attack Accounts for Lone Score in 7-0 Victory

Richmond, Va., Oct. 27.—A successful aerial thrust in the opening quarter, good for 21 yards, and the only touchdown of the game, gave Eastern High, of Washington, a 7-0 victory over local John Marshall High gridders here today.

Two times Eastern came pounding down the field in the opening stanza, both times being stopped by a desperate Marshall line. On the third try, however, the Tide counted on Paul Cohill's slant to Quarterback Buddy Yokum. Wiggie Kidwell, wingman, accounted for the extra point with a perfect placement.

The third and fourth periods also saw Eastern make dire threats to score, but each time it was checkmated without a tally. Four D. C. drives inside the John Marshall 10-yard line were stopped. It was the third straight victory for Eastern, after losing its first three games of the season.

Rollins College Defeats Havana

Orlando, Fla., Oct. 27 (U.P.).—Merlin Mitchell, speedy sophomore halfback, turned in two 65-yard touchdown sprints tonight as Rollins College defeated the University of Havana, 25 to 0.

Mitchell ran through the entire Havana team for the first touchdown in the opening period and repeated in the fourth period. Rollins moved 67 yards in three plays and justice scored from his 24 early in the fourth period.

Temple Defeats Bucknell, 16-0

Philadelphia, Oct. 27. — Line Shattering Jonah Bowles led Temple to a 16-to-0 victory over Bucknell tonight. The 190-pound fullback from Eskdale, W. Va., smashed over for both Temple's touchdowns, kicked both extra points while his punt that went out on the Bucknell 1-yard line led to an automatic safety.

Long Drives Produce Two Touchdowns

Red Raiders Twice March 80 Yards as Capacity Crowd of 2,000 Sees Contest

Woodrow Wilson High dedicated a new stadium yesterday, but Western's football team stole the show, defeating the Presidents, 14 to 0, before a capacity 2,000 crowd.

The dedication ceremony consisted solely of a flag-raising exercise, with the combined bands of Wilson and Western furnishing the music. The flag was presented by Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, a member of the Board of Education, was accepted by Alice Lorraine Johnson, chairman of the Wilson Student Forum, and was raised by Jerome Alexis Collins, president of the Wilson Student Council.

Up to this time, things were going nicely for Wilson, but with the first sound of Referee Magoffin's whistle, the "worm turned" and from this time on Western dominated the show.

Western Scores First

The Westerners scored first in the opening quarter on the heels of an 80-yard march which culminated when George Barnes, Red Raider sparkplug, plunged over from the 4-yard line. The drive started the first time Western got its hands on the ball, taking possession on the 20-yard stripe after Roland Cornwall's beautiful 72-yard punt traveled over the goal line.

Hilleary started the ball rolling for the winners, dashing off tackle for 18 yards and following this up with a 17-yard sprint around end, to place the ball on the Wilson 48. Two running plays netted 16 yards and then Barnes picked up 10 more, to place the ball on the 19. From here Roddy Snow recovered a fumble behind the line of scrimmage and laterated to Hilleary, who carried the oval to the 5-yard stripe. It took but one play from the 5 to score the touchdown, Barnes going over and converting with a pass to Harold Mitchell, an end.

Wilson Halts Threat

Another Raider scoring threat in the same period was silenced when Ray Banello, Wilson safety man, intercepted one of Hilleary's passes after the hard-driving Western backs had carried the ball to the Wilson 20. Wilson, however, was unable to do anything in the way of an offense once it took possession of the ball.

The Raiders did score their second touchdown in the third period and once again it came after an 80-yard drive. Three first downs without a passing play resulted with Barnes and Hilleary lugging the ball. Barnes made a first down on the Western 28 and then Barnes dashed around end for 15 yards to the 13. From here Barnes streaked around end and went over standing up. Snow took Barnes' pass in the end zone for the fourteenth point.

Anacostians Beaten, 47-0

The upsetting Indians of Anacostia High were the victims of the season's worst schoolboy beating yesterday at Arlington, where Washington-Lee High hung up a 47-0 triumph for its sixth straight victory of the season.

As expected, it was Wally Legg, track dashman, who tripped off big chunks of ground for the Little Generals and won individual scoring honors with 12 points. Legg began what he must have thought was a track meet with an 80-yard dash for a touchdown, and it was the same speedy halfback who ended scoring in the final period with a 40-yard dash through Anacostia's whole club.

In contradiction of the huge score, however, is the fact Coach Rolland Lund failed to use his first team for more than half the game.

CONSIDINE

Heavyweights

Joe Louis' boxing exhibition tour has been cut from nine showings to two by Mike Jacobs, who found that some of the promoters along the route were advertising the exhibitions as title fights . . . Tony Galento will fight Max Baer this winter, either in Miami or Chicago . . . Parliament will intervene in Tommy Farr's behalf, to enable the R. A. F. flier to come here to fight Louis at the Garden . . . Louis' other winter opponent will be Arturo Godoy—thus he will twice break the N. B. A. ruling which says that title fights must be waged only against the first three ranking challengers. They are Galento, Pastor and Nova, on the N. B. A. lists . . . Jacobs office informally leans toward a Louis-Galento fight for next June (contingent, of course, on what Baer does to Tony) and are thinking seriously of a Louis-Conn fight for September—if Conn can come through against Bob Pastor, Lou Nova and several other light-hitting heavies he will be matched against . . . Baer's last comeback was in honor of his father, he said; this one is for his baby . . . A Comiskey-Buddy Baer fight is brewing . . . Comiskey is now definitely labelled as a Louis opponent for June of 1941, and it's surprising how many combers along Jacobs beach think he will be more than ready by that time to take the champ.

Light-Heavyweights

The general inactivity of this division will push Billy Conn, the champ, upstairs to the heavyweight class—whether he's heavy enough or not. If he can beat Gus Lesnevich in his next defense of his title, he will just about have exhausted the foes with whom he could draw money . . . Fred Apostoli is now a light-heavy and is scheduled to fight Melio Bettina soon, for the so-called right to meet Conn. But Billy has beaten both of them twice, and there doesn't seem to be any real public demand for him to win permanent possession of them with a third triumph.

Middleweights

Ceferino Garcia, one middleweight champ, won't fight Al Hostak, the N. B. A. champion, in Seattle—where Hostak draws the best. And Hostak won't fight Garcia in New York. Hostak turned down a 30 per cent offer to meet the Filipino here . . . Jacobs is a little afraid that he might be double-crossed by Eddie Mead, manager of Henry Armstrong, and George Parnassus, manager of Garcia—who are threatening to sign for a middleweight title on the Coast. It should be a good test of the efficacy of Mike's contracts on the fighters. Armstrong beat Garcia rather easily when they fought with the welterweight title at stake. The boxing game in general isn't interested in the record Armstrong would set by beating Garcia—which would give him the incomparable mark of having won the featherweight, lightweight, welterweight and what passes for the middleweight titles in a little more than two years. The Garcia-Hostak impasse might be relieved by the appearance of Fred Henneberry, the Australian middle. Henneberry gets his first real United States test against Georgie Abram at the next Garden show.

Welterweights

Armstrong should hold this one for a while, even though he next fights Lou Ambers, who combined with Referee Arthur Donovan to beat him for the lightweight title . . . We have a hunch that there won't be as many fouls called in this one and that Armstrong will win—and that at least a contributory factor to the verdict will be that Lou's manager, Al Weill, isn't too keen on having his guy win this title—because Al's other fighters, Sammy Luftspring and Al Nettlow, then couldn't challenge for the welter crown . . . Pedro Montanez, in shape, will give any of them a battle . . . Al Davis, who is coming up fast, must bet by Tony Canzoneri next Wednesday. Tony, fighting with the desperation born of having a lot of domestic bills to pay, will be tough—even for the glum, merciless Davis.

Lightweights

Ambers is the class of an active but puerile division, the best challenger in which would seem to be Sammy Angott.

Featherweights

The division has been in a stew since Armstrong retired from it . . . Archibald, Chavez, Scalzo and Jeffra are about on a par . . . Rapacious managers who demand exorbitant guarantees before they'll let their champs or near champs fight, have slowed up the division . . . It costs $10,000 to get a fight with Archibald . . . who has been offered $7,500 (and turned it down) to fight the tough young Canadian, Dave Castilloux in Montreal . . . Sixto Escobar, up from the bantamweight class, will be troublesome . . . He holds a kayo victory over Archibald—as does Scalzo. Chavez is the gorilla who has licked both Archibald and Scalzo.

Bantamweights

The next champ will be Georgie Pace, of Cleveland, who will be named by the N. B. A. to succeed Escobar. A minimum of interest in the division.

Flyweights

There ain't none.

Terps Play Florida Today at College Park

Homecoming Game for Terrapins

Southerners Boast Victory Over Boston College; 5,000 Fans To Watch Battle

In the feature of a colorful homecoming program the University of Maryland eleven this afternoon will attempt to rebound from two successive losses at the expense of strong Florida at College Park in the eighteenth meeting between the schools. Kick-off will be at 2:30.

Although a few players of each team nurse minor injuries, the Terps and 'Gators have been pronounced fit for what looms as a thrilling, high-scoring battle. The odds are about even and a crowd of 5,000 is expected.

Although several hundred miles from home, the 'Gator eleven, which boasts at 7-0 upset victory over Boston College, will not be wanting for rooters. Florida's 60-piece band is on hand for the game and vocal support will be given the 'Gators by the 'Gator Pen Club of 35 and many local alumni.

Today's game will afford Maryland a chance to even the series with Florida, which has won four of their previous seven meetings, although the Terps tallied 67 points in the seven contests to only 41 for their rivals. Only once since 1934, when the teams started to meet annually, has either been blanked and their current styles of play indicate that this record will be extended.

Both employ extensive forward passing and both like to gamble. The Terps have a pair of good passers and all-around backs in Pershing Mondorff and Joe Murphy. In addition, they are strengthened by the return of Bob Brown, star tackle, who has been out for two weeks with an injury.

The two-touchdown margin which extended G. U.'s undefeated streak to three games and snapped a three-game G. W. string, was hardly a true indication of the strength of the two teams. George Washington outplayed the Hilltoppers in the first half, yet trailed at intermission after Doolan's electrifying jaunt, and played the foes on fairly even terms in the second half until the last few minutes.

Then Georgetown's superior reserve power and conditioning seemed to assert themselves, and at the end the Little Colonials were being pushed around at will. Georgetown's line, led by Chris Pavich, one of the finest ends ever seen in the local freshman ranks, was powerful throughout the fray and reflected glory of the coaching of Joe Frank and Jim Hill. But the G. W. forward wall was also a formidable array of 200-pounders which turned back most of G. U.'s line thrusts with great success, and, until the aforesaid last quarter, was far from outclassed.

The difference then was between the backfields. George Washington had an outstanding halfback in Don Pinnow, a 185-pound powerhouse runner and a great paser, who came close to being the best player on the field. But whereas Pinnow was the only standout G. W. back, Georgetown presented no less than five splendid ball carriers, blockers and passers.

Besides the brilliant Doolan, who is practically uncatchable once shaken free beyond the line of scrimmage, Bill McLaughlin, John Barrett, Mickey Ford and Bob Koehler proved themselves capable all-around backs. McLaughlin was especially good on defense, intercepting no less than three G. W. passes, the last of which gave G. U. a chance for its second score.

Stallions, Mares, Yearlings, Weanlings Go Under Hammer at Audley

Audley Sale Brings Total Of $218,425

Trace Call, another good stallion, went for $15,000 to the Cromwell Bloodstock Agency, of Lexington, Ky., and Gallant Mac was sold to Robert Leach, an agent from Front Royal, for $4,100. The remaining stallion, Strolling Player, did not call forth an initial bid and hence was not sold.

Upward of 3,000 horse breeders, fanciers, and the just plain curious mobbed the historic acres of Audley, once home of George Washington's niece, Nellie Custis. In a scene that reminded spectators of the paddock at Saratoga or Belmont Park, the thoroughbred youngsters nickered and quivered at the unusual number of humans that had invaded the privacy of their immaculate white rows of stables.

From Florida, Texas, New York, Kentucky, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Iowa, and nearly every State in the Union, they came, and before the last stallion left the tiny sales ring horse vans were congregating in the stable yards to take the purchasers to their new homes.

With a catalogue full of horses with the best breeding in Virginia to their credit, horsemen sat quietly on the sidelines and indicated by the flicker of an eyelash or the lift of a finger that they were willing to go up another thousand or so. In the majority of cases the spectators had no idea from whence the bidding came, but when Quatre Bras 2d was knocked down for $38,000, word flew around the ring in two minutes identifying the buyer.

ing. Cornell's heroes have ridden rough-shod over everything so far, but the Buckeyes will be tough on their own field, they have picked up strength with the return of fine-plunging Johnny Raab, and Ohio State is the pick in a real battle.

Penn-North Carolina (50,000)—This looks like anybody's ball game, with Stirnweiss and Lalanne, of Carolina, against Koepsell and Reagan, of Penn. We like the Tarheels by a shade, but they might do well to score early instead of trusting to one of those last-minute rallies.

Carnegie Tech-Notre Dame (65,000)—The Irish rolled up 419 yards without completing a pass against Navy. Tech, they say, will throw plenty of passes to try ot recoup for last week's defeat by N. Y. U. Notre Dame.

California - Southern California (58,000)—Even without the extra week's rest the Trojans have had, the choice would be Southern Cal.

Texas A. & M.-Baylor (20,000)—The Aggies.

Tulane-Mississippi (35,000)—Since beating L. S. U., Ole Miss has rolled up 117 points to opponents' none in three games. But not against anything like this opposition. Tulane, profiting from last week's lesson.

Navy-Clemson (15,000)—The loss of Banks McFadden looks like too much of a handicap for Clemson. Navy.

Columbia-Virginia Military (15,000)—Like Navy, the Lions booked this one for a "breather." Paul Shu and Bosh Pritchard may run 'em breathless. V. M. I.

Michigan-Yale (60,000)—Yale's starting line is stout, but there's not much behind it. Michigan and its many men.

Alabama-Mississippi State (15,000)—State has been scored on only once. Still, 'Bama, bouncing back from that Tennessee lacing.

Tennessee-Mercer (9,000)—Tennessee.

Fordham-Pittsburgh (50,000)—The Rams are rested, and seme to have too much talent to drop three in a row. Fordham.

Santa Clara-Purdue (25,000)—Santa Clara to surprise the Boilermakers.

Duke-Wake Forest (20,000)—Duke in a close one.

Texas-Rice (25,000)—May be the spot for Rice to surprise by winning, but Texas is the selection.

Harvard-Dartmouth (40,000)—Dartmouth to keep the Indian sign on the Crimson.

Iowa - Wisconsin (20,000)—Nile Kinnick should give Iowa the edge.

Villa Nova - Arkansas (15,000)—Strictly a gamble, Arkansas.

U. C. L. A.-Oregon (50,000)—The Uclans, but close.

25,000 to See Hoyas Battle G. W. U. Today

game. A Georgetown squad, with little to gain and the school's longest victory streak and slowly acquired prestige to lose; a George Washington squad, already branded a failure and called by some the poorest Colonial eleven in years, but faced with a great opportunity for redemption.

The game will bring together two powerful lines and two versatile backfields. Georgetown, with the typical rock-ribbed forward wall that Mush Dufofsky turns out regularly, fears but little George Washington's running attack, secure in the knowledge that no team has scored through it all season. There are grave misgivings in the Georgetown camp, however, and these arise from the team's weak pass defense which allowed two touchdowns to Syracuse and another to Bucknell.

For two years the Hoyas have been vulnerable to assaults from the air and this afternoon should be no exception. For if George Washington, as a team, possessed any edge over Georgetown, it is in passing. The Hoyas have in Jules Koshlap an exceptionally fine thrower, but he is only one.

G. W. Boasts a Pair

He is only one against a pair of Colonial aerial artists, Billy Richardson, a veteran and Ed Wilamoski, a comparatively untested sophomore. For two years Richardson has been a deadly short passer, a continual touchdown threat with his whistling short pegs. But not in those years has George Washington had a long passer of the potentialities of Wilamoski to balance its aerial offense.

Wilamoski probably is unknown to many fans, but he may be the biggest surprise of the game. In preseason scrimmages with Maryland he was sensational, a real triple-threat back. Strangely and, perhaps omniously for Georgetown, he has been seeing but little action. The rumor is that Coach Reinhart has withheld him purposely, hiding the Colonials' most talented offensive weapon from the eyes of enemy scouts. However, today will be seen the indicator of Wilamoski's ability. Today also should mark the rise or fall of a Georgetown backfield "dark horse."

While Speed Merchant Lou Ghecas, dipsy doodle open field runner and the dead calm Koshlap have been Georgetown's backfield stars, stock little Benny Bulvin was playing an obscure role. Not until the Bucknell game was he outstanding. But then with a chance to show his bolting, jarring speed, Bulvin was downright sensational. He crashes enemy lines like a tank and once in the clear performs like a twisting, slippery halfback. He definitely is headed for stardom.

Some of the old dependable standouts to be seen today are G. W.'s Murphy Booth, a blocker par excellence, and Bob Nowaskey, the peer of any end in the East, and G. U.'s Bob Kercher, another great end, and Joe McFadden, Coach Hagerty's choice as the greatest inspirational quarterback in Hilltop history.

There will be only one important change in either line-up today. Jim Castiglia will start his first 1939 game for Georgetown, replacing Myron Darmohray, first-string fullback, who has a slightly injured knee.

Average Bowler Rolls 487 Set; Near D.C. Mark

George Beyer, an "average" bowler with No. 2 team of Manor Country Club, came within ten pins of tying the all-time city record for individual sets last night at Lucky Strike when he turned in a 487. The high mark is held by Joe Pricci.

Though thwarted in his effort to beat or tie the all-time high, Beyer was credited with a record for the season. His games, 167, 161 and 159, were well above any other efforts of the night, and helped his team to an odd-game triumph over Kenwood No. 2 in the Country Club League as well as to high team set of the night, 1,781. Only honor captured by Kenwood was for a 614 team game.

"Red" Thompson featured rolling in the Navy Yard League with a game of 140, and Bucky Burns had 359 for high set. Breech Mechanism rolled high team game, 601, and F. and A. No. 1 whipped out a 1,695 set.

Takoma

Billiard quintet, of the Takoma Duckpin League, was dumped from top position in the standings when Youngblood's Hardware captured three straight. Dome Oil stepped into the top spot with a sweep over Americans. A 153 game by Howard Russell, of the Hardware men, featured the rolling.

Queen Pin

High game of 131 and set of 350 by Joe Ritnours, of Second Battalion, highlighted the D. C. F. D. League, as the team combined for an odd-game victory over Fifth Battalion.

Army-Navy Dominates N.B.C. Event

Army and Navy Club women golfers played host to the annual N. B. C. tournament yesterday at the service club and made a big day of it, winning 7 of the 15 prizes, including low net and gross in Class A, low gross and a tie for net in Class B, and in both divisions the host club members led the field by five strokes. It also marked the second year in a row the Allan Burton coached delegation has dominated the event.

Mrs. David Clark, the two-time champion from the host club, was only three strokes of Helen Detweiler's course record with an 80, that won low gross. Low net, a silver fox fur, went to Mrs. M. K. Barroll, the Corby Cup champion, who deducted a 12 handicap from an 84 for a 72. They topped the 1 to 16 handicapped players.

The mother and daughter duo from the service club, Mrs. W. L. Weible and daughter Jerry, an American University student, were the only 100-breakers in the 16 to 30 handicap players, Mrs. Weible winning low gross over the younger members of the family with a 48-48, 96, Jerry posting 50-47. 97.

Four-Way Tie

Low net among the higher handicapped players ended in a four-way tie at 79, with Mrs. W. L. Lunger, Manor, winning in the draw with a 105—26—79. Mrs. J. M. Epperly, Columbia, was second with 108—29—79; Miss Weible, third, 97—18—79, and Mrs. Don Dudley, Indian Spring, fourth, with 107—28—79. The other winner was Mrs. R. F. Nicholson, Washington, 102—22—80.

Second low net in the 1-16 class was won by Mrs. C. F. Thompson, of Army and Navy's prize winners, with 44, 47—91—15—76, while Mrs. Gale E. Pugh, Manor, Keefer Cup winner, was in the prize list again with 44, 47—91—13—78, a score tied by Mrs. M. J. Torlinski, Army and Navy, who was out in 42 but took 48 coming back for 90—12—78. Mrs. Oscar Coolican, Chevy Chase, won fifth low net with 92—12—80.

Three ties with 81 net also figured in the prize list, with the awards all donated by District merchants, and the host pro. Mrs. Felix Gygax, Army and Navy, with 91—11—81; Mrs. A. A. McEntee, Kenwood, 91—11—81, and Sally Whipple, Washington, 94—13—81, were included.

Reds' Fan at 104 Still Fuming About Yankees

Cynthiana, Ky., Oct. 27 (AP).—Still fuming about "them daggone Yankees and what they did to our (Cincinnati) Reds, Charles Rieckel observed his 104th birthday today, keenly looking forward to next "opening day."

Rieckel styles himself the "Nation's oldest baseball fan," said he had "seen the last 45 or 50 openers" on the Cincinnati ball lot and found pleasure in noting "I'm four years older than the game."

"I eat clabber (sour milk) and stewed apples three times a day," he said. "Then there's walking, hunting and fishing—and baseball."

Japan Ready To Adjust U. S. Relations

Premier Expected To Start Talks With Grew Next Week

By Don Brown.

Copyright, 1939, by New York Tribune, Inc.

Tokyo (Saturday), Oct. 28.—Foreign Minister Nomura now is ready to explore with Ambassador Joseph C. Grew the possibilities of adjusting American-Japanese relations, and may start talks with him next week, the newspaper Asahi says.

The foreign vice minister yesterday invited the British Ambassador to visit the foreign office, reportedly to arrange for resuming the talks on the Tientsin trouble, which have been suspended since August. It is believed the government means to seek improvement of relations with Britain and the United States as quickly as possible, and that the American Ambassador also will be invited to the foreign office in a few days.

In talking with Ambassador Grew, Admiral Nomura will propose to settle the incidents in China regarding which Washington has protested to Tokyo and to renew the American-Japanese treaty of commerce and navigation, which is to expire in January, Asahi said. Within the limits dictated by Japan's policy for constructing a new order in east Asia, the newspaper said, "Japan is prepared to listen to whatever rational proposals the United States may have to make and to respect the rights and interests of Americans in China, as far as possible, and with all sincerity."

Japan will not only promise to respect such rights, the Asahi said, but "will give concrete assurances to that end." If the United States "insists on imposing on Japan the old framework of the nine-power treaty," and intends to enforce the arms embargo against Japan" the Asahi continues, "the government must be prepared to cope firmly with a worse situation that may arise."

The new foreign office spokesman, Yakichiro Suma, former embassy counselor at Washington, told a group of Osaka business men that jealousy of Japan's increasing strength is the main reason for anti-Japanese sentiment in the United States. In a speech titled "The Real Situation in America," he is quoted as saying "the notice for termination of the commercial treaty was an American challenge to Japan."

Other Officials To Take Posts on Boundary Group

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt disclosed yesterday that the three nongovernmental members comprising the international joint commission on the United States-Canadian boundary would be replaced by Government officials to save money and to improve technical work of the agency.

He told a press conference the commission was being reorganized under the Government reorganization act because, for one thing, the proposed St. Lawrence Waterway Treaty may enter into the commission's work.

The three members of the commission are Eugene Lorton, of Tulsa, Okla.; John H. Bartlett, former Governor of New Hampshire, and A. O. Stanley, former Senator from Kentucky.

Picket Stabbed, Janitor Arrested in Detroit

Detroit, Oct. 27 (AP).—A scuffle at the gates of Chrysler Corporation's big Dodge plant, central point in the dispute with the C. I. O.-United Automobile Workers which has tied up production for three weeks, resulted in the stabbing of a picket today and arrest of a plant janitor.

Witnesses said pickets protested to James Fulton, 34, the janitor, against entering the plant, and in a brief fracas Joseph Vegella, 25, was stabbed in the left shoulder. Police held Fulton for investigation. Vegella was but slightly hurt.

A native of Hot Springs, Ark., and widow of Clarence A. Finley, Mrs. Finley was one of the first registered nurses in the United States.

Some Expect Forced Cession of Territory to Bulgaria and Hungary

Copyright by New York Times.

Sofia, Oct. 27.—It is widely believed here that a Russian campaign to regain Bessarabia from Rumania may begin shortly. It is thought in some circles that the Soviet would supervise return of the southern Dobruja Province to Bulgaria after Bessarabia had been secured and might even force cession of Transivania to Hungary.

[Paris had word that King Carol of Rumania has begun conversations with several leading politicians to reinforce his National Front in order to strengthen Rumania against a menace from outside, the United Press reported.

[The National Front's purpose particularly is to eliminate influence of the Rumanian Iron Guard and other elements likely to be sympathetic to Germany in a crisis, according to French reports. Carol was reported at the same time to be continuing his efforts to obtain a nonaggression good-neighbor pact with the Soviet Union.—Editor's note.]

One report heard here is that Hungary would cede to Russia the Carpathian-Ukraine she took over from Czecho-Slovakia, and Bulgaria would be asked to grant the Soviet special military privileges on the Black Sea. There is no confirmation of any of these rumors.

Although full terms of the Bulgarian-German trade agreement recently concluded have not been announced, it is learned that Bulgaria undertook to supply the Reich practically her entire output of raw materials and agricultural products including 50,000,000 litres of wine. Germany has promised to liquidate Bulgaria's frozen credits to the Reich and to send her 35,000,000 reichsmarks worth of oil and other goods.

Anti-Hitler Paper Closed

Belgrade, Oct. 27.—Police today seized the Yugoslav periodical Vidici which had reprinted an anti-Hitler article from the London Times. It is felt that the suppression was result of German pressure.

German activity has increased here and there is an abnormal number of Germans of military age in the country. 3,000 are under police supervision.

Under German supervision large oil pumping plants have been renovated near Belgrade on the banks of the Danube and at Smederevo. It is learned Rumanian oil is being transported in Rumanian, Bulgarian, Yugoslav and Greek barges.

Italians Increase Arms Program

By Camille M. Cianfarra

Rome, Oct. 27.—Today ends the seventeenth year of the Fascist regime, and the press devotes entire pages to the achievements of fascism and to the ceremonies which will be held tomorrow throughout Italy to commemorate the eighteenth anniversary of the march on Rome. It also marks the beginning of a new Fascist year.

Prominent on every front page of the newspapers is a communique telling the Italians that fascism so far has spent 133,281,000,000 lire ($6,694,000,000) for military preparedness and that another 17,476,000,000 ($873,800,000) is about to be appropriated in future budgets to the three branches of the fighting service.

Chest Maps Drive In Silver Spring

Fifty volunteer captains outlined plans for the Community Chest drive in the Silver Spring (Md.) area last night at a meeting in the Liquor Control Board Building. The campaign is part of the greater Washington drive.

Mrs. Wilson Lee, of the Washington Chest, declared that working for the Chest fund was an act of "real patriotism." Other speakers were Dr. W. A. Collins, chairman of the Silver Spring area, and Fred C. Spaulding, suburban secretary. Spaulding revealed that the Montgomery County General Hospital would be included in the Chest hospitalization fund.

85-Yard Run Helps S. C. Tie West Virginia

By the Associated Press

Orangeburg, S. C., Oct. 27.—A sensational 85-yard punt return by Fullback Joe Grugan in the final quarter gave South Carolina a 6-to-6 tie today with the favored West Virginia Mountaineers before a perspiring crowd of 3,500 at the Orangeburg Fair Grounds.

West Virginia went into the air for its touchdown in the second period. Charley Seabright, lanky quarterback, took a pass from Johnny Carliss to score after a drive from the Mountaineer eleven. The touchdown play was for 24 yards. Seabright missed a placement for the point.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Time deposits, including savings accounts, in local banks on October 2, 1939, set a new record for the city, a report issued by the Comptroller of the Currency's office reveals. On the date of the October bank call, time deposits totaled $113,607,000, against $110,163,000 on June 30; $111,940,000 on March 29, 1939, and $109,713,000 on December 31, 1938.

The figure is also ahead of September a year ago, when time deposits amounted to $110,447,000. The October time deposit figure is not only a new record but also figured importantly in advancing deposits of all types to a new peak.

In December, 1937, time deposits stood at $105,932,000, the October total reflecting the steady advance which has occurred since then. While the analysis does not separate strictly savings accounts from other time deposits, it is generally understood that savings are now at a large figure and that the number of savings depositors is at a new high for Washington.

Central Business Ass'n. Dinner

The Central Business Association held a dinner last night at the Fuhrman Studio in the Fairfax Hotel, with Miss Kate Weeks, secretary of the wome'n auxiliary presiding and Miss Nancy Miller as hostess. The guest speaker was Isaac Gans, of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.

The Central Business Association has 230 members and its current objectives include general reduction in taxes, a bank at 14th and U streets, and additional bus services. Officers are: William J. Milcham, president; E. Catesby, first vice president; Frank W. Lee, second vice president; Estelle M. Whiting, third vice president; Henry King, secretary; George L. Haines, treasurer and Louis I. Obergh, executive secretary.

Fiduciaries Meeting

The first dinner meeting of the Fiduciaries Section, District of Columbia Bankers Association, for the new administrative year, was held this week at the Mayflower Hotel, under the chairmanship of Bernard L. Amiss, assistant trust officer, Washington Loan & Trust Co.

Sixty-five trust and investment officers from local and nearby Maryland banks and trust companies attended to hear the address of Warren R. Forster, vice president of Hamilton National Bank, on the subject of "Investments." Among the guests was Ord Preston, president of the District of Columbia Bankers Association.

Mr. Forster, who was formerly associated with the Guaranty Trust Co., of New York, traced the investment activities, in principle, of a trustee from the time he receives the estate, through the analysis of what comes to him, to the disposal of undesirable assets and reinvestment of proceeds to meet the problems posed by wishes of the trustor.

He stressed necessity of formulating an investment plan to meet the measure of each trust estate and discussed merits of the two main classes of trust investments, bonds and real estate mortgages, dealing briefly on Government and municipal obligations as trust investments, and speaking of some of the factors which should be weighed in the consideration of corporate obligations. He also dwelt on the subject of present money rates and their effect on the relative desirability of bonds and real estate mortgages as trust investment media.

Industrial Bankers

Three low rate industrial loan companies affiliated with Southeastern Industrial Bankers, Inc., will make regular quarterly dividends early next month to all stockholders of record November 1, it is announced by Lewis Eisele, vice president and treasurer of the parent corporation.

The companies whose stockholders will receive checks include the City Industrial Savings & Loan Co., of Hyattsville, Md., which will pay 7 per cent on preferred stock, 10 cents a share on Class B common and $1.60 a share on Class A common on November 10; the Southeastern Discount Corporation, of Washington, D. C., which will make payments of 7 per cent on preferred and 5 cents a share on common November 10, and the Bethesda Industrial Savings & Loan Co., whose regular quarterly dividend of 7 per cent on preferred and 10 cents a share on common will be disbursed to stockholders on November 17.

Wash. Loan & Trust Club

Education and entertainment featured the monthly meeting of the Washington Loan & Trust Club in the bank board room last Thursday night. Dr. Elmer Louis Kayser gave the first of a series of instructive talks upon the topic, "The Value of Education." Dr. Kayser, who is dean of students of George Washington University, stressed the continuing need of education throughout life and that one's early scholastic career is only preparatory for later acquisition of knowledge in the chosen vocations. Ward Duvall, well-known radio artist, entertained the gathering with his rendition of both popular and classic music on his accordion. The occasion concluded with a buffet supper served to the club members and their guests.

Chinese Firm Wins First War Metal Contract for U. S.

By the Associated Press

China won today the first contract for stocking up the army and navy on strategic war materials.

The Wah Chang Trading Corporation of New York City, an importing firm, was awarded a contrract by the Treasury to supply 425 tons of tungsten ore, an essential steel alloy, at a cost of $427,140.

The company, which submitted an alternative bid of supplying tungsten mined in this country, got a contract on the basis of supplying tungsten shipped from Hongkong, Burma and Indo China.

Tentatively, the Treasury, on the advice of the joint Army-Navy Munitions Board, rejected bids from domestic and Cuban bidders, saying the Wah Chang bid was the lowest. However, the Treasury reserved the right to accept one of the other bids later if more of the ore should be needed and the price was still acceptable.

The Wah Chang ore is to be delivered to the Army depot in Columbus, Ohio. The contract price did not include tariff duty.

At the same time, officials said that they had not decided yet whether to accept a Russian bid to supply manganese ore or what to do about other manganese and chromium ore bids.

Court Approves Atlas Plan for Utilities Power

Chicago, Oct. 27 (AP).—Federal Judge William H. Holly approved today the Atlas Corporation's plan for reorganization of the $44,000,000 utilities power and light corporation.

Lawyers and financiers have been working on the plan since 1936, when proceedings to reorganize the giant company were initiated under section 77-B of the amended bankruptcy act.

The court found the corporation to have regained its solvency, with assets of $44,000,000 as of July 31 and outstanding debentures of $36,710,500, including interest.

Under the plan approved by Judge Holly all claims prior in rank to debentures are to be paid in full.

Debenture holders would receive $400 for each $1,000 of indebtedness, plus six shares of preferred, $50 par value stock in the new company, 50 shares of common, $4 par value common stock, and one share of common for each $6 of interest on the old debentures.

Holders of the 7 per cent accumulative preferred stock would receive common stock on a five for one basis.

No provision was made in the plan for holders of class A, B, or common stock, they having been found to have no equity in the assets of the corporation.

Turkey Crop a Record; Holiday Sales Less

Chicago, Oct. 27 (AP).—Turkey production this year is the heaviest in history but marketings next month—when Thanksgiving is observed—are expected to be smaller than a year ago. The reason: Turkey no longer is merely a holiday food but, more and more, is being "eaten around the calendar."

The 1939 turkey crop has been estimated by the Government at 32,000,000 birds, an increase of 22 per cent over 1938. The largest previous production was 27,700,000 turkeys in 1936.

Buffalo Steel Output At Record High Level

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 27 (AP).—Steel ingot production in the Buffalo area attained 93 per cent of capacity today, a record high.

The previous record was 90½ per cent on May 3, 1937.

Capital Transit Net Jumps In September

Month's Net of $44,601 Compares With Loss of $3,170 a Year Ago

The Capital Transit Co. in its monthly report to the Public Utilities Commission yesterday reported for September a net income of 44,601.56 which compares with a net loss of $3,170.11 for the same month last year, making a net income gain of $47,771.67.

Operating revenues for the month totaled $976,570.46, compared with $865,367.60 for the month a year ago, an increase of 12.9 per cent. Operating expenses last month were $681,221.19 which compare with $659,927.55 a year ago, an increase of 3.2 per cent.

Operating income in September was $97,936.65 against $21,090.91 in September, 1938, an increase of 364.4 per cent. Gross income for the month was $105,523.42 as compared with $56,919.78 for the same month last year, an increase of 85.4 per cent.

Earnings for 9 Months

The company also reported for the first nine months of this year a net income of $405,735.06 against $154,931.80 for the nine-month period last year an increase of 161.9 per cent.

Operating revenues for the nine months ended September 30 this year totaled $8,885,205.45 compared with $8,335,327.52 for the same nine months a year ago, an increase of 6.4 per cent. Operating expenses for the period were $6,141,579.19 compared with $6,057,923.53 for the first nine months a year ago, an increase of 1.4 per cent.

Operating income for the nine months this year was $898,007.60 as against $632,785.96 in the nine month period in 1938, a gain of 41.9 per cent. Gross income of $956,801.90 for the nine months compares with a gross of $695,151.44 for the corresponding nine months last year, an increase of 37.6 per cent.

Potomac Electric Earnings Dip

Potomac Electric Power earnings in September were off slightly from a year ago, net income of $314,750.72 showing a drop of $11,312.67, or 3.47 per cent, from September, 1938, according to the monthly statement filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission.

Operating revenues totaled $1,305,891.39, an increase of $78,201.76, or 6.37 per cent. At the same time operating expenses increased, the total of $890,869.37 being $87,388.31 higher than last year, a rise of 10.88 per cent. This left net operating revenues of $415,222, a decrease of $9,186.55, or 2.16 per cent. Income deductions for interest and other payments called for $100,406.85, the report said.

In the first nine months of this year the Potomac Electric Co. had operating revenues of $11,759,009.24, a gain of $549,158.16. Operating expenses, including depreciation and taxes, were $7,698,301.06, an increase of $565,119.50, disclosing that while operating revenues climbed 4.90 per cent, expenses moved up 7.92 per cent.

Net operating revenues in the nine months totaled $4,060,708.18, off $15,961.34. Gross was practically the same as last year. Usual income deductions for interest and other payments required $808,004.62, an increase of $52,203.77, leaving a net income for the period of $3,153,718.07, a decrease of 69,375.17 from the corresponding months in 1938, the statement revealed. This was a difference of 2.15 per cent.

British Foreign Trade Slashed by War

London, Oct. 27 (AP).—Preliminary foreign trade figures issued today by the British Board of Trade showed total imports for September, the first month of the war, off nearly 40 per cent from the August total. Last month's total came to £49,924,267 compared with £81,097,000 imported in August.

Exports of British products for September were £23,087,245 in contrast with £37,077,000 a month previous; reexports were £2,370,678 against £4,488,000; total exports, £25,457,923 against £41,585,000. Excess of imports for September were £24,466,344 compared with £39,532,000 during August.

Curtiss-Wright Corp. Buys Propeller Plant

Pittsburgh, Oct. 27 (AP).—President John P. Hoelzel, of the Pittsburgh Screw & Bolt Corporation, tonight announced sale of its airplane propeller division to the Curtiss-Wright Corporation of New York, for an undisclosed amount of cash.

Hoelzel said Curtiss-Wright will continue the manufacture of propeller blades at the present location on Neville Island in the Ohio River near here. Curtiss-Wright announced its new department will be absorbed by the Curtiss propeller division of Clifton, N. J.

Late Rally Lifts War Stocks but Other Groups Yield to Persistent Liquidation Abetted by Profit-Taking Sales

New York, Oct. 27.—Persistent liquidation estimated to be from the same sources in Europe that have been recent sellers; profit taking by quick turn traders; the Pope's strong appeal for peace; continuation of the Western Front stalemate, and further reiterations by political and business leaders in the United States that war brings grief and no profit could explain a further erosion in share values today. At any rate, these or other considerations apparently outweighed bullish earnings reports, action on neutrality in line with majority opinion in business, and further reports of mounting orders for all kinds of industrial products and merchandise.

A lower drift to prices was in evidence in the morning and continued until losses were rather severe, particularly in issues which have been spectacular performers on the upside since early September. Support developed in the last hour, centering on aircrafts and pivotal industrial descriptions. Prices came back a good part of the way but only foods and oils managed to even up. Others were irregularly lower with only rail equipments, steels, motors and coppers showing declines worth noting.

The seventy industrials showed an average loss of 0.36 point while the thirty rails gave up only 0.13 point. The mark down for the 100 stocks was 0.29 point and for the ten numbers of the independent aircraft section, a gain of 0.40 point was recorded. Volume was reduced to 1,062,520.

British Selling

The selling of American stocks by British holders in this market through a central control operated in London, is now believed by Wall Street to be a definite factor in the current market. Selling from the other side, it is said, appears on all strong rallies, and is to be reckoned with on all upside movements. At the same time, it is pointed out, these dealings are being handled in an orderly manner. So far as known, no broker gets more than one order a day, usually for 1,000 or more shares of a certain stock.

Early in the war, individual holders transmitted their orders. These are now combined through a central control. The declared object is to create American dollar balances for purchase of war supplies and machines come neutrality act repeal. Estimates of the amount of stock for sale from British sources each day vary between 20,000 and 50,000 shares, with probability that it would be nearer to the smaller than the larger figure. This would be comparatively small in relation to current market volume of a million or more shares a day.

Bethlehem Steel which after the close Thursday announced increased profit for the third quarter and increased common dividend disbursement, sold off early on the news. It opened at 90, off 1¾ but promptly attracted support. Its close at 91½ represented a negligible loss. Steel common almost touched 75 but came back to 76⅝ for a loss of ⅜. In the air stocks Douglas was weak for a time but regained most of a 2¾ point drop. Bendix was firm and active, reaching a new high. North American Aviation and Curtiss Wright each advanced a little while Glen Martin, Sperry and United Aircraft eased.

Copper Shares Lower

Copper drifted down with traders disposed to regard the Anglo-Canadian agreement on supplies of the red metal as derogatory to U. S. producers prospects for war sales. Rail issues, on the whole were narrow and irregular. Electrical equipments advanced here and there. Pacific Tin was one of several special issues to show strength, advancing nearly 2 points. Among the preferred stocks, Republic issues weakened with the "A" shares losing more than 3 points.

Johns-Manville, Commonwealth & Southern preferred, Allied Chemical, Continental Can, Jones and Laughlin preferred, Revere Brass A, Beechnut Packing, J. I. Case, Bon Ami A, Black & Decker and General Railway Signal were among a number of issues to end with declines of a point or more.

Listed bonds were dull and mostly easy today, as traders and investors awaited further developments in the European situation. United States Treasury issues resumed their downward tendency, which took its inception from the hasty financial announcements. Most corporate loans were lower, but there were a few firm spots. In the foreign dollar section the usual uncertainty prevailed and changes were mixed. Turnover in all bonds was only $6,290,000 which is hardly more than half a normal day's business.

Treasury Bonds Held

Declining levels of Treasury securities were attributed by dealers entirely to the rapid refunding of Treasury and CCC notes, and the fresh announcement that $250,000,000 new money will be raised at the earliest opportunity through R. F. C. note issues. In obvious preparations for the further loan and others that may come after, prices were marked down 1/32 to 15/32 point in the direct Treasury issues, while guaranteed bonds of the Farm and Home Corporations also receded.

Highly rated issues of utility, railroad and industrial corporations were fairly steady, but trading was extremely modest, as it usually is toward the end of the week. Speculative carrier liens drifted downward and in some cases the recessions amounted to a point or more. Holding company bonds and industrial convertibles were quiet and irregular, and much the same conditions prevailed in local traction securities.

Foreign dollar bond movements were irregular, with belligerent obligations showing small movements in either direction. Scandinavian and Belgian bonds were maintained, while Italian and Japanese obligations receded. Latin American dollar bonds were neglected, save for some buying of Argentines.

General Motors Profit Twice 1938 Quarter

But 7 Cents a Share Net Compares With $1.06 in 2d Quarter

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 27.—The General Motors Corporation announced today that it earned in the three months ended September 30 a profit of $6,332,713 for the common stock, equal to 15 cents a share.

This compared with profit of $3,073,133 for the common stock in the 1938 third quarter, equal to 7 cents a share, and with $45,520,048, or $1.06 a share, in the second quarter of this year.

For nine months the total was $102,736,134, equal to $2.39 a share, against $31,504,042 in the 1938 comparable period, equivalent to 73 cents a share.

The net for the common stock was figured after allowing $2,294,559 for dividends on the $5 preferred stock. The corporation has nearly 43,000,000 shares of common outstanding.

The balance sheet showed an increase in net working capital at the end of September to $403,152,127 from $338,916,421 at the end of the same month last year.

Pointing out that demand for automobiles had broadened with the advance of industrial activity in recent weeks, Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., chairman, said it was not yet "fully established" whether the present rate of business activity could be sustained.

Colorado Fuel & Iron Co.

Colorado Fuel & Iron Corporation and subsidiaries reported today for the three months ended September 30 net profit of $231,282, equal to 41 cents a share on the common stock, compared with a net loss of $143,752 in the like period last year.

General Railway Signal Co.

General Railway Signal Co. showed indicated net profit for the September quarter of $130,822, equal after quarterly preferred dividend requirements to 30 cents a share on common stock. This compared with $35,579, or less than 1 cent a common share, in the preceding quarter and net loss of $8,852 in the September quarter last year. Company's operations are at Rochester, N. Y.

Philip Morris & Co.

Philip Morris & Co., Ltd., tobacco manufacturer, for the six months ended September 30, showed consolidated net profit of $3,851,742, equal to $4.40 a share on the common stock, against $3,157,967, or $3.95 a share on a smaller amount of common stock in the comparable 1938 period.

Household Finance Corp.

The Household Finance Corp. for the nine months ended September 30 reported consolidated net profit of $4,548,100, equal to $5.25 a share on the common stock, against $4,644,555, or $5.54 a share, in the like period last year. The indicated profit for the third quarter was $1,586,615, or $1.85 a share on the common stock, compared with $1,672,440, or $2.02 a share on the common stock, in the third quarter last year.

American Ice Co.

American Ice Company reports for the third quarter ended September 30, 1939, after depreciation, interest and other charges, net profit of $395,454.75, as compared with net profit of $207,260.79 for this period in 1938. For the nine months ended September 30, 1939, net profits of $239,868.49, as compared with a loss of $29,138.97 for this period last year.

Parke-Davis & Co.

Parke-Davis & Co., drug manufacturers of Detroit, reported indicated net profit for the September quarter of $2,565,937, or 52 cents a common share, compared with revised net profit of $2,554,479, also 52 cents a share, in the like 1938 period.

American Airlines

Chicago, Oct. 27 (AP).—American Airlines, Inc., for the nine months ended September 30 earned $964,283, compared with $48,690 net profit in the like 1938 period, C. R. Smith, president, announced today.

During the nine months period this year, the airline transported 376,506 passengers, compared with 249,396 a year ago, an increase of 51 per cent. Revenue miles flown in the 1939 period totaled 13,587,132, compared with 11,242,028 for the corresponding 1938 period.

Week's Financing Drops to $8,541,297

New York, Oct. 27 (AP).—Public offerings of new securities declined during the week ended yesterday to $8,541,297, Poor's Publishing Co. reported today.

The drop broke the modest recovery, which had totaled $14,258,500 in the previous week, the largest amount since the outbreak of the European conflict. This week's amount, however, was entirely for new capital purposes with no refunding operations involved.

Buyers' Scramble for Sugar Dies Down After Three Weeks

New York, Oct. 27.—The buyers' rush to obtain refined sugar which followed the outbreak of the war lasted only three weeks, according to a report released today by the United States Cane Sugar Refiners Association. "The unprecedented rush to buy refined cane sugar by consumers, retailers, wholesalers, and manufacturers during this period increased the shipments of our member refiners from a weekly average of 1,240,371 bags shortly before the war to 2,277,845 bags immediately afterwards, an increase of 84 per cent," the association said

Cotton Futures Close Session With Mild Rally

New York, Oct. 27 (AP).—A timid rally in late dealings put cotton futures 2 to 4 points higher at the close today. The last-hour buying was based mainly on action of wheat and securities.

Traders were still a little befuddled, however, by the many uncertainties which prevented taking a definite market stand. Brokers mentioned such factors as confusion over certain terms of the new cotton loan program, slack textile activity and fortunes of war abroad as likely to stymie buyers and sellers.

The market started higher in response to Liverpool action but sagged when hedging sales offset the influence of professional and Wall Street support.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil futures recovered a slight morning drop today to close 1 to 2 points higher. The market was still wobbly due to quiet consumer demand and lack of speculative interest.

Sales totaled 70 contracts: December, 6.80*; March, 7.01*; May, 7.09*.

Goodyear Co. Cuts Tire and Tube Prices

Akron, Ohio, Oct. 27.—Drastic reduction in list prices on tires and tubes were announced in Akron today by P. W. Litchfield, president of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. They become effective November 1.

"In view of the current upward trend of all prices, including crude rubber, this announcement will come as a surprise," Mr. Litchfield said. "However, we have placed ourselves in a position to make these reductions to tire users by an extensive program of plant modernization and by streamlining our system of distribution."

The reduction of 12½ per cent on the price of the G-100 line in the 600x16 passenger size is typical of the new listings. This brings the consumer price on this size down from $15.95 to $13.95. The Lifeguard tube in the same size is reduced 12 per cent and the standard heavy-duty tube 6.8 per cent.

Wheat Prices Climb With Crop Damage

Winter Area Condition Worst in 55 Years, One Expert Reports

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Oct. 27.—A sudden buying spurt touched off by growing seriousness of the 1940 hard winter wheat crop situation in the heart of the Southwestern belt lifted wheat prices more than a cent a bushel in the final hour of trading today.

After the market had fluctuated nervously more than half of the session, an attempt by short interests to cover previous sales caught the pit by surprise. Wheat rose almost 2 cents from early lows and closed ⅞@1½ cents higher than yesterday with December at 85½@85⅝ and May 84¾@84⅝.

Private reports indicated that rains of the past few days missed driest and most important producing sections in the hard winter wheat belt. Furthermore, the forecast indicated weather is clearing. One crop expert, H. C. Donovan, who returned from a tour of Colorado, Nebraska, Kansas, Texas and Oklahoma said the conditions of wheat at this time of year is the worst he has ever seen in 55 years of crop inspection.

Montford De Souza Funeral Today

Funeral services for Montford A. De Souza, 60, will be held at 2 p. m. today at Hysong's funeral home, Thirteenth and N streets northwest, with burial in Columbia Gardens, Va. Masonic rites will be conducted by the Harmony Lodge.

Mr. De Souza died Thursday at Emergency Hospital. A native of Philadelphia, he was educated in Baltimore and served as tax assessor there for nine years before becoming branch manager of the Baltimore-Washington territory for the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. Later he opened his own tire brokerage firm in Washington.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Edith S. De Souza, of 1633 Greenbrier street, Arlington, Va.; two sons, Dr. Montford A. De Souza, jr., of Charleston, S. C., and David J. De Souza, of Washington, and a daughter, Mrs. Frank Leithner, of Hollywood, Calif.

Retreat Service For Fr. McDonnell

Members of the Washington Section, League of Laymen's Retreats, will meet tomorrow at 8 a. m. at Holy Trinity Catholic Church, Georgetown, for services of mass honoring the late Father Eugene McDonnell, co-founder of the Manresa Retreat House, Annapolis.

Afterward the men will march to Father McDonnell's grave in "God's Acre," at Georgetown University, where the Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, vice president, is expected to speak briefly. Dr. M. D'Arcy Magee is president of the local Retreat unit.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

A slam convention properly used might have vastly aided R. C. S. and his partner in reaching a small or grand slam on today's hand. They stopped at game, losing 1,500 points in a team-of-four duplicate as the opposing players, holding the same cards, contracted for 13 tricks and won them.

Today's Hand

North, South Vulnerable.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	1 ◇	Double	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: K ◇.

He says:

"The king of diamonds was opened and I (South) had no trouble making seven spades because the spades broke two and two and the clubs were no worse than four and two."

West led the king of diamonds, which was trumped by declarer. The ace of clubs was taken and a low club ruffed in dummy. A trump was played to the king and another low club ruffed. A second spade lead to the ace exhausted the adverse trumps and a third club ruff dropped East's king. A trump and two established clubs in the South hand accounted for the remaining tricks.

R. C. S. continues:

"Our team lost a 1,500-point swing on this hand as the other table bid the big slam. Would you please give me your analysis of where the major blame rests for the failure to arrive at any slam and also how seriously South may be charged with undue timidity."

While a grand slam might not be successful with this somewhat freakish hand, due to the fact that the opponents' clubs or spades or both might be bunched, a small slam certainly should be reached.

After North's strong bidding, South should take some action, even if he fears to jump to six. He might put out a feeler by bidding five diamonds, indicating his void and asking partner if a duplication of values is held in that suit. North would probably reply with five hearts, showing the ace, and then it would be up to South to try for six or seven.

North's jump to four spades was a slam invitation. South should not have declined.

NUTS AND JOLTS

Seasoned Timber

By Dorothy Canfield

Chapter 35

MONDAY ABOUT noon his blood and nerves reached him with a warning from a sense of reality far older, far surer than any fiddle-faddle of the brain. He was, at the moment, bending over his typewriter to see why the space-bar didn't work. By that time the danger signal was being given with excited violence. It was with a crash that it broke down the barrier of inattention he had been sedulously keeping up. His first startled reaction to it was as simple, natural, and satisfying as though he were not a civilized being. Canby must be sent away, of course, before the return of—before the end of vacation. It was axiomatic.

His mind, eager to make up for the besotted slowness of its perception, instantly invented a dozen ingenious ways to move him on: "Canby, I'm sorry but a letter just in makes it necessary to have that third-story room for a new student . . . Canby, you'd better not stay in Clifford. There's absolutely nothing here for a person like you. . . . Canby, don't say anything to her about it, but I find that it tires Aunt Lavinia to have an extra person in the house, especially a lively young person." But no, that might move him no farther than out of the house. Well, then, "Canby, I don't like to speak about this, but I don't think an idle young man hanging around town will do a hard-working community like Clifford a bit of good. I think it would be just as well for you and better for us if you continued on your travels." That would be plain enough, delivered coldly with a forbidding intonation and a certain grimness that Timothy knew very well how to draw over his high-posed face. It would be easy to get rid of a person wavering as Canby was from one minute to the next about his plans. He had specially asked if he would be in the way. Well, he would be in the way. And Timothy was the man to tell him so. Wants in his own house, hasn't he? A man has a right to say who he His fingers, continuing to work mechanically, had by this time loosened the catch that had held the space-bar and went on automatically striking the keys very hard through the wax mimeograph stencil, "All students who wish to join the special no-credit second-semester class in English poetry, please leave word at the Prin . . ." when without knowing what he was doing, he stood up abruptly and went to find Canby. It would be better to get this off his mind at once. There was no time to lose. This was—why, it was Monday, Susan would be back at the end of the week. Everything fell from him but the illimitably vitalizing power of animal instinct. He ran nimbly down the stairs, his low-spirited sense of frustration gone, his energies released and focused.

The glowing untroubled certainty of this return to the Stone Age lasted only the length of one flight of stairs. He found the air in the hall below him darkened almost to blackness by a menacing shadow. It was the shadow of the traditions and scruples to which he had been bred. "Oh, but I can't do that!" he exclaimed.

The blithely headlong rush of the instinct of self-preservation crashed, crashed, as against granite. The shock turned him sick. He came to a standstill in the middle of the landing, his breath shallow and irregular. Because he was standing as he often did when some one asked him a question, a reflex habit, toughened and resilient from repetition, flexed his muscles, sent his eyes to the floor at one side, lifted his hand to his head in the attitude he often took in reflection. And because his body had, unknown to him, fallen into the pose which for years had been associated with the weighing of evidence, his mind misinterpreting the stimuli given it, unwittingly betrayed him, and began to tarnish and corrode by analysis the bold basic instinct that had brought him leaping down the stairs.

HE ASKED himself first, "But what in the world is the matter with me? What possible reason have I to imagine that Susan might—" He cried out upon his instinct, "Have I lost all sense of decent dignity—jealous of a man she has never even seen!" Yet he was aware that he was beside the mark, that he was leaving something out. Deep, deep down, his subconscious was fumbling with traditional catch words. "It's no fair to rig the game." He snatched this out into the light, looked at it hard and threw it away. "Rig the game! Nonsense! There's no game to rig—just the impulse of a crazy man—or a lover," he added tenderly, and, "I'll think no more about it," he ended resolutely.

BUT HE DID think a great deal more about it. Instead of returning to his study he continued to stand motionless, while his mind, coming smartly to the salute, began to draw out from the vast storehouse of self-justifying lore always at the command of a clever mind, some of the rationalizations that might be useful, wiping the self-interest from them as much as possible. "There would be no point in allowing a thoroughly selfish young man—he's evidently that from the way he has treated that fiancee of his—with no principles about hurting other people's feelings, to meet and possibly be a bother to a simple, inexperienced country girl. She would not know what to make of him. Why complicate a situation meant to be simple?

"When I come to think of it, I really know nothing about Canby, now, after not seeing him for years. He may be unscrupulous and insensitive, really bad for our young people. Why should I allow a disruptive influence—see the way he took those boys off on Sunday away from church, from their homes! Our young people have plenty of difficulties as it is.

"It is not for Canby's own good to let him idle his time away aimlessly. He can't find anything to do in Clifford. To allow him to stay here in this backwater would be shirking one's duty to him as much as if I definitely had allowed him—when he was a thoughtless boy here in the academy—to arrange his studies in some foolish whimsical way that would prevent his going forward in life."

Warming to its work, his mind snatched from the dictionary some excellently abstract words with which to drape his instinct in the grave folds of moral dignity. "In Clifford, where human relations are timed to the rhythm of the permanent, there would be a real danger in introducing a fitful personality like Canby's, trained by experience in the modern technique of being casual, of never allowing enough blood to flow into a relationship to cause bleeding when it is cut short."

The sententious phrases delighted him. He hardly knew what they meant, but they gave him a renewed confidence in the power of his mind to protect him in his wish to do what he wanted. The corners of his mouth stopped watering and twitching as in the onset of physical nausea. How fast it worked, his mind, and how expertly, picking away at the mortar in the wall against which he had bruised himself. It asked for a little more time, his mind did, only a little more, and it would have an opening made through which he could step into safety, holding his head high.

THE FRONT DOOR on the floor below opened, heavy steps came clumping up the stairs. Canby appeared, his ski clothes dusted thick with snow, his face red and shining with sweat. He dragged himself up by the railing, stopping every two or three steps to lean over and shake off the melting snow from his tousled hair. He was breathing hard and scowling, the muscles in his bulldog jaw knotted.

Looking up, he saw Timothy standing in the hallway, right hand stroking back his hair, head bent and turned to the left. Canby's bad humor discharged itself in a sardonic comment. "Well, Uncle Tim, you still haven't got that question thought out, I see. Did you ever know the kids at the academy used to bet on whether one of them could ask you a question that would get you set like that to answer it? They do yet, they tell me. Who's asked you what, now?"

But he was not interested in an answer, coming on up, knocking the toes of his heavy ski-boots morosely against the risers of the stairs like a schoolboy in a temper. "Thermometer's up almost to 30," he announced glumly. "Snow's likely to go any minute! And I still can't make a jump-turn. I been trying to, all the morning and, God! am I dumb at it. One of the kids that'd never seen any kind of turn before, did it better than I before we quit. I like ta've killed myself trying—and did worse with every try. The world's perfect dub—at everything—that's me." He collapsed against the wall and began to unbutton his windbreaker. His red face, greasy with sweat, looked dispirited and because its vitality was blotted out by failure, commonplace and unattractive. He pulled off the wet mittens from his big hands and flung them spitefully down on the stairs. "If Aunt Lavinia can be messy, so can I. I wonder if that damn furnace has condescended to heat water enough so I can have a bath. I'm all in a muck."

It was with exquisite relief that Timothy, from an airy height of distinction, good breeding, coolness, professional success, security, and prestige, looked down on the yeasty, hot, raw, young man, with an ugly mug for a face, with no job, no girl, no manners, no future, with no control of his temper, without even muscular good breeding enough to stand up—Canby had shambled on into the bathroom and slumped to his knees beside the tub, reaching across it to try the water.

Poised on the elastic feet of the tennis player, stepping with the skater's elegant accuracy, Timothy Hulme, very light-hearted, went back upstairs to his study. He was smiling ironically over the folly of his fit of nerves. "Did any sane man ever lose his head more like an idiot," he asked himself cheerfully. Sitting down before his typewriter, he laid on the keys the long fine fingers that were so like his father's, and his grandfather's and after an appreciative look at them, went on, ". . . cipal's office before 6 o'clock on Monday afternoon, March 10."

Was there really, in spite of his impatience with mystical notions, something in the fanciful idea that thoughts do not need to be spoken to make themselves felt? Sitting at his typewriter that morning, he had drawn a secret reassurance from the contrast between his hands and Canby's great paws. That evening, after their return from supper at Miss Peck's, they sat down as usual before the fire in the living room for a smoke, and as Timothy passed the matches, Canby exclaimed, "Just look at the difference between our hands, Uncle Tim! Wouldn't anybody know that you're a born school teacher, and I was made to grab hold of saws and hammers and make things?"

Surprised as Timothy was to hear his outspoken idea put into words, he was yet more startled at the change in its aspect made by Canby's way of expressing it. Annoyed as well as startled. He looked hard at the broad, short-fingered palm which Canby spread out. It looked common, yes. But mighty.

"What's the sense of putting a man with a hand like that to pushing a pen? asked Canby, drawing the fingers together till the hand was a fist, square, hard—a paving stone.

"You have a brain, too," Timothy reminded him curtly.

"Well, maybe. But it's a brain that'd take a lot more satisfaction telling that hand how to build a house than finding out a hole in the banking laws that'll let a speculator do what the law didn't intend him to do."

Timothy thought this typical half-baked sophomoric self-righteousness. "There are plenty of bankers as honest as you are," he said dryly, "and plenty of cheating carpenters."

"You ought to have lived a hundred years ago," remarked Aunt Lavinia, "when there were still things that needed to be made with men's hands. I've often thought about the old mason who built this house—and the academy building."

Timothy was just as well pleased to have the talk turn from hands. "That reminds me—I haven't told you yet, have I, that I own one of these old stone houses now, up on the road to the Crandall Pitch?"

"Do you?" said Canby, not much interested.

"Don't you rather like them?"

Canby leaned over the arm of his chair to look around the room, all but lost his balance, and recovered it with a grotesque convulsion of arms and legs.

Aunt Lavinia said, "For goodness' sake, Can, sit up in your chair like a Christian!"

"Well, they're all right, I guess," said Canby doubtfully, "but what the devil do you do with walls 2½ feet thick when you want a new window or door?"

Wormwood lay bitter on Timothy's tongue. Trying to swallow it down, he could not at once think of an answer to make to the young man who had asked that young question. Canby answered himself mockingly, "You do without, I suppose."

"Why, that's exactly what Susan Barney said, when we were . . ." began Aunt Lavinia.

Timothy broke in, in a louder voice than he intended, "But you're safe in them—as you never can be in one of the flimsy wooden houses." (He had not wanted to say that.)

"Oh—safe!" said Canby, scoffing. "Good Lord! Who wants to be safe?" He corrected himself, "Well, yes, of course, they'd be fine for an old ladies' home. Who might Susan Barney be, Aunt Lavinia?"

Aunt Lavinia began to tell him, but Timothy did not hear her. He sat leaning back in his comfortable chair, a lighted cigarette in his left hand, a tightness in his throat cutting off his breath. As he slowly suffocated, his mind, futile, fluttering onlooker, kept assuring him foolishly, "You are not feeling anything in particular. Or if you are, there's no reason for it. Nothing whatever has happened. Everything is just as it was before."

But it was not until his cigarette, at its end, pressed its red coal into the flesh of his hand that he sprang up, flung it away with a curse, drew a long breath, and then another, and felt himself wakened from a bad dream.

GOODNESS! I COULD HAVE WALKED! BUT THIS SUITCASE IS HEAVY!
I'M KIND OF A MESS! THAT LONG BUS RIDE AND ALL.. BUT I'LL HAVE TIME TO FIX UP BEFORE I MEET ANY OF LEONA'S FRIENDS, WON'T I?
YES, DEAR! YOU'LL HAVE TIME... PLENTY OF TIME!
I'LL SAY!

Mutual Health May Expand Its Services

Weighs Plan to Lift Eligibility Limit to $3,000 Income Group

Because wage earners in the higher income brackets are showing greater interest in Mutual Health Service than lower salaried workers, the $2,500 eligibility ceiling probably will be raised, it appeared yesterday.

"Serious consideration is being given the increase of income limits for married persons and family groups," said Dr. Arch L. Riddick, president of M.M.S., whose plan is to provide prepaid medical care under auspices of the District Medical Society.

From another official source it was learned, further, that the new limit probably will be fixed at $3,000. That is, any married couple whose annual income is that much or less will be eligible to enroll in Mutual Health Service. For each dependent child $200 is added to the salary limit.

Reporting on the survey being conducted "among several thousands of employes of business establishments and Government departments in Washington and nearby areas of Maryland and Virginia," Dr. Riddick disclosed.

"Partial returns indicate that there is a far greater interest in the service among those beyond the income limit of the service than those within."

"We wish to assure the public," he added, "that the medical profession will leave no stone unturned to meet its obligation."

Although the study preliminary to launching the service has been under way for several months, Dr. Riddick said it is still too early to release any figures.

Case Graduates Plan Luncheon

Approximately 75 graduates of the Case School of Applied Science in Washington have been invited to a luncheon today at Hogate's Restaurant, Ninth street and Maine avenue southwest. The school is making a drive for funds for new buildings. Irwin H. Fullmer, of 113 Philadelphia avenue, Takoma Park, physicist in the Bureau of Standards, is chairman of the Washington alumni unit.

60 Traffic Islands Planned by Whitehurst

Highway Director H. C. Whitehurst yesterday said his department is building 60 traffic safety islands to protect pedestrians. The islands, 30 of which have already been completed, cost $50 each.

Bergdoll Contests 'Excessive' Sentence

New York, Oct. 27 (AP).—Grover Cleveland Bergdoll's attorney, Harry Weinberger, filed a brief at Second Corps headquarters on Governors Island today in which he contended the three-year sentence imposed upon Bergdoll by a military court martial was excessive, since he had surrendered.

The sentence was added to the five years which Bergdoll had started to serve for desertion. Weinberger argued that the maximum term which could be imposed when a prisoner surrendered was two years.

N. Y. Society to Dance

The New York State Society will sponsor a Halloween dance tonight in the gold ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel. Dancing will continue from 10 to 1.

Hazen Celebrates 72d Birthday

Commissioner Hazen yesterday held a little party in his office on the occasion of his seventy-second birthday anniversary.

A cake sent to him by the Raleigh Hotel management, cigars and some talk about the "good old days" between Hazen and District Auditor D. J. Donovan were the highlights of the party.

Those present included Engineer Commissioner McCoach, Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal and reporters.

Traffic Warnings Held 'Fixing'

Publication of all names of persons involved in fixing traffic tickets, even if the fixing is in the nature of a "warning," was ordered yesterday by the Commissioners.

In so doing they overruled Police Chief Brown in his interpretation of a previous order calling for publication of the names. Maj. Brown had maintained that when a warning was given a motorist, that did not mean a ticket had been "fixed."

200 D. C. Churches to Back Community Chest Campaign

Washington's Community Chest message, "Give, and be thankful you can," will be relayed to church congregations throughout the city tomorrow in a mass celebration of Community Chest Sunday.

Church support of the forthcoming Community Chest campaign was invited by President Coleman Jennings in a letter, released yesterday, to ministers of nearly 200 churches in the Washington federation. He urged them to call attention to urgent community needs, and said:

"On this occasion you can help, not the Community Chest, but the large multitude of suffering and appealing humanity that is reached by its agencies."

Curley Forwards Message

Archbishop Curley forwarded the Community Chest appeal to the pastors of 35 Catholic parishes in Washington. The Archbishop's letter, to be read in all pulpits, said in part:

"There is no reason in the world why the Nation's Capital should not contribute the full amount of money required for next year's program of charity."

Indorsement of the Community Chest drive has been voted by the Jewish Community Council, in a resolution urging "every member of the Washington Jewish community to contribute as generously and as wholeheartedly as circumstances may permit," Chest officials revealed.

Junior League Helps

Junior League members of the Dupont-Sheridan Circle division for the Community Chest campaign met yesterday with William W. Wheeler, chairman of the Metropolitan unit, to map plans for their part in the drive. Mrs. Laurence H. Green is chairman of the Junior League campaigners, and her team captains include Miss Elizabeth Houghton, Miss Marion Shouse, Mrs. J. Francis Foy, Miss Anne Carter Green, Mrs. G. Howland Chase, Mrs. Harry B. Slocum and Mrs. Merrill Breede.

Paintings Chosen For Corcoran Show

A jury, headed by C. Powell Minnigerode, director of the Corcoran Gallery of Art, yesterday selected 110 paintings and sculptures for the second exhibition by alumni of Corcoran Art School which opens Thursday.

Serving with Minnigerode were Miss Suzanne Mullett and Robert Miller, alumni; Mrs. Mathilde Leisenring and Kenneth Stubbs, faculty members, and C. Carroll Glover, jr., member of the gallery's board.

All works of art shown will be offered for sale, with the entire proceeds going to the artist.

Dr. Thompson to Attend

Dr. E. E. Thompson will represent the District Podiatry Society at the convention of the national Federation of Chiropody-Podiatry Examining Boards, opening in Louisville Monday.
